KEY TO ABANDON 100-MILLION BUDGET

Lawmakers Go Into Final
Political Crosswinds.

By The Associated Press.
The Georgia legislature, snagged on a tax conflict and ripped by political crosswinds, was confronted yesterday with an assertion that unless it solves the money puzzle before adjournment next Saturday, schools in approximately 100 counties must close.

Intensifying the quandary in which the general assembly found itself with just six more regular working days, the Georgia Education Association made a final appeal for easing of the school crisis. A statement was issued by President W. J. Andrews and Secretary R. L. Ramsey pointing out both houses by resolution had pledged to lend the schools a hand.

"Now that the general assembly is within one week of the closing date," the statement said, "and since to date no funds have been provided for the continued operation of the schools, and knowing that without additional funds schools in approximately 100 counties must close within the next two weeks, the state association is again calling to the attention of the legislature that the teachers and children of this state are depending upon it in this final week to find some way to continue this program."

"Dead Loss to State."
The statement continued that unless the situation is handled promptly not "only will the teachers go without the salaries which they have earned but the large army of school children who will have the school doors closed in their faces be forced another year to repeat this same work which is now only a little more than half done and the repetition of the work next year that will be necessary will be a dead loss to the state."

The legislature had other worries, most of them concerning money.

First, there was the $100,598,327 biennial budget bill that the house set up as a committee and then quickly tabled.

Representative W. H. Key, chairman of the house appropriations committee, said he did not plan even to try to call the measure back up in view of the death of the main revenue bills to finance it.

This will leave Georgia operating two more years on the current $96,000,000 biennial appropriations plan which has run into an anticipated $8,500,000 deficit this fiscal year.

Odds on Being Slain Greatest in Georgia

By JACK SPALDING.
Odds against your dying a violent death are shorter in Georgia than in any other state except Tennessee, the 1938 uniform crime report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation shows.

There were 26.7 cases of murder and non-negligent manslaughter reported to Georgia police last year for every 100,000 persons. There were 26.7 in Tennessee. At the other end of the list, not quite one murder per 100,000 was committed in the states of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and South Dakota.

Geographically, the east south central states of Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Mississippi led the nation with 22.1 murders per 100,000. The south Atlantic states of Georgia, Florida, North and South Carolina, Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Delaware were second with 15.5. New England, according to the table, is the safest part of the nation with 1.1 murders per 100,000.

There were 81 known murders in Atlanta last year, as compared to 75 in Birmingham; 47 in Dallas; 31 in Louisville, and 57 in Memphis, cities of comparative size.

The bulletin listed 11 killings in August, 10 in Savannah; 27 in Macon and 6 in Columbus. New York had only 272 murders, while Chicago counted 184. Cicero, the home of many of the old Chicago gangs, listed no murders at all.

Atlanta had only 265 less cases of burglary, breaking or entering than New York. Atlanta's total was 2,561. The estimated population of metropolitan Atlanta is 420,600. That of New York 6,930,446.

The bulletin reports that the amount of crime committed in a community is not chargeable to the police, but is rather a charge against the entire community. It gave as factors affecting the amount of crime: 1. The composition of the population with reference to age, sex and race. 2. The economic status and activities of the population. 3. Climate. 4. Educational, recreational and religious facilities. 5. The number of police employees per unit of population. 6. The standards governing appointments to the police force. 7. The policies of the prosecuting officials and the courts. 8. The attitude of the public toward law enforcement problems.

Atlanta also reported 462 robberies; 351 cases of aggravated assault; 535 cases of larceny involving more than $50; 4,124 cases of larceny under $50, and 1,209 cases of auto theft.

In the United States the bulletin listed 7,438 known murders, 421 less than 1937. The only crimes that showed increases over 1937 were burglary, up 1.5 per cent, and larceny, up 5.7 per cent. Man-

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey and his wife left by train today for Augusta, Ga., for a one-week vacation.

Representative W. H. Key, chairman of the house appropriations committee, said he did not plan even to try to call the measure back up in view of the death of the main revenue bills to finance it.

ATLANTA PLANTS SET NEW RECORD OF $152,704,389

1937 Figures Released in
U. S. Census of Manu-

159,496 WORKERS EMPLOYED IN STATE

Manufactured Products
Output in Georgia.

Atlanta manufactured goods valued at $152,704,389 in 1937, setting an all-time record and breaking the previous high established in 1929, according to figures released yesterday from the United States Census of Manufacturers, through the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

Ivan Allen, chairman of the bureau, pointed to the figures as convincing evidence of the industrial trend in Atlanta and its importance to Atlanta's growth and prosperity.

442 Atlanta Plants.

Atlanta's 442 plants employed 202,223 persons, paying them $18,331,930; expended $95,283,986 for raw materials, fuel, power, etc., and manufactured products valued at $152,704,389 during the same period, pushing the products to a new high as compared to the $136,947,488 previous record of 1929.

Atlanta and Fulton county operated 517 plants, having 27,142 wage earners; paid $24,079,590 in wages; spent $124,316,651 for materials, fuel, power, etc., and manufactured products valued at $195,714,695. A total of 2,875 plants operated in the state; employed 159,496 persons; expended $110,501,344 in wages; spent $439,145,132 for materials, fuel, power, etc., and manufactured products valued at $708,652,241. The statistics are based on the 1937 report, the last one issued.

The Atlanta plants added $57,420,403 to their values during the year as compared to $71,389,044 for the entire Fulton county, which also included the Atlanta group, and $269,507,109 for the entire state. The state figures included Atlanta and Fulton county additions.

Although figures of other leading industrial centers of the southeastern states for 1937 have not yet been completed and no comparison is yet available, Allen said that Atlanta's pre-eminent position as the distribution and communication center of this section of the country, will, in all likelihood, be maintained.

CZECHS SEEK END TO SLOVAK UNREST

New Cabinet Forms;
Nazi Intervention Feared;
Spanish Reds Beaten

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.
Czecho-Slovakia's central government and autonomous Slovakia strove yesterday to end quickly their family quarrel amidst reports of possible foreign intervention.

An entirely new Slovak cabinet under premiership of Karl Sidor was formed to eliminate influence of Slovak separatists whose growing clamor for independence was at the root of the trouble.

While this action was taken by Czech and Slovak negotiators in Prague, 8,000 persons attended a German party demonstration at Bratislava, Slovak capital, at which the main speaker attacked the Prague government.

The Bratislava meeting, called originally to celebrate the first anniversary of German annexation of Austria, was held in a tense atmosphere to the echo of bomb explosions in a vacant lot several blocks away. Several hundred men were given rifles at the German party headquarters as police watched idly.

Sporadic rifle fire in Bratislava was heard in Engerau, Germany, directly across the Danube from the Slovak city. It was reported Czech motorized forces were still moving into Slovakia.

The disturbing event in Czecho-Slovakia and the hurried efforts to ally them were accompanied by an apparent revival in Germany of the Nazis' interest in their push to the east.

The Czecho-Slovak crisis appeared to have hastened the decision of Germany to press her aims for domination of the Balkans.

Two Former Kings Among

Golden Tiara Bestowed.

VATICAN CITY, March 12.—(Sunday)—(P)—Thousands upon thousands of the faithful thronged St. Peter's square before dawn today for the coronation of Pope Pius XII, probably the most widely awaited investiture in Catholic history.

As the cold dawn broke over the ancient Sabine hills, thousands of others were streaming toward the basilica and the large, plaza before it.

They went on foot, bicycle, trams, buses, automobiles and horse-drawn carriages.

Late arrivals sought frantically for admission tickets to St. Peter's basilica, and police were ordered to begin barring automobiles from St. Peter's piazza long before the doors of the basilica were to open.

Millions at Radios.
In parts of the world where the sun will not yet have risen, many millions were expected to sit all night beside radios to hear the pontifical mass at 8:15 a. m. (the mass was heard in Atlanta at 1:15 a. m.), for the first time radio was hooked up to carry descriptions of the scene to listeners around the world.

Chill, damp weather caused some apprehension for the comfort of thousands who intend to stand outside the basilica. The weather forecast was "variable with manifestations of instability."

For the first time since strife with Italy in 1870 made the popes voluntary prisoners within the Vatican, the papal tiara with three golden crowns will be placed on the head of the new Pontiff out-of-doors. The 1929 latern accord ended the Popes' seclusion.

Hundreds of thousands will throng the great plaza below St. Peter's to see the coronation on the balcony of the basilica at about 1 p. m. (only Atlantans who sat by their radios until 6 a. m. heard the actual coronation.)

Missions from 40 countries came to represent their governments at the coronation of a sovereign who

Suitor Shoots Girl, Takes Her on Ride

High School Senior Begs for
Hurt.

PAULS VALLEY, Okla., March 11.—(UP)—From her hospital bed tonight pretty Carole Morrison told authorities that her sweetheart shot her three times, once in each breast and once in the side, because he was jealous of her affections.

Murray Williams, 22-year-old farm boy and freshman at Murray Agricultural College, was held in jail while authorities investigated the girl's strange story. She is 18 and a senior in high school.

She said all the trouble was caused by Williams' objection to her dating another boy for a picture show.

Yesterday Williams stopped at Carole's home and offered to drive her back to her afternoon classes at high school in his car. They quarreled.

Carole told County Attorney Sam Goodwin that Williams shot her the first time when she left his car on a country road and started to walk back to town. As she crumpled in the road begging for mercy, Williams shot her the second time, the girl said.

"I told him that I was hurt and pleaded with him to help me," Carole told Goodwin. "He told me to walk back to the car which was about 50 feet away."

"As I got back within a few feet of the car, he shot me again, this time in the left side."

"He told me that I wasn't hurt much."

"I was awful sick and scared. We got into the car and he made me put my head in his lap."

"I begged him for a drink, thinking he would take me home. We started driving around and drove for nearly an hour, I guess. I was unconscious part of the time."

Goodwin said that Williams drove the girl to his own home, summoned his mother and they put the girl to bed. Williams' parents summoned a physician and the girl was taken to a hospital.

Youth Sits on High Bridge

To Get Job—Is Offered 2

CLEVELAND, March 11.—(P)—Ray Stana, who sat for six hours on a lofty bridge girder "to attract the notice of some employers," received today two job offers and his release from jail.

One offer came from a dry cleaning concern. The National Youth Administration said it would give the 19-year-old Stana a part-time position at $25 a month.

He was released from jail after county psychiatrists examined him. Police withdrew a disorderly conduct charge which was placed against Stana after firemen removed him from the girder yesterday.

WASHINGTON, March 11. Chairman Jesse Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, announced late today the appointment of M. E. Everett and William J. Hobbs, of North Carolina, as manager and counsel, respectively, of the RFC agency in Georgia. The appointments will become effective March 20.

Mr. Everett, whose home is Dublin, takes the place vacated by the recent retirement of Scott Candler, of Decatur, who resigned after being elected DeKalb county commissioner, while Mr. Hobbs, formerly attached to the RFC headquarters in Washington, takes the position from which Edgar Dunlap, of Gainesville, was ousted during the Georgia senatorial campaign last summer. Hobbs has been serving as acting counsel for several months.

Senators Not Consulted.

Neither Senator Walter F. George nor Senator Richard B. Russell, of Georgia, is understood to have been consulted in the appointments. In the case of Mr. Everett his name is known to have been selected from a list presented by United States District Attorney Lawrence Camp, of Atlanta, New Deal-sponsored opponent of Senator George in the 1938 primary campaign; Jim Gillis, chairman of the state Democratic committee, and Governor E. D. Rivers, acting jointly.

Senator George had no comment to make tonight after being notified of the appointments, but in-

TRUST QUIZ TURNS TO FOOD, WHISKY

Committee Wants To Show Effect of Monopolies on Consumers.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(UP)—The joint monopoly inquiry tonight projected a series of investigations designed to reveal the effects of monopolistic practices upon American consumers.

The committee was prepared to scrutinize conditions in various segments of the food industry and others directly affecting retail purchasers.

The food studies will concentrate on the metropolitan New York city market and the Pacific coast food industry. The outline of the studies were presented by Willis J. Ballinger, economic adviser to the Federal Trade Commission.

Spectacle of Blooms To Attract Thousands to Cypress Gardens

Famed Beauty Spot Nearing Height of Splendor Near Charleston, South Carolina; Many Expected To Visit Scene Between Now and May 1.

CHARLESTON, S. C., March 11.—Within the coming week the flower-ers of far-famed Cypress Gardens, 24 miles north of this city on U. S. 52, will be approaching that period of bloom which each spring attracts thousands of visitors from near and far.

Unharmful by the two recent cold spells, due to their protected location in the depths of a great forest lake of moss-draped cypress trees, the bulbs, flowering shrubs and plants of this unusual water garden already are blooming generously. Countless thousands of yellow jonquils and paper-white narcissi combine with the coral, pink, salmon red and lavender of the early azaleas and other flowers to form a gorgeous spectacle.

Mirrored amazingly in the still black waters, the flowers and reflections are viewed either from miles of winding pathways along canal banks or from bright blue canoes and flat-bottomed boats paddled by uniformed guides. From now through April the gardens will present a splendid spectacle.

Although there are many who prefer to see the gardens somewhat earlier or later than at its spectacular peak of bloom period, the largest attendance usually is during the time that the azaleas are at their height. This year the indications are that the height of bloom for azaleas will be from March 20 to April 10. The gardens are closed to the public after May 1.

An innovation at Cypress Gardens this season, the result of numerous requests made by persons in easy driving distance of Charleston, is the establishment of a lunch and tea room for visitors located near the main entrance.

Leaders Hail Merchant Marine of Air

Far-Flung Commercial Flying System in U. S. Ready To Be Converted Into Adjunct to Defense

CHICAGO, March 11.—(AP)—Aviation leaders depicted the nation's far-flung commercial flying system today as "the merchant marine of the air," ready to be converted into a necessary adjunct to national defense.

New and swifter warplanes, fresh crops of military fliers to man them and more operating bases are the primary goals of American rearmament in the air. But of almost equal importance are the nation's civil airways and the small army of men who regularly fly them.

"The airlines serve the general headquarters air force as our merchant marine serves the navy," said Colonel Edgar S. Gorry, president of the Air Transport Association of America.

America's vast network of improved airways "is as necessary from the standpoint of air defense as the Panama Canal is from the standpoint of naval defense," said Croil Hunter, president of Northwest Airlines.

Composite Picture. Comment by these men and Major R. W. Schroeder, vice president of United Airlines, and Jack Frye, president of Transcontinental and Western Air, Inc., gave a composite picture of what commercial aviation could do for Uncle Sam in case of war. It looked like this:

A high speed transportation and communications system placed at government disposal, with more than 1,000 highly skilled pilots, many of whom had previous military experience; a large number of expert mechanics, ground crewmen, radio operators, dispatchers and technicians.

Two hundred airports and terminals usable as training or supply bases, with airline pilots as a nucleus of instructors for turning young civilians into military pilots. Air mail for important communications; air express for moving medical or military supplies; air movement of troops if necessary.

Adequate aids to air navigation necessary for movement of a large number of army planes across the country and protection of strategic points.

Fast Transportation. Fast transportation of officers, government officials, business and production experts from factory to factory and coast to coast in hours instead of days to speed production of war supplies.

Airplane manufacturers in position to turn out large quantities of war planes rapidly because of commercial aviation's demands.

Statistics from the Civil Aeronautics Authority mirror the magnitude of American commercial aviation as of January 1, 1939, as follows:

Operations—35,492 miles of domestic airways; 197,972 miles scheduled to be flown daily.

Airports—2,374, of which 719 were fully or partially lighted, and including 791 municipal, 433 commercial, 267 intermediate, 628 auxiliary, 26 navy, 60 army and 169 miscellaneous fields.

Pilots—22,983, including 1,159 airline transport; 6,834 commercial, 1,005 limited commercial, 10,676 private, 3,005 solo, 304 amateur and 875 women pilots.

Aircraft—11,159, including 10,000 certificated.

United States Senator James M. Mead, Democrat, New York, reintroduced in congress his bill to create an airline pilots reserve corps with each airline pilot required to take one month's training a year. Supporting that bill, President David L. Behrke, of the Air Line Pilots' Association, said: "This bill will almost double our force of air fighters at a surprisingly low cost to the government."

BOY PATROL TOLD OF PROPOSED TRIP

Visit to Fair, Meeting With Jack Dempsey, Ball Game on Program.

An entire day at the World's Fair, a boat trip around Manhattan island, shaking hands with Jack Dempsey, seeing the Yankees play at Yankee stadium, a trip to the seventy-first floor of the RCA building, and a trip to NBC's headquarters are among the thrills promised some 400 youngsters from in and around Atlanta who make a trip to New York city in May as members of school boy patrols.

Details of the trip were outlined to some 150 boys at a meeting at a downtown theater yesterday morning when representatives of the Atlanta Parent-Teacher Council, Mayor Hartsfield, and Captain Jack Malcom, of the Atlanta police department, announced plans for the boys' annual pilgrimage.

The party, expected to be some 400 strong, will leave Atlanta on Wednesday, May 16, and return late on Sunday, May 20. Mrs. Max N. Kessler, of the L. Key P. T. A., and chairman of a special committee to supervise the trip, will be in charge throughout the time the party is away. She will be assisted by one adult for each 25 boys.

No boy who is not a member of a patrol will be allowed to make the trip, but girls may go. The party will travel by special train. Both Mayor Hartsfield and Captain Malcom spoke to the boys about the trip, urging them to earn the money necessary—$30 for all expenses—rather than expect it to be given them.

PARACHUTES IN STORM. CANBY, Ore., March 11.—(UP) Captain H. A. Reynolds, United States army flier, parachuted from his spinning, storm-caught airplane today and landed safely in a tree. The single-motored army training plane crashed in a blinding snowstorm.

Latest addition to the "Gone With the Wind" cast is Carroll Nye, former radio editor of the Los Angeles Times, who is to play the role of Frank Kennedy, second husband of Scarlett O'Hara, in the film version of the famous novel. He is shown on the set with Marie Barde, who has a minor part.

2 Young Actors Found To Play Tarleton Twins

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., March 11.

(AP)—After scores of interviews and comparisons of photographs, two young actors resembling each other enough to play roles of the twins, Brent and Stuart Tarleton, in "Gone With the Wind" have been discovered and signed by Selznick International Pictures, the studio announced today.

The two are George Bessolo, 23, native of Ashland, Ky., who has been in California for 10 years, and Fred Crane, 20, from New Orleans.

Both have green eyes. Bessolo's hair is black, Crane's brown. Bessolo weighs 180 and is 6 feet, 1-2 inches tall. Crane weighs five pounds more and is half an inch less in height.

Neither have played in pictures before.

Bessolo worked three years with the Pasadena Community Players. He has been a band leader and singer.

Crane's only theater experience was amateur work with a Loyola University organization, the Loyola Theatians.

SAYS STATE COULD SAVE 2 MILLIONS

Representative Simmons Asks Economy.

BAINBRIDGE, Ga., March 11.—(AP)—Representative J. M. Simmons, of Decatur county, said today the payment of "political debts" has cost taxpayers millions of dollars and "this condition will continue until the people of Georgia realize we need a strictly business administration."

"We can save $2,000,000 with economy in the state departments," Simmons said. "There are a number of departments that could be abolished, and others reorganized with one-third less employees."

As additional sources of revenue, he reiterated suggestions for state liquor stores and an additional 1-cent tax on gasoline.

Simmons said he hoped to return to Atlanta early next week.

DEMOCRATIC VICTORY PREDICTED BY HEFLIN

COLUMBUS, Ga., March 11.—

(AP)—Former Senator Thomas J. Heflin, of LaFayette, Ala., believes the Democratic candidate for President will be victorious in the 1940 election.

Senator Heflin expressed the view here today while attending a meeting at which plans were made for sending a delegation to Washington March 21 to ask that a lock and dam be constructed on the Chattahoochee river 11 miles below Columbus.

LABOR AMENDMENT ON PLANES PLAYED

Manufacturers Believe It Means Hazard to Defense Program.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP) The National Manufacturers' Association said today that the labor contracts amendment to the air expansion bill gave "a hollow note to talk of business appeasement."

In a statement, the association also said it believed the amendment constituted a major hazard in the prosecution of the national defense program.

The amendment, backed by both the CIO and the AFL, was sponsored in the senate by Majority Leader Barkley, Democrat, Kentucky. It would prohibit award of any contract under the national defense program to a person found to be interfering with collective bargaining or other rights of his employees.

A committee of senators and representatives now is trying to adjust differences in the versions of the $358,000,000 air expansion measure passed by the two branches of congress and Senator Logan, Democrat, Kentucky, disclosed after a meeting of this committee yesterday that the principal issue was this amendment.

He also said Secretary Woodring has advised the committee that the War Department opposed the amendment, believing it might block needed airplane purchases.

STATE TEACHERS, FUNDS AT LOW EBB, TO CONVENE HERE

Rivers Will Address
Annual G.E.A. Meeting
Scheduled March 23-25;
Collins Asks Holiday.

Thousands of Georgia school teachers who have not been paid their full salaries because of a lack of state funds will convene in Atlanta March 23-25 at the annual meeting of the Georgia Education Association.

Their convention will begin less than a week after the close of the Georgia general assembly—which, with only six working days to go, has failed not only to provide for payment of teachers' salaries for March and April of this year, but also to provide money for the payment of increasing school costs for the next two years.

Rivers to Speak.
Dr. M. D. Collins, state school superintendent, yesterday urged school superintendents throughout the state to grant teachers holidays on March 24 so that as many as possible will be able to attend the convention here.

Educators have insisted that the general assembly find means of paying full salaries to the state's 21,000 teachers on a permanent basis—but the legislature thus far has turned down every tax measure which would raise sufficient money to pay the bill.

Governor Rivers, who pleaded with the legislature in three addresses to finance the program, is scheduled as a principal speaker at the first session of the meeting Thursday night, March 23.

Banquet Planned.
Dr. Ben Graham, superintendent of schools at Pittsburgh, Pa., also will deliver an address at the opening session, which will follow a banquet sponsored by the G. E. A. and the Georgia Association of School Superintendents.

The convention program, arranged by President W. J. Andrews, superintendent of the Stephens county schools, also calls for addresses by Dr. Allen A. Stockdale, of the National Manufacturers' Association; Dr. Joseph S. Kornfield, of New York city, author and former minister to Persia; Dr. W. R. McConnell, of Miami University, Oxford, Ohio, and Dr. D. Oberteuffer, of Ohio State University.

Various entertainments have been arranged.

UTILITIES BOARD TO DISCUSS RATES

Southeastern Group To Meet
ernors' Conference.

A meeting of the Southeastern Association of Railroad and Utilities Commissioners to discuss rail rates and proposed amendments to the federal motor carrier act has been called for Atlanta on March 20, one day prior to the gathering of the Southeastern Governors' Conference. Walter R. McDonald, association president and chairman of the Georgia Public Service Commission, announced yesterday.

The commissioners will meet in the Henry Grady hotel.

Motor vehicle commissioners are to be invited to discuss a uniform reciprocal agreement to apply among all the southeastern states.

"It is hoped that we can make some progress toward establishing a uniform system of truck rates and classifications throughout the south," said McDonald.

The Governors' Conference has been called by Governor Rivers, chairman. Plans for getting the Interstate Commerce Commission to establish lower freight rates on 13 commodities as recently recommended, will be discussed.

MRS. RALPH E. WAGER FUNERAL RITES TODAY

Funeral services for Mrs. Irma Rasmussen Wager, wife of Dr. Ralph E. Wager, professor of education at Emory University, who died Saturday in a private hospital, will be conducted at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the residence, 1345 Emory road, by the Rev. Nat. Long.

A native of New London, Wis., Mrs. Wager had made her home here since her husband transferred from the University of Chicago in 1929. She was an active member of the Glenn Memorial church.

Fund Increase Hinges on Relief Study

Permanent Substitute for WPA Urged; President Expected To Request More Monies This Week.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(P)—Influential legislators indicate today that the house might defer action on President Roosevelt's forthcoming request for additional relief funds until a permanent substitute for WPA is devised.

Representative Woodrum, Democrat, Virginia, leader of the economy drive which slashed $150,000,000 off the $875,000,000 that Mr. Roosevelt asked early in the session to finance relief activities until June 30, said the house appropriations committee would make a comprehensive study of the entire relief problem before granting any increase in WPA funds.

The President is expected to send a supplemental estimate on relief to congress early next week. Woodrum said he thought it probably would call for restoration of the $150,000,000.

Support for Woodrum's stand came immediately from Representative Taber, Republican, New York, ranking minority member of the committee.

"Situation Demoralizing." "We ought to have a permanent program studied," Taber declared. "I don't see any possibility of WPA working out intelligently the way it is going. I have reports from at least 25 different localities proving the present set-up is totally askew."

Woodrum already has introduced legislation to abolish the WPA and give the states a greater control over administration of relief funds. The measure would create an unemployment relief administration in place of the WPA and limit its funds to $1,120,000,000 for the year starting July 1. More than $2,100,000,000 has been allocated to WPA for the current year.

Would Reduce Personnel. Federal administrative personnel would be reduced from a force of about 37,000 to 6,500 and the plan would prohibit the use of relief funds for heavy construction.

Atlanta Will Say Fond Farewell To Salvation Army's Pugmire

COMMISSIONER PUGMIRE.

MRS. PUGMIRE.

Testimonial Dinner Will Be Given at First Baptist Church.

Lieutenant Commissioner Ernest I. Pugmire, commanding the southern territory of the Salvation Army for the past four years, will be honor guest at a farewell testimonial dinner at 7:45 o'clock Tuesday night in the auditorium of the First Baptist church.

Commander Pugmire is scheduled to leave Wednesday for Chicago, where he will take over as commander of the central states territory. His successor here as commander of the southern territory will be Lieutenant Commissioner William C. Arnold, of New York, who will arrive here Wednesday.

Mrs. Pugmire, also an officer in the Salvation Army, will accompany her husband to Chicago. Both will be guests of honor at an informal farewell luncheon at noon tomorrow at the Henry Grady hotel, and at an official army farewell ceremony Tuesday afternoon at the territorial headquarters here.

The citizens' advisory boards from 15 southern states and army officers from all over the south will be hosts to the banquet Tuesday night. Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Atlanta citizens' advisory board, will preside. Mayor Hartsfield and Robert H. Jones Jr. will be principal speakers.

The farewell luncheon tomorrow will be given by the Atlanta advisory board. Officers' council of territorial headquarters will be in charge of the official farewell. Governors of every state in the south and other prominent citizens and officials have written Commander Pugmire, expressing regret at his departure and praising his services to the south during his administration. Territorial headquarters announced here last night.

WHEELER LASHES AT REORGANIZATION

Charges Bill Would Cause Congress To Abdicate Its Powers.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(P)—Senator Wheeler, Democrat, Montana, said today that congress would be "abdicating its powers and turning them over to the executive branch" if it enacted the house-approved government reorganization bill.

Under this measure, the President can transfer and consolidate most independent agencies by executive order. If both houses of congress do not vote disapproval of an order within 60 days, it goes into effect automatically.

Wheeler, a leader of the successful fight against President Roosevelt's court reorganization bill in 1937, said he would press for adoption of his amendment to require congressional approval of executive orders before they could become effective.

Wheeler's amendment would make an order invalid unless congress voted approval within 20 days.

Urging correction of inefficiencies in governmental departments, Wheeler added that the most inefficient agencies are "these newly created bureaus that have been set up in a hurry with personnel picked in a hurry."

Rome Has Many Things

But No American Flag

ROME, March 11.—(P)—Rome was searched in vain today for two small American flags to decorate the automobile of United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy. Kennedy, envoy to Britain, is here as President Roosevelt's special representative at coronation of Pope Pius XII.

Several hours' search of shops and among American residents failed to produce a suitable flag.

Chimneys of Prosperity Trace Growth of Atlanta

The drawing presents a graphic picture of Atlanta's growth as an industrial center from the year 1899, when manufacturing was in its infancy with a total value of only $16,707,000, to the year 1937 when an all-time record was established, with products valued at $152,704,389, exceeding even the 1929 figure of $136,947,488. Values of products of Atlanta's industries for other years shown follows: 1919, $113,992,000; 1927, $115,830,250; 1931, $90,107,778; 1933, $64,822,748; 1935, $91,959,743. In 1937, the value of manufactured products in Atlanta was almost half the value of the entire agricultural crop of the state—a sharp contrast to the dip in industrial activities caused by the depression, when the low was reached with $64,822,748 in 1933.

reigns over the world's smallest state—the 109 acres of Vatican City—but over one of its greatest spiritual domains, the church of 330,000,000 Catholics.

Among them was Joseph P. Kennedy, United States ambassador to London, the first official representative of the United States at a papal coronation in 93 years. Britain was represented by her premier, Lord R. A. Butler.

Fifty princes and princesses of royal blood had seats within the vast basilica for the four-hour ceremony, one of the longest rituals of the church.

They included two former kings, Alfonso of Spain and Ferdinand of Bulgaria.

Crown Prince Umberto, of Italy, was designated as representative of his father, King Vittorio Emanuele, and Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister, represented his father-in-law, Premier Mussolini.

Thousands of disappointed applicants for tickets prepared to go to St. Peter's square before sunrise and wait many hours for a glimpse of the Holy Father as the papal crown is placed on him.

Pope Pius Saturday appointed Luigi Cardinal Maglione, former nuncio to Paris, as papal secretary of state.

For the position he had occupied until the college of cardinals elected him successor, March 2, to the late Pope Pius XI, the new pontiff chose an experienced diplomat whom he had known as a fellow-student for the priesthood.

Cardinal Maglione, 62, is just one year younger than Pope Pius XI. Both are Italian, both diplomats and both long experienced in European diplomatic affairs.

French Prelate Named. A French prelate, Pierre Cardinal Gerlier, archbishop of Lyon, was designated to officiate at the coronation.

Named as his assistants were two cardinal deacons, Nicholas Cardinal Canali, who was assigned to take the bishop's mitre from the Pope's head, and Camillus Cardinal Caccia Dominioni, whose honor it became to place the crown there.

Five of the 61 members of the sacred college of cardinals were prevented by illness from seeing the coronation of the Pope. The five, all suffering from influenza, were Massimo Cardinal Massimi, Vincenzo Cardinal La Ponsa, Domenico Cardinal Jorio, Luigi Cardinal Laviterno and Giovanni Battista Cardinal Naselli-Rocca.

Five United States bishops were assigned places in the procession and were privileged to kiss the Pope's slippered foot and white-robed knee.

VATICAN, NAZIS PLAN TALKS ON CONCORDAT

BERLIN, March 11.—(UP)—Nazi sources reported unofficially tonight that the Vatican was expected soon to open conversations with Germany regarding application of the concordat between the two states.

When and if the negotiations are initiated, it was said, they will be received in a very friendly manner in Berlin.

At the same time, it was recognized in Nazi circles that an effective agreement will probably require creation of an entirely new basis for relations between the Nazi state and the Catholic church.

The present concordat, which the late Pope Pius XI charged had not been enforced by Germany under the regime of Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, was concluded during the time Pope Pius XII was Vatican secretary of state. Recently the new Pope has been reported interested in improving relations with Germany and it was understood he talked with the German cardinals who participated in his election at the Vatican about the possibility of a better understanding.

Gets 24 Rabbits' Feet, But She's Still Out of Luck

CHICAGO, March 11.—(P)—Mrs. Anna Sirbu has 24 rabbits' feet, but she's still out of luck.

They were attached to what she thought were "baby seal skins" sold to her yesterday by a stranger at what he represented as a rock bottom bargain price of only $110.

A companion of the stranger who urged her to buy was to return and pay her $170 for them. He didn't, and the police are pretty certain he won't.

The rabbits' feet are worth $4.50.

U. S. ACCOUNTANTS PLAN AID TO SOUTH

Name Body To Advise Dixie Advantages.

The National Association of Cost Accountants, with headquarters here, has appointed a committee to study ways and means of keeping the other sections of the country informed on the economic status of the south, Grady Howell, of Atlanta, president, announced last night.

In appointing the committee, the association declared: "With the natural resources and advantages offered by the south, there is no doubt but that it can become the most prosperous section of the nation."

Three points were stressed to the committee, who were instructed to make them public. These were: First, the association is ready to assist anyone to compile figures on the south; second, to adopt a motto stressing advantages of the south for use on all southern business stationery; third, to work for an equalization of freight rates and other matters helpful to the south.

GEORGIANS MOST LIKELY TO BE SLAIN

Women Criminals.

Of the more than half a million fingerprint arrest records examined, women were represented by 6.8 per cent. The number of men arrested was larger than the number of women for all types of crimes except commercialized vice.

"However," the report states, "a comparison of the figures representing an average group of 1,000 men with those for an average group of 1,000 women indicates that there were more women than men charged with murder, assault, and the use of narcotic drugs. The same type of comparison also indicates a somewhat larger ratio of arrests of women than men for larceny, but in more violent types of crimes against property men predominate."

During the year there were more arrests made of 21-year-old persons than for any other single age group. There were also more arrests of 18-year-olds than 19-year-olds.

More than 34 per cent of all of 1938's offenses were committed by persons between the ages of 21 and 29; 24 per cent by the 30-39 age group, and 18.8 per cent by persons under 21. Persons under 21, however, accounted for better than 52 per cent of automobiles stolen during the year.

By Color, Nationality.

"Whites were represented by 411,879 of the records examined, and negroes by 120,863. The remaining nationalities were represented as follows: Indian, 2,851; Chinese, 837; Japanese, 238; Mexican, 16,028, and others, 2,080. Of each 100,000 negroes, 1,503 were arrested and fingerprinted during 1938," the bulletin continued, "whereas the corresponding figure for native whites was 571 and for foreign born whites 209."

"At the end of December, 1938, there were 9,783,887 fingerprint records and 11,134,113 index cards containing the names and aliases of individuals on file in the identification division of the FBI. Of each 100 fingerprint cards received during 1938, more than 58 were identified with those on file in the bureau. Fugitives numbering 7,741 were identified through fingerprint records during 1938, and interested law enforcement officers were immediately notified of their whereabouts. As of December 31, there were 10,684 police departments, peace officers and law enforcement agencies throughout the United States and foreign countries voluntarily contributing fingerprints to the FBI."

In the interests of public health, more than 5,000 persons employed at the New York World's Fair are being inoculated against smallpox.

ATLANTA PLANTS SET NEW RECORD

hood, be even more pronounced than it was on the basis of the 1935 releases in which comparisons were made.

Command Respect. "The fact that Atlanta has a large number of white collar workers, towering office buildings and is the mercantile center of the south, has diverted attention from the importance of the metropolis as a manufacturing center," Allen said. "These figures should command the respect of every citizen and should point conclusively to a great development which has and is taking place in Georgia with Atlanta and Fulton county as the focal point."

Allen issued the following comparative statement showing the value of products manufactured by leading southeastern cities for the year 1935:

Birmingham, within city limits, $55,853,026; entire county (Jefferson), $137,003,859.

Chattanooga, within city limits, $66,105,262; entire county (Hamilton), $73,928,127.

Jacksonville, within city limits, $35,440,058; entire county (Duval), $36,239,761.

Memphis, within city limits, $118,064,892; entire county (Shelby), $130,199,126.

Nashville, within city limits, $71,625,713; entire county (Davidson), $105,170,925.

New Orleans, within city limits, $92,478,500; entire county (Orleans), $92,577,768.

As the figures were released, Allen also pointed out that the state is well over the billion dollar mark each year in the value of its products.

Billions For 1937.

"Manufacturing produces in excess of $708,000,000; farm products are valued at $323,000,000 and the mineral output is more than $13,000,000, making a grand aggregate exceeding $1,044,000,000 for 1937," he added. "While Georgia is considered primarily an agricultural state, the figures show that its manufactured products are more than twice the value of its farms. This large industrial activity provides most of the tax money which supports our governmental institutions."

Products manufactured in Atlanta, valued at $152,704,389 for the year, were nearly half the value of the entire agricultural crop for the year.

LABOR PEACE HELD DEPENDENT ON F.D.R.

President's Role Is One of Keeping Public Opinion Focused on Talks.

NEW YORK, March 11.—(P)—Hope of peace in American labor's three-year civil war was pinned tonight on the personal influence of President Roosevelt.

As armistice conferences between representatives of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations progressed from formal to informal stages over the week end, neutral observers generally were agreed on one point:

The two embattled groups may be brought together if the President can manage to keep the pressure of public opinion centered on the peace efforts.

If that proves impossible—and it is likely to require skillful maneuvering—chances of an agreement are not held promising.

Public opinion is important because both sides in the labor conflict admit that the rank and file of the unions, as well as most of business and industry, urgently want peace.

Against that desire stands the fact that no plan yet advanced to restore harmony has offered a solution for the most ticklish problem involved in the whole situation—the problem of personalities. Time was when William Green, president of the A. F. of L., and John L. Lewis, head of the C. I. O., were friends. Three years of intestine battling has made them vituperative antagonists. Neither would be willing to accept the other as chief of a united labor movement, and no satisfactory third party has been suggested for the job.

State Department Backs Warship Plan

Heartily Indorses Proposal To Open U. S. Naval Yards for South American Construction.

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(AP)—A proposal that the United States build warships in navy yards for Brazil and other Latin-American nations—if necessary underbidding Europe—received the indorsement of the State Department today, giving rise to the general assumption that it was an integral part of administration efforts to tighten hemisphere defenses.

Acting Secretary Sumner Welles, of the State Department, was heartily in favor of the general objectives of the proposal, put forward by Chairman Pittman, Democrat, Nevada, of the senate foreign relations committee.

While the navy was non-committal, informed diplomatic quarters understood naval officials had been consulted.

Pittman announced he would offer next week a measure to authorize all Latin-American nations to build warships in United States navy yards "at the lowest competitive prices."

Brazil, Argentina and some other South American governments have had warcraft built in Italy, Germany and England, where labor and material costs in commercial shipyards are lower than in this country.

In addition to the ship-building proposal, there were informed reports that the administration might conclude with other South American countries economic understandings similar to that reached this week with Brazil.

Beta Club Beauties Overthrow Male Government

In a two-party election (boys vs. girls) of the Georgia Beta Clubs at the Ansley last night, the girls, outnumbering the boys 3 to 1, put into office Marjorie Rogers, of Thomaston; Anita Stephens, of Forsyth; and Josephine Towler, of Monroe. Marjorie, on the left, was elected secretary; Anita, seated, president; and Josephine, right, vice president.

LIQUOR SALE LOSES IN HAPEVILLE VOTE

Wet Proposal Beaten Overwhelmingly in Light Polling.

Hapeville citizens yesterday voted overwhelmingly against sale of liquor within the community's limits, casting 416 ballots against and 87 for in the referendum election. Polling was lighter than anticipated, a total of 508 ballots being cast of 800 qualified voters. Division of the community into four wards for election of city officials was favored in the referendum, by a vote of 295 for and 201 against.

Another proposed change, whereby voters might qualify for city elections independently of county registration, was defeated. The vote was 340 against and 162 for.

Residents filed into the polling place in the city auditorium from 7 o'clock in the morning until 7 o'clock last night.

500 SAFE IN SHIP CRASH.
NEW YORK, March 11.—(UP)—Five hundred persons aboard the Staten Island ferryboat Gold Star Mother escaped injury tonight when the craft was rammed by the Gulf Refining Company tanker Neederne in New York harbor during a heavy snowstorm.

Beauties Stampede Beta Election, 'Ousting' All Boys as Officers

Girls Lead, 3 to 1, in Memberships of Scholastic Honor Societies in Convention Here; Boys Take It With a Grin.

By ROBERT BURKHARDT.
Georgia, long noted for the beauty of her daughters, is soon to become famous for their brains! This was a conclusion that more than 150 of the state's most intelligent high school boys were forced to reach last night.

The occasion was the closing session of the state-wide convention of Georgia Beta Clubs, scholastic honor societies. Membership to the clubs is based strictly upon scholastic record. Only the most intelligent students are admitted.

Last night, when voting began for new officers for the coming year, the girls were found to outnumber the boys 3 to 1!

As a result the girls last night dominated the convention. They elected three girls to succeed the present three masculine officers.

And then, adding insult to injury, they gave the annual achievement loving cup to the Beta Club of Mary Persons High school, of Forsyth—which was accepted by Alice Stephens, president.

And the 150-odd boys present could only sit back and look glum. A few, of course, inspired by the 450 pretty and intelligent young ladies present, managed to smile occasionally.

The three retiring officers, Thornton Savage, of Tech High, president; Bud Rineason, of Athens, vice president; and Grady Black, of Valdosta, secretary, took it like the men they were—with a grin.

But from their private comments they revealed they knew the gleam in the eyes of their pretty successors—Anita Stephens, of Forsyth; Josephine Towler, of Monroe; and Marjorie Rogers, of Thomaston—was a definite gleam of triumph.

And then just to prove that they really dominated the situation, the girl delegates elected Miss Amy Dodd, of Georgia Evening College here, to the position of chairman pro tem. of the proposed alumni association. Miss Dodd is to confer with national officers in an effort to establish alumni chapters of the Beta clubs.

All assembled heard the sober reminder of Dr. Paul Cousins, president of Shorter College: "Your danger is that you may be satisfied with mediocrity. Remember, education is, after all, self-education, and character is not a gift but an achievement."

Dr. Cousins made the principal address at the closing banquet last night. At the banquet Professor Mark A. Smith handled the duties of toastmaster—cheering the boys, and chiding the girls.

In the complete reversal of form last night, the boys had the last word, for consolation. At the ball which followed the boys still found themselves outnumbered, 3 to 1, which meant that each boy had his choice of at least three of his erstwhile political opponents.

Write—Don't Telegraph, When Home Catches on Fire

HARRISON, N. J., March 11.—(AP)—When Mrs. William Snow needed the fire department, she sent in an alarm by letter.

Her 8-year-old daughter entered fire headquarters, told the captain "my mother sent this to you," and handed him this note:

"The legs on the back of my stove in kitchen fell off and the stove tipped over. The place is filled with smoke and gas and I have an infant and am afraid there might be a fire. My canary has dropped in its cage. Would you please come up and put out the fire in the stove for me."

With the child in the front seat, the truck raced to the Snow home. There was no damage.

GOVERNOR PRAISES NEW RFC LEADERS

Governor Rivers had this to say last night about the Everett and Hobbs appointments as RFC leaders in Georgia: "Those are excellent appointments. I believe both men will make good and I shall do all in my power to help them. I am willing to co-operate with the federal government to the extent of my ability in helping Mr. Everett and Mr. Hobbs to accomplish what is expected of them."

United States Attorney Lawrence Camp and Democratic Chairman Jim Gillis merely commented: "Excellent appointments."

indicated he might have something to say on the floor of the upper chamber later. Senator Russell was out of town and unavailable.

Neither of the appointments is subject to senatorial confirmation.

No Comment From RFC.

The two appointments are the first of a major patronage character that have been made by the administration in Georgia since the senatorial campaign and consequently will be viewed with much political interest. They indicate a disposition on the part of the administration to deal with the Rivers-Camp-Gillis group in state patronage matters rather than the past custom of consulting the two senators almost exclusively.

RFC officials in making the announcement had no comment.

From time to time several names have been suggested to the RFC for the two jobs, both of which have been pending for some weeks. News that they were finally to be filled therefore came as somewhat of a surprise to members of the Georgia delegation.

Mr. Dunlap, former head of the state Legion in Georgia, was ousted from the RFC post last summer after he refused to cease his campaign activities in behalf of Senator George. Mr. Candler, who also was identified as a George supporter, was reported to be slated for removal at the time he resigned to become a candidate for county commissioner.

EVERETT DIRECTED FEDERAL LAND BANK

Everett for 12 years was clerk of the court in Candler county. For the past seven years he has been head of the Federal Land Bank in Laurens county. He also was head of the Production Credit Association. So excellent was his work in this department, the directors some time ago honored him with a trip to Washington. He is an accomplished official and possesses ample training efficiently to carry out the RFC position.

Tidbits of British Humor; Neville's Umbrella in Candy

LONDON, March 11.—(AP)—Britons can now eat Prime Minister Chamberlain's "appeasement" umbrella.

London stores are displaying miniature brown and black candy umbrellas with this slogan: "You must enjoy a piece of Chamberlain rock! Umbrella fuhra tanner."

This specimen of British humor involves both punning and slang. The "muss enjoy" refers to Premier Mussolini. Then comes a play on the words "peace" and "piece." "Rock" refers to rock candy. "Fuhra" is a play on Fuehrer Hitler. "Tanner" is a sixpence, 12 cents.

after a brief period of indecision. To Czechoslovakia's east, speculation arose in Moscow of a possible burying of the hatchet between Germany and Soviet Russia in the wake of Joseph Stalin's condemnation of what he said were efforts to embroil the two nations in war.

The Soviet chieftain said Russia did not intend to let herself be drawn into a conflict to pull other nations' chestnuts out of the fire. This and his suggestion that Britain and France used Czechoslovakia as bait to lure Adolf Hitler toward the Ukraine were interpreted in some Moscow quarters as a direct bid for truer Russian-German relations.

Communists Beaten.

Republican Spain's government drove Rebel Communists from their headquarters in the heart of Madrid and fought a sharp artillery battle with Spanish Nationalists at the edge of the city.

The Republican government felt the fury of the Nationalist guns just as it reported "unconditional surrender" of Communists who rebelled against its program of a "worthy peace" with Nationalist Generalissimo Franco.

An agreement with Nationalist Spain gave France at least a partial outlet for her 440,000 Spanish refugees but the government was presented a new refugee problem by thousands of Jews seeking to leave Italy.

Burgos, Spanish Nationalist capital, agreed to admit immediately between 6,000 and 7,000 former Republican soldiers who fled to France with the fall of Catalonia and have since chosen to return to Nationalist territory.

French gendarmes and mobile guards meanwhile were strengthened on the Italian frontier prior to the midnight deadline for Jews to leave Italy.

Jews who entered Italy since 1919 were affected by the Fascist order. French officials estimated 5,000 of them waited on the Italian side of the Alps for a chance to get into France. Several thousand were believed already to have crossed by way of smugglers' trails in the Alps.

Palestine Talks.

In Rome, it was estimated a total of 6,000 Jews were affected by the expulsion order. Diplomatic circles believed, however, additional days of grace would be granted those unable to arrange residence abroad.

In London, new talks between British officials and Jewish delegates left the Palestine peace conference still deadlocked over Britain's plan to make the Holy Land an independent Arab state.

The talks, started unexpectedly Friday at the request of Colonial Secretary Malcolm MacDonald, were to be continued Sunday, raising hopes of a last-minute compromise.

All classes of Arabs and Jews in Palestine felt that the coming week probably would bring a showdown in the five-week-old London negotiations.

In Warsaw, Foreign Minister Josef Beck revealed in broad outline the colonial aims of Poland and indicated that Rumania supports the demand of Hungary and Poland for a common frontier at the expense of Czechoslovakia.

Beck referred to the unsuccessful effort of Poland and Hungary to annex Carpatho-Ukraine, one of the states of the Czechoslovak republic, to Hungary after the dismemberment of the republic at the Munich peace conference.

"Rumania is now of the same opinion, I am convinced," he said, mentioning the fact that the Rumanian foreign minister conferred with Polish government leaders last week.

BEN HUIET CALLS UPON ASSEMBLY TO SAVE POWERS

Charges 'Trickery and Political Maneuvering' to 'Ousted' Directors, Who Continue at Posts.

An appeal to the house of representatives to kill the senate-approved amendment which would virtually move the State Labor Department out from under him came yesterday from Labor Commissioner Ben T. Huie, who asserted that federal funds have not been endangered by the controversy raging around his head.

The commissioner, a former Atlanta alderman who was elected to the state post last fall, "raved back" and declared that L. P. James, director of the unemployment compensation division, and M. A. O'Connor, director of the Georgia employment service—the two men Huie discharged Friday, "are fired and they are going to stay fired."

On the other hand, James and O'Connor appeared at their offices yesterday and apparently intend to remain on duty until Governor Rivers has something to say on the matter.

Huie notified the Governor yesterday afternoon officially that he had "terminated the services" of the two men and asked the Governor for suggestions as to who to appoint in their places. Downing Murgrove, executive secretary to Rivers, said the Governor will not consider the matter until tomorrow at the earliest.

Huie asserted he filed charges against the two directors when he discharged them. He alleged they resorted to "trickery and political maneuvering" in the senate passage of an amendment to an innocent-appearing bill removing the unemployment compensation division and the Georgia employment service from the State Labor Department.

The bill with the amendment comes back to the house of representatives tomorrow or Tuesday for consideration. Huie said he hoped that the representatives will kill the amendment which would strip him of practically all his power.

At the same time, the commissioner announced he does not contemplate discharging any others in

Grandfather of 25 Takes Bride at 88

ATHENS, Tenn., March 11.—(UP)—John Key, 88-year-old resident of near-by Riceville, tonight prepared a home for his new bride, the former Mrs. Lulu Lewis, 64.

Key met his bride on a visit to Birmingham, Ala. "It was love at first sight," he said as he returned home to spread the news among his six married children, 25 grandchildren and several great-grandchildren.

The bride has three married daughters and 10 grandchildren. Key said his wife would join him in Riceville next week.

The department and said that he intends to operate it in conformity with all federal rules and regulations.

Federal officials assured him yesterday, he said, that there is no danger of the government withdrawing the funds it contributes to the unemployment compensation and employment services of the state.

"They regard this as a purely local fight," he asserted.

In the meantime, Huie issued the following statement to the employees of the department throughout the state: "Do a good job, give the people an honest day's work, at all times bearing in mind that the job belongs to the people of Georgia and we are their servants here to work together for the betterment of all the people of our state; by doing this, none of us need fear losing our jobs."

The labor commissioner has been beset with troubles since taking office. He was forced to dismiss a score of persons he appointed because federal officials asserted they had not been properly selected from the examination lists. Huie said all his appointments had been made according to the way they were certified to him.

GEORGIANS TO PRESS FOR RIVER PROJECT

COLUMBUS, Ga., March 11.—(P)—Representatives of groups seeking development of the Chattahoochee river below this city as a part of the inland waterway system voted today to send a delegation to Washington March 21 to ask the board of army engineers for immediate authorization of the construction of a lock and dam on the river 11 miles below Columbus in order to secure an appropriation for the work at this session of congress.

Construction of the lock and dam to assure a six-foot channel in the Chattahoochee to Columbus the year round, recently was recommended by the district engineer. The project, if finally authorized, would cost approximately $2,000,000.

U. S. MARINES OUST ARMED JAPANESE

Americans Order Snoopers To Get Out of Shanghai Area—They Get.

SHANGHAI, March 11.—(UP)—Tension between Japanese and foreign officials in China increased tonight after a brief altercation between United States marine and Japanese military police.

Officially, it was said that nothing was known of the incident or that there was no comment, but unofficially it was disclosed that the incident occurred in the United States defense sector of the International Settlement, where Japanese have charged Chinese terrorists were operating. Japanese recently have demanded drastic action by International Settlement authorities to suppress the terrorists who have been blamed for several score assassinations in which Japanese or pro-Japanese Chinese lost their lives.

It was learned that the altercation took place in connection with Japanese attempts to search houses in the settlement while looking for Chinese terrorists.

Municipal police and detectives had gone to a home in the American defense sector to investigate and discovered four Japanese military policemen in mufti guarding the house.

The detectives immediately telephoned the United States marine headquarters and two officers and 20 men were dispatched on a truck. The marine officers ordered the Japanese, who had no legal right in the area, to leave the American sector and they departed soon afterwards.

Deadline Nears For Income Taxes Collector Warns

Next Wednesday, March 15, is the deadline for filing 1938 income tax returns, Marion Allen, Georgia collector of internal revenue, warned yesterday.

Allen said that returns had been pouring into his office at the rate of more than 2,000 a day for the last several days, the heaviest influx on record.

Beginning tomorrow, and continuing through Wednesday, the internal revenue office here and its zone offices through the state will remain open an additional hour, until 5 o'clock in the afternoon, in order to handle the expected last minute rush. The offices open at 8:30 o'clock in the morning.

Zone offices are located in Savannah, Augusta, Macon, Columbus, Rome and Valdosta.

Stars Will Settle Boundary Disputes

State-Wide Geodetic Survey Completed by WPA; 13,000 Monuments With Discs Form Network.

The ultimate relationship of the east boundary of any Georgia county to the north star may be a matter of complete unimportance and indifference today, but it may be acceptable court evidence tomorrow.

By virtue of the state-wide geodetic control network, surveyed and just completed by the Works Progress Administration, Georgia's methods of establishing land boundaries and describing property may be revolutionized.

Gone will be the references to picturesque but unreliable centers of creek beds, piles of stone, trees, fence corners and other movable markers. In their stead will be found X and P plus numerals, forever anchoring land lines, boundaries and intersections by the immutable law of mathematics.

13,000 Markers.

In Georgia today, there are approximately 13,000 survey monuments marked with bronze discs, showing their locations and elevations. They form a basic network or control system for determining true positions on any type of land survey or engineering project. These discs are placed every mile or so along highways and railroads, and at strategic points in cities and towns. The distances between them have been established with a precision which takes into consideration even the curvature of the earth, and their relation to each other and the fixed stars.

Adopted by Road Board.

The State Highway Board has already adopted the system for the division of highway planning in its complete mapping of the state. The maps show all public roads, buildings, industries, airports, recreation areas, churches, schools, power lines, government reservations and military districts. Appreciating the accuracy of the survey, the Highway Board has published, with WPA co-operation, an 1,100-page volume, full of maps and geodetic data as an official report and directory. The volume will be used in connection with the county maps now being prepared by the board, and will be available to engineers and others at a nominal cost.

Georgia is the first state in the Union to have a complete system of horizontal and vertical control nets. Preparation took approximately five years.

Frederick H. McDonald, the representative of the survey in the state, was described by Bowie as

From now on, boundary disputes in Georgia will be settled by scientific measurement, not from the middle of the nearest shifting creek bed but from a control network, based on objects as remote and immutable as fixed stars. Miss Gay B. Shepperson, center, state WPA administrator, receives the first copy of the complete report on the Geodetic survey of Georgia from Frederick H. McDonald, right, project director, and O. T. Ray, left, director of the division of highway planning, State Highway Department.

"a far-sighted consulting engineer and citizen who felt the welfare of Georgia demanded the completion of the survey as a state relief project. He was continued in charge of the work by Miss Gay B. Shepperson, CWA-WPA administrator. The results of the Georgia geodetic control surveys are a monument to her career as a public official."

Bowie also commended the work of W. L. Miller and Oliver T. Ray, who in 1937 had the control system adopted by the state highway board, and helped make possible the publication of the data. Others he congratulated for the work of Robert L. MacDougall, former assistant WPA administrator; Gilbert H. Boggs Jr., assistant director of professional and service projects of the WPA, and Georgia Tech, which also sponsored the project.

Director Ray in his introduction to the volume pointed out that the work, as it was done, cost approximately $700,000, and that under commercial conditions it would have cost more than $2,000,000. Roughly 85 per cent of the cost went for wages and salaries of more than 1,000 men with engineering qualifications who were given work intermittently for five years.

Miss Shepperson said she regarded the work as something fundamental to the economic and social advancement of Georgia and felt it would serve every person in the state as well as the state, county and municipal units of government.

WARN LEGISLATURE OF SCHOOL CRISIS

year as a result of failure of revenues to come up to expectation. Then, there was the house-approved bill to tax chain stores on a sliding scale from $10 to $750, a bill which now is in the hands of a senate subcommittee.

A reported administration maneuver to tack a 2 per cent sales tax rider on this measure split the two houses wide open.

President John Spivey, Floor Leader Adie N. Darden and Finance Committee Chairman Wallace Harrell, of the senate, issued a joint statement yesterday asserting that in view of unfavorable reaction from the house, the fact the house has sole authority to originate revenue measures and that senate amendment of the chain store tax measure to carry a general levy was of "doubtful constitutionality," they felt "from a canvass of members of the senate that there will be no effort to amend the chain store tax to carry a general revenue provision."

Governor Rivers, meanwhile, sent to his department heads a letter asserting that "in view of the failure of the legislature to provide sufficient revenue to operate essential governmental agencies, it is obvious to you that it will be necessary for the budget commission to cut the operation of your department to the core."

He asked that budgets for the next quarter be submitted promptly "so that these cuts can be made sufficiently in advance of the quarter to enable you to adjust your personnel and salary schedules in accordance therewith by

Noble, Atlanta Sculptor, To Carve As He Lectures at High Museum

By ST. JOHN BARNWELL.

If you want to know how a statue is carved listen to Dr. George Noble, prominent Atlanta sculptor, this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the High Museum of Art. As he reveals the process, Dr. Noble will demonstrate by carving. There is no admission charged for this event, presented by the Atlanta Art Association in their hobby talk series.

"The Art of Ancient Egypt" will be the subject of the lecture at 8:30 o'clock Monday, by Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson, progressive artist and lecturer. Illustrating the Egyptian art with 50 slides, Dr. Hutchinson will show the difference between progressive drawings and those of Egypt's past glory, some of whose baselines are surprisingly similar.

The rare exhibition of Chinese art will continue through March 20. This collection of over 50 items has been lent by Mrs. Felix Welton, of Soochow, China, and Decatur, Ga., and is causing unusual interest.

The talent of Atlantans is on display in the auditorium gallery through March 15. It is the joint show of the Studio Club and the Atlanta Artist Guild. Outstanding in quality, the subjects vary from decorative flowers, portraits, still life and landscapes to murals and a bronze plaque. Atlanta has been well interpreted by these local artists who show ability and careful study.

The local exhibitors are Robert S. Rogers, Ben E. Shute, Frank Mack, Maurice Seigler, Marjorie Conant Bush-Brown, Julian Harris, Claude J. Herndon and H. C. Mitchell. Other artists include Virginia Halre, Kitty Butler, E. Paxton Oliver, George Ramey, Katherine Balfour, Harry Ludwig Rossell, Martha J. Gramling, Rose Cohn, Emerine Jackson, Dorothy Perkins Vismor, Ted Bowman, Jenny C. Mohan, Mary F. Passalunghi and Mesdames E. C. Shanks, Richard W. Smith, A. F. Drew and Mary E. Willingham. H. C. Sheffield, Joseph Lee Edwards, James E. Routh III and Walter C. Hill are well represented.

The beginning of the quarter"

April 1.

Legislative leaders were frankly pessimistic that much could now be done to ameliorate the financial pinch.

If all departments were forced to pool their money, and then share alike, it was asserted, the deficit of $8,500,000 could be applied to the entire budget of around $48,000,000 instead of to the $21,000,000 general fund only. This would place all departments on an approximate 82 per cent basis. The schools, health and welfare departments are put on the appropriated groups operating at 55 per cent at present.

The ways and means committee this week squelched a move by Speaker Harris to make the reduction clause under which appropriated departments are put on a pro rata basis when income falls short of expectations apply also to the departments on allocations. This bill, reported unfavorably, would have had the effect of reducing allocations along with appropriations.

Reported favorably by committee and ready for action by the house was a bill by Representative Allen Chappell, of Sumter county, to authorize appointment of a five-man joint committee of three representatives and two senators with power to investigate state agencies anywhere in Georgia, summon witnesses, records and accounts and act on economy measures if it saw fit.

The committee members would be elected by the house and senate. They would report to the next legislative session but meanwhile could enforce economy recommendations by suspension of any department head or employee "for cause after evidence under oath has been submitted to justify such suspension."

The economy committee would get $7 per day of actual work.

The present economy committee authorized by the house at the start of the session has recommended savings of $2,355,125 annually. Its chairman, Representative Wilmer Lanier, of Richmond, asserted its work "is just well begun" and that it would remain on the job until forced to quit by adjournment next Saturday.

Along this general line, the house has up for consideration tomorrow a bill which would call for 10 per cent slashes in the salaries of state employees making between $110 and $200 monthly and 15 per cent cuts in salaries over $200. Its authors estimate it would save the state $1,000,000 a year.

A Swedish archaeologist has dated a Swedish fortress as having been built in the fifth century, by comparing timber in the building with tree-ring records from America's sequoia trees.

When Carlsbad Caverns became a national park in 1923, it consisted of 700 acres. Today the park embraces many more explored and unexplored caves, and its surface area is 49,446 acres.

FOREIGN JEWS TOLD TO GET OUT OF ITALY

Rome Orders Them To Leave Country by Midnight Tonight.

ROME, March 11.—(UP)—The Fascist government tonight firmly reminded more than 2,000 foreign Jews that they must leave the country by midnight Sunday and that no extensions of the departure deadline were expected.

Government officials said that the Fascist grand council ruling of last October 6, ordering foreign Jews, including many who came here seeking a new motherland, to leave Italy and Italian possessions "must be held true."

The orders involved all foreign Jews under 65 years of age who entered Italy after 1919 even if they have since become Italian citizens. In addition, the law forbade them to migrate to Italy's overseas possessions except for the East African empire including Ethiopia.

MANY JEWS WANDER IN ALPINE SNOWS

MONTE CARLO, March 11.—(UP)—Many Jews were reported wandering in deep snow in the Alpine passes tonight on the eve of the date set for foreign Jews to get out of Italy.

Two hundred already have been permitted to cross the French frontier into Menton but others, said to be suffering from exposure and hunger, were reported seeking entry into France at various border points.

The refugees arriving in Monte Carlo said they had spent several nights in the mountains.

PRESIDENCY TALK AMUSES FARLEY

Says 'Wait Until Roosevelt Speaks.'

LOS ANGELES, March 11.—(UP)—Postmaster General James A. Farley came here today to dedicate a post office building and reporters asked him if he would run for the presidential nomination next year.

"Any person who gives any indication of what he will do in 1940 before the President has spoken should have his head examined," said Farley.

The reporters asked about a third term for Roosevelt, and Farley said it would be "presumptuous" for him to comment.

MACHINE LEADERSHIP GIVEN UP BY HINES

NEW YORK, March 11.—(P)—After 26 years of undisputed sovereignty over the 11th assembly district Democratic machine, James J. Hines relinquished active leadership today, although he still retained his Tammany title.

His loyal followers last night clamorously refused to accept his resignation, despite his conviction of policy racketeering, but they designated Bernard F. Plunkett, long an associate of Hines, to assume the actual duties of the leadership.

HULL IN FLORIDA

DELAND, Fla., March 11.—(P)—Secretary of State Cordell Hull was vacationing here today. "Mr. Hull has had a hard winter and he's down here for a complete rest," said T. C. Brooks, manager of Hull's hotel, relaying the secretary's refusal of an interview.

Need of More Branch Laboratories In Georgia Is Cited by Health Chief

There Are 30 Kinds of Pneumonia and 'Lab' Work Is Needed To Find Right Serum, But Speed Is Absolutely Essential.

Declaring that "the operation of every phase of public health work either local or state-wide, is dependent upon competent and adequate laboratory service," Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the state Department of Public Health, said Georgia needs more branch laboratories.

"It is by laboratory tests that the diseases of greatest public health importance, such as tuberculosis, malaria, diphtheria, typhoid, hookworm, syphilis, gonorrhea, rabies, dysentery, typhus fever and pneumonia, are accurately identified and located," the health director said.

He cited further that it is also in the laboratory that such important products as typhoid fever vaccine and virus for the prevention of rabies are manufactured and distributed free to the public.

"More branch laboratories are needed. There are large areas where additional laboratory service is required locally, the greatest needs existing in east and west central Georgia, and ultimate branches should be established in northeast and northwest Georgia," he declared.

A special laboratory test for "typing" pneumonia is one of the most important phases of the work of the state laboratories, he pointed out. "Pneumonia brought death to 3,000 Georgians in 1937, and while its prevention is exceedingly difficult, much can be done to lessen its fatality. A highly effective serum is now available, but this serum is expensive, the average cost per complete treatment being now about $30."

He explained that there are 30 varieties of the pneumonia germ, a special serum being required for each. Before the specific serum can be selected, the exact type must be determined in each case, and this requires a special laboratory test.

Speed Is Essential.

"To get results, the serum must be given early, hence the test must be done quickly. Therefore, pneumonia typing stations should be established throughout the state. The three state laboratories already are doing this work, but they are too widely scattered.

Hospital clinic technicians should be trained and equipped to type pneumonia locally," the health director said.

Tests for syphilis is also an important feature and a heavy burden of the state laboratories, he stated. "State money is needed for increased laboratory diagnostic service for this disease, there being approximately 300,000 Georgians having syphilis, and an average of 20,000 new cases occurring annually.

TRIPLE TRAGEDY.

KANSAS CITY, Kan., March 11.—(UP)—Mrs. Mary Lindberg, 72, her son, Albert, 42, and her daughter, Miss Hilda Lindberg, 35, were found shot to death in their home here tonight. Police said a revolver was in the son's hand and that he apparently killed the women and then himself.

CHICAGO, March 11.—Eddie Cantor and Dr. George Gallup will be the headliners when the National Safety Council gives its annual award dinner this year.

The dinner, which climaxes the year-long National Traffic Safety Contest conducted by the council in 1,163 cities and 47 states, will be held in the Mayflower hotel in Washington, D. C., Thursday, April 13.

Cantor, long known for his interest in safety and other humanitarian projects, will broadcast a safety message—dedicated to the children of the nation—from Hollywood at 8:45 o'clock, central time, over the coast-to-coast network of the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Dr. Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion, will be the speaker of the evening at the dinner and then, from the CBS studios in Washington, will participate with Cantor in the nation-wide broadcast. His subject will be "What the People Think About Safety."

Awards will be made by the National Safety Council at the dinner to four states and six cities which finish first in the various divisions of the contest. Of these, one state and one city will be given national grand awards for the best safety records nationally in 1938.

Attending the dinner will be governors of the winning states, mayors of the winning cities, United States senators and representatives, ambassadors, public officials, safety leaders, newspaper publishers and business and professional leaders.

Judges of the contest are Thomas H. MacDonald, chief of the United States Bureau of Public Roads; Paul G. Hoffman, president of the Automotive Safety Foundation, and D. D. Fennell, president of the National Safety Council.

AN AMAZING THING has happened to LaSalle during the past seven years. The car has been made at least twice as good—and the price has been reduced more than one half! It is one of the greatest value triumphs the automotive industry has seen. In fact, it is such an amazing thing that the general public has not yet grasped its full significance. This is especially true with regard to price. Thousands of people still believe it takes hundreds of dollars more to buy a LaSalle than it actually does. Don't buy a car without driving LaSalle—and without learning, for yourself, of its unrivalled performance and comfort. Do that—and you'll surely get a LaSalle!

Are Sought by White
Plague Foes.

Pointing out that more than 2,300 persons from Fulton and DeKalb counties already have been served by the association this year, the Atlanta Tuberculosis Association yesterday urged those who have not yet made their returns for Christmas seals to do so as soon as possible, to help provide medical treatment for persons who cannot afford private physicians. Out of the 36,700 letters mailed out containing the seals, more than 17,800 have still been unanswered, and the association's books are still being kept open for tardy contributors. A special effort is being made to reach a 3 cents per capita quota, which several other southern cities have already reached. This is the smallest recognized quota of any city in the United States, it was pointed out. In addition to the 2,305 persons served by the Atlanta Tuberculosis Association during January and February of this year, the association's nurses have made more than 3,200 visits to homes, and a total of 377 tuberculin tests were made. This program of medical care supplements an extensive program of health education carried on to help combat the disease.

FAT CATTLE SHOW TO DRAW RAISERS

Event of April 18 and 19 Has Increased Backing of Businessmen.

Plans are going forward for the fourth annual Atlanta Fat Beef Cattle Show to be held at J. W. Patterson's barn, 4 Brady avenue, N. W., April 18-19, Cully A. Cobb, chairman of the livestock committee of the chamber of commerce, announced yesterday.

Cobb said 15 committees had been set up to handle the various details of the show. Minor changes have been made in rules and a new schedule of cash prizes has been prepared. Emphasis will be placed on home-bred animals. Increased interest on the part of farmers, businessmen and bankers is expected to make the show this year one of the greatest in Atlanta history.

"There is evident on all sides a growing interest in the importance of livestock as part of a farm program that will bring a substantial degree of prosperity to all those who undertake it on a sound basis," Cobb said.

A new 1939 rule emphasizing home-bred animals reads: "Any calf bred within the state of Georgia will be recognized as a home-bred animal, and as such shall be entitled to an additional prize of 25 per cent of all premiums, and all calves entered as home-bred must be properly certified as to place of breeding by county agent or vocational teacher."

Cobb said another rule had been changed to provide that all cattle must go off feed and water 12 hours before the advertised hour for sale. Formerly this was 16 hours.

Judges for the show are L. I. Case, of Raleigh, N. C.; R. S. Suggs, of Auburn, Ala.; W. S. Rice, of Athens, and J. R. Hawkins, of Columbia, S. C.

PLANS ADVANCED TO WIDEN FORUMS

Miss Woodward Seeks To Include More Colleges and Communities.

Expansion of the Georgia forum movement into state colleges and communities not already included in the program will be emphasized during the next few weeks, Miss Emily Woodward, director, announced yesterday.

During the past week Miss Woodward has held conferences with state college faculties and organized committees to promote discussion groups in the institutions and nearby communities.

Committee at Abraham Baldwin College, Tifton, is composed of G. H. King, president; George P. Donaldson, O. M. Sanders and William T. Bodenhamer. A forum has been planned for Tift county teachers on April 5.

Another committee was organized at South Georgia College, Douglas. Members are J. M. Thrash, president; Will L. Smith and F. H. Rentz.

A radio forum will be broadcast at 3 o'clock this afternoon over WSB on "What Vocational Education Is Doing and Can Do to Help Solve Georgia's Problems." Participating will be Dr. O. C. Aderhold, professor of vocational education at the University of Georgia; M. D. Mobley, state director of vocational education; Marcus Bartlett and Miss Woodward.

Dean Paul W. Chapman, of the University College of Agriculture, will lead a forum tomorrow at Douglasville. Miss Woodward will speak Tuesday afternoon in Monroe, and again Thursday in Canton. On Friday Dr. Cullen B. Gosnell will conduct a forum in Dublin on Georgia's tax problems.

SATIRES TO RAISE SCHOOL ANNUAL MONEY

Sophomores at North Avenue Presbyterian School will present a series of satires on current radio programs next Friday in the school gymnasium as part of the drive for funds to print the school annual. Entitled "A Pause for Station Identification," performances will be given at 2:30 o'clock and 8 o'clock.

Feature of the satires will be an original play, written by Elizabeth Owen, called "A June Knight and Three Gallons of Gas." It will be presented over the "Shux Radio Theater." Refreshments will be hawked, circus fashion, during the performances.

LEGION BIRTHDAY.

All in the GAME

by Jack Troy

The blue ribbon tip for the 65th running of the Kentucky Derby scheduled May 6 at Churchill Downs is not to put any bobs on the horse named Sports Writer.

How a Sports Writer ever got into the Derby is somewhat of a mystery unless, of course, the usual procedure was followed. Sports Writer may be in on a pass, at that.

Anyway, the entry list for the Derby is now public property, and one of the significant points about Sports Writer is that he did not start last year. That's running pretty true to form.

One hundred and fifteen thoroughbreds have been nominated by 78 different owners. The entry list includes 92 colts, 17 geldings and six fillies. The geldings are Invader, Scotch Trap, Float Away, Tack Point, One by One, Roll and Toss, Lostagal, Hants, Avesta, Fern Creek, Stockboard, Yankee Lad, Buffalo Bill, Hysterical, Teddy Kerry, Yale O'Nine and Jay Heart. The fillies are Worthy Matron, Rule All, Done Gone, Smart Trick, Incoelda and False Lashes.

Of the 115 nominees, probably a dozen will actually start in the Derby. It costs $500 to start a horse in the Derby. So only the ones that look really ready to go the mile and a quarter distance under added weight are sent postward.

As noted in previous stories, El Chico, the Kid, heads the list of all the great three-year-olds nominated. El Chico was unbeaten in seven starts as a two-year-old last year. And there is Porter's Mite, winner of the Belmont Futurity. A lot of folks favor this horse. Other nominees include such superb racers and stake winners as Johnstown, Incoelda, the champion two-year-old filly of 1938; No Competition, Time Alone, T. M. Dorsett, Third Degree, Yale O'Nine, Light Spur, Xalapa Clown, Smart Trick, Giles County Capulet, Touch and Go, Mordecia, Sabariel, Say Judge and Lostagal.

Not much has been said about it, either by him or followers, but Colonel E. R. Bradley has a long entry that may bear watching. That's Benefactor by Blue Larkspur-Patroness.

Benefactor started five times as a two-year-old, won three races and placed once. The folks in your old Kentucky home will be thinking about Benefactor more and more as time goes on. They are partial to the "Kunne's" entries.

SEQUEL TO SARGENT DISCOVERY.

Several years ago, during a Metropolitan open here, Harold Sampson, local advertising manager of The Constitution, noticed that Gene Sarazen, the "little sardine," had spikes running around his shoes at the toes.

Curious, Sampson asked him about it. "I have to hit a ball on my toes," Sarazen replied, "to get the distance those other fellows get." Sarazen is small by comparison with such long knockers as Jimmy Thompson, Olin Dutra, Horton Smith, Henry Picard, Harry Cooper and Craig Wood.

Sampson recalled the incident yesterday. "It popped in my mind as I read of George Sargent's discovery that hitting a ball on the toes is the thing to do rather than being a fault."

No development in golf in many years has caused the national comment the discovery of George Sargent has. After eight years of work, he perfected a machine to weigh a golfer's swing, discovered an ideal angle for the swing, and proved it is quite all right to be on the toes when the clubhead meets the ball.

In fact, he proved it's the thing to do. The added leverage brings more distance and greater control, minimizes the tendency of a clubhead to turn over in the hand.

As Harold Sampson said, "It's funny no one ever thought of it before."

THE BREAKS ARE CRUEL SOMETIMES.

John Rucker, the fine young Cracker center field prospect, had worked hard all winter chopping wood and hunting with his bird dogs around his Crabapple home.

He had rounded into fine physical condition and was ready to make a fast start with the Crackers in spring training. Then he contracted a cold. It developed into influenza.

Rucker took it easy and apparently had recovered. Complications ensued. The flu brought on a sinus condition, which, in turn, caused high blood pressure.

Attending doctors, while noting that it will take a bit of time even for as young a man as Rucker to regain his full strength, agree that it is only a temporary condition. Rucker does not have an active sinus, nor has he ever been bothered before by high blood pressure.

The flu is at the bottom of all his troubles and once he regains his strength there is no reason to believe he won't be as good as ever. He may recover sooner than expected because, as said, he was in the pink of condition after a most active winter.

Meanwhile, Manager Paul Richards mulls over his problems. Marshall Mauldin, who had been groomed as a utility man, returns to center. And either Lester Burge or Fritz Oetting eventually will plug the spot in right.

GALVIN PASSES THROUGH.

Jim Galvin, one of four ex-Crackers now playing for the Chattanooga Lookouts, passed through Atlanta yesterday en route for spring training at Sanford, Fla. Galvin admitted that, besides Hooks, Rose and Pritchett, he had no idea who was on the club. The big Irish receiver from Boston, Mass., expects the Lookouts to come up with a stronger club.

Atlanta Open Slated At Brookhaven May 8

Dates for three Atlanta golf tournaments were announced yesterday by Dr. Julius Hughes, president of the Atlanta Golf Association.

The first meet will be the Atlanta open, a 36-hole medal play tournament. It will be held May 8 at the Brookhaven club.

The annual Atlanta junior championships is scheduled at Ansley Park for June 12 through 16. It will be a match play tournament. The city amateur will be held August 9-13, at Druid Hills. It, too, will be match play.

Dr. Hughes said reason for holding the tournament from Wednesday through Sunday was to allow all businessmen a chance to play without missing too much time from their business.

Boys, Get Your Rules For Soap Box Derby

The complete rules for the conduct of the 1939 Soap Box Derby have just been received by The Atlanta Constitution. These are not yet in booklet form, but mimeographed copies have been made and can be secured from the national advertising department on the third floor of The Constitution building. Boys that intend to enter the Soap Box Derby this summer are urged to get their copies immediately and study them carefully so that they will be thoroughly familiar with all the rules.

Homesick, Mauldin, Mailho in Atlanta

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 11.—A group of Atlanta Crackers became homesick this morning and left immediately after practice for home.

Marshall Mauldin and Emil Mailho led the party. They were particularly eager to see a couple of young children at home. Both have exhibited pictures of their kids.

Guy Green and his wife were in another homesick party, leaving early in the afternoon.

The Crackers temporarily broke camp today for an open date Sunday and will resume work at 9:30 o'clock Monday morning.

ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 12, 1939.

Paul Studies The Pattern Of '39 Club

RECORD NUMBER LIKELY TO BOWL HERE SATURDAY

State Doubles Champs in Men's, Women's Divisions Risk Titles.

There is every indication that last year's record entry list will be surpassed in the seventh annual staging of The Atlanta Constitution's "St. Patrick's Day" doubles bowling event that is scheduled to be rolled on the local pin lanes on Saturday, March 18, with approximately 100 pairs of bowlers having already filed their entries for the tournament.

The state of Georgia doubles champions for women, Misses Bebe Bangert and Dot Morris, filed their entry blank Saturday to roll in this popular doubles that will be staged on a handicap basis. The men's champions had already filed entry.

While the state doubles was conducted on a "scratch" basis, The Atlanta Constitution doubles tournament is staged on a handicap basis to assure every player, low and high average bowler alike, of an equal chance of winning the titles and gold medals that will be presented to the winners.

Many of the intercompany leagues have enrolled the majority of their players in the contest. Practically every league in the city will be well represented with bowlers.

GULF ENTRIES. The Gulf Bowling league, holding an intercompany doubles elimination tournament, expects to have a large field of entries filed before the closing date Saturday.

Entries are coming in so fast that officials of the tournament are considering the arranging of an additional hour for the bowling of the games. It is likely that the added time for starting of the games may be at 11:30 a. m. this Saturday.

Hours already designated include 1:30, 5 and 7:30 p. m., with the bowlers having the privilege of bowling at either the uptown Lucky Strike or downtown Blick's Bowling Center drives.

There is no entry fee to be paid, yet you bowl in fast tournament competition with only the cost of the five games to be rolled being charged.

Handicaps are computed from 240 for each pair of men and 210 for each pair of women on a two-thirds the difference per game basis.

A RARE THRILL. Doubles competition gives a thrill seldom experienced in individual or team play. Your partner is "pulling" for you to roll big games, to turn breaks into spares, as your score soars and you are giving him the same type of encouragement. It is exciting pin play that produces powerful scores.

The women's division grows each year in number of entries registered and an even greater number of entries is forecast for this part of the tournament this year.

Nearly every former winner, in the six previous years of competition, has signed to be on the firing line at game time Saturday. And they will be trying to duplicate their previous victory as they "bear down" for big games and put plenty of "stuff" on the ball for strikes.

You don't have to be a champion. You don't have to have a top-flight average. Your average or skill on the maple lanes is immaterial in this tournament, for the handicap bridges the difference in averages between players and it is just a question of who "gets hot" or "hot-test" as they bowl the five games. Some of the teams already on file include D. M. Moody-L. C. Werder, Ben Hogue-O. A. M. Farris-H. Dame, C. D. Wilson-J. P. Hill, F. Jones-H. Bag-

Cravat Wins Santa Anita Closing Race

Townsend Martin's Colt Sets Record To Take $25,000 Event.

SANTA ANITA PARK, ARCADIA, Cal., March 11.—(UP)—Townsend Martin's Cravat, like Stagehand, a stretch-loving son of Sickle, showed his ability to go a distance again today and won the $25,000 added San Juan Capistrano handicapped feature of Santa Anita's fifth winter meeting.

A crowd of 45,000, which installed the brown colt a 9-2 favorite in the pari-mutuels, saw Jockey Jackie Westrope lead Cravat off the pace then dig in the final furlongs of the mile-and-a-half fixture for a three-and-a-half-length victory over Neil McCarthy's Today. Edward Friendly's Jacala, a champion 3-year-old filly of 1938, was third, and Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud was fourth.

Cravat, who was shipped here from Florida especially for the fifth running of the elongated stake, carried top weight of 118 pounds to a new track record over a fast but slight off track and won a smashing triumph under a bright sun.

The winner returned $11.80.

Richards Releases Hurler, 2 Infielders

Isert and Clark Sent to Waycross; Francoline Will Don Savannah Uniform.

By ROY WHITE.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 11.—Three rookies, two infielders and a pitcher, were cut loose from the Atlanta Crackers' baseball squad here tonight. It was the first cut of the spring training season and was done with a dull ax, since only three of the 35 were whacked off and sent to the Crackers' working agreement farms.

Louis Isert, the 17-year-old shortstop from Louisville, Ky., and Clarence Clark, a promising right-hander, were optioned to the Waycross club in the Georgia-Florida league, and James Francoline, from New York, will remain in Savannah and begin training with the Indians Monday afternoon. It will be only a change of uniforms for the New York boy.

The rookies are too promising to be cut loose from the club entirely and some very strong cords will remain attached to the youngsters.

FINE PROSPECTS. Isert and Francoline are particularly impressive, and certainly will be wearing Cracker uniforms before very long. They are just a couple of seasons away from the Southern league. Isert is a flashy fielder, handles himself unusually well and has a quick, accurate throwing arm. His hitting, which will improve with seasoning, is his main drawback right now. He is a natural short-

GLENN IS BEATEN; WALKER WINNER

Cunningham Defeated in Both 1,000-Yard Run and Mile.

NEW YORK, March 11.—(UP) Glenn Cunningham, king of the world milers, was defeated twice tonight in the annual Knights of Columbus track and field games, finishing second to Johnny Borican in the fastest 1,000-yard race in history and then winding up last two hours later in the classic

Columbian mile, which he had won six consecutive times.

While a crowd of 14,000 amazed fans looked on in Madison Square Garden, Cunningham bowed in the mile run to Chuck Fenske, of Wisconsin—the first time he had lost an indoor mile since 1936 when he was defeated by Gene Venzke.

Glenn apparently had spent himself in the 1,000-yard run which saw Borican, lanky negro

Winning Pilot's Life Is No Bed of Roses

There's the Question of When Rucker Can Report and Other Problems.

By JACK TROY.

They're having a day off in the Cracker training camp at Savannah today. Some players have made a mad dash for Atlanta to see families, others will go fishing and still others will play golf.

Manager Paul Richards may play golf, too, but he probably won't have his mind on it. The old concentration will be lacking because he has something else to think about.

A winning manager's life is no bed of roses. Things don't always work out as they might.

John Rucker was all set to go to camp and win the center field job. Flu wrecked all the plans. He's still here—and the date for his reporting remains indefinite.

Marshall Mauldin has gone back to his old spot in center. This is no liability, but the plan was to use Marshall as utility and let Rucker roam the center pasture. It was figured his added speed would cut off many an enemy base hit.

Then, too, Fritz Oetting apparently is still feeling the effects of an appendix operation. The promise he showed in the latter part of last season is not apparent now. So Lester Burge, a long-distance hitter but inexperienced in the A-1 brand of ball, takes over right field for the time being.

The flu wave that struck down so many folks has caused Rich-

Menzen Ranks High In St. Pete Shoot

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 11.—(AP)—William P. Schweitzer, of Hillsdale, N. J., won the national mid-winter small-bore rifle tournament for the second time here today but it took the x ring to break a tie with Dr. Russell Gardner, of Troy, Ohio.

Schweitzer and Dr. Gardner had identical scores of 1,932x2,000 for the six events that make up the national aggregate. A check over the targets was necessary to determine the winner and it was found that Schweitzer had 50 shots within the x ring and Dr. Gardner 40.

Other high men and their scores: Thurman Randle, of Dallas, Texas, 1,953; Kenneth Recker, of Winter Haven, Fla., 1,952; L. W. Abrams, of Clearwater, Fla., 1,948; E. P. Menzen, of Atlanta, Ga., 1,947; Paul D. Zenns, of St. Petersburg, 1,946; Clarence Tetzlaff, of Riverside, Ill., 1,945; Max Jensen, of Cleveland, Ohio, 1,944.

BEAN COACHED 1924 J. P. C. TO SOUTHERN TITLE

Members of the southern championship 1924 J. P. C. basketball team, one of the strongest teams Joe Bean ever coached, will be present Saturday night for the testimonial dinner at the Ansley honoring the ex-basketball mentor on his 65th birthday. The players are, front row, left to right: "Dudy" Spielberger, forward; Joe Finklestein, forward; Captain "Monk" Dorfan, center; Lukie Rosenberg, guard, and Manning Siegel, guard. Second row: Harold Bergman, Abner Lichenstein, Bill Epstein and "Kid" Socol-off. Back row: Aaron Lichenstein, manager; Coach Bean and Sol Meltzer, trainer. Those on the front row were known as the "Captains." The Progressives did not lose a game during the 1923-4 season, meeting some of the strongest college and independent teams in the south. They defeated Albany twice, and Albany defeated the A. A. C. quintet, which was also coached by Bean. All except Siegel, Bergman and Epstein, who are respectively in Houston, Jersey City and Birmingham, will attend the dinner.

Louie Morrison Best A. A. C. Ever Produced

Joe Bean Testimonial Committeemen Say Ex-Bulldog South's Greatest in Basketball.

By BILL MUNDAY.
Tall, rangy, black-haired Louie Morrison, the ex-University of Georgia scintillant who joined the clubbers in 1918, was the greatest player the A. A. C. ever produced, if not Dixie's outstanding basketball of all time, his old buddies concur.
His informal nomination came Friday at a "bovine session" which followed a meeting of the arrangements committee for the testimonial dinner former players, opponents and other friends will accord Joe Bean on his 65th birthday next Saturday night on the Ansley roof. The fete will start at 7 o'clock.

"Yes, sir," declared Johnny Oliver, "Louie had everything—including brains."
CAUGHT ON FAST.
"Why, I remember the first game in which he performed for us. His old Athens mates were swamping us and when Emory Cooke, our center, was ejected for personal fouls we felt all was lost. Because the only man coach had to substitute was Louie—who hadn't scrimmaged enough to know our signals. Being captain I called time out, took Morrison to one side and in the brief time allotted explained them to him harem-scarem like—to be sure.

"Smart was that boy. He memorized them pronto, executing the maneuvers as though he had been playing regularly with us for years. Soon he had the Bulldogs bewildered. He rang them in from everywhere and we coasted to glory."
"So from then on," broke in Johnny Graves, "Louie was a regular."

"Marvelous team man, too," declared "Scrappy" (O-apostrophe) Sullivan. "Oven if he had a clear shot and saw a man with a better one he passed to him. Ever sacrificing."
"He had an instinctive knack of being at the right place all the time, also," averred Tom Bryan as Morrison's laudation waxed warmer and warmer.

OLD-TIMERS AGREE.
These boys' opinions were shared just as enthusiastically by John Bradley, George Harrison and Frank Gillespie, who were also in attendance at the meeting, which evolved itself into a "preliminary" warmup for the thousands of pleasant reflections the old-timers will have and debate at the Bean dinner Saturday night.

Morrison is only one of a score of stars in all branches of sport whom Joe Bean tutored in a career which began here in 1904 and continued until a few years ago. He saw service, in addition to the A. A. C., at Marist, Georgia Tech and the Jewish Progressive Club. He also gave hundreds of private physical lessons.

And all of his former pupils, who possibly can, will be present to pay him merited and due homage as he shakes hands with No. 65.

Johnny Westmoreland will preside as toastmaster and while there will be no speeches, Coach W. A. Alexander, of Tech—a former aide-de-camp—is scheduled for the main talk.

Keith or Scarborough May Coach Savannah

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 11. Dwight Keith, boys' high basketball and basketball coach, and Sidney Scarborough, Tech high basketball and assistant football coach, are being considered for Savannah High's head coaching position.

Andy Morrow tendered his resignation last week, but will hold spring football drills next week in his final duties of the year.
Colonel Robeson, athletic director at Savannah High, stated tonight that more than two dozen applications have been received and that the two Atlanta assistant football coaches will be given every consideration for the head coach's post.

GLYNN ACADEMY LOSES B FINALS BY TWO POINTS

Game Goes Two Overtime Periods; Both Centers Star.

ATHENS, Ga., March 11.—Eatonton, Winterville and Wesley—champions all.
These three quintets proved themselves not only the best in each of their districts but the top-ranking teams in B, C and D classes, respectively, of the entire state.

Each eliminated all competition in the 14th annual state high school basketball tournament and earned the right to wear the crown throughout the coming year. They received tangible evidence of their championship in the form of large, handsome trophies, presented to the winners by the Georgia High School Association.

CLOSE GAMES.
Both the B and C Class games tonight were close, hard-fought contests with the B tilt between Eatonton High and Glenn Academy of Brunswick going into two extra periods.

The regular game ended in a 20-to-20 deadlock and during the first extra session the two evenly matched teams threw up an airtight guard which neither could penetrate. Finally Eatonton managed to break through and sink a field goal for a 2-point win.

Both teams played without a single substitution.

The centers led the scoring with W. J. Griffith, of Eatonton, and Lamar Davis, of Brunswick, making 11 and 10 in order.

The last of the defending champions relinquished the crown tonight as Dacula bowed before the fast-breaking offense of Winterville High school. Winterville won the thriller, that was nip-and-tuck all the way through, by a scant one-point margin.

ENDS 41-40.
Ending 41 to 40, the Class C game progressed at a fierce rate of speed with the lead swaying back and forth from the opening whistle to the final gun.

Pittard, Winterville forward, fired at the basket with a deadly accuracy that netted 16 points for his team. Pushing him closely for the high-point honors was Captain Luke Archer, Dacula sharpshooter. The Dacula leader and right forward rang up 15 markers.

Probably the most spectacular player in the entire tournament was diminutive Bill Pharr. Standing not over 5 feet 3 inches, the little Dacula left forward was all over the court with lightning speed, guarded with bulldog-like tenacity and swished the ball through the hoop from all angles.

FANS OKAY THREE NIGHT GAMES

Night Games More Interesting, Says Junior High Student

Editor's Note: Some fans believe the Cracker will win, and of course, some believe they won't. But all those interviewed last week by The Constitution's roving reporter, who stayed within two and a half blocks of The Constitution building, agreed that they anxiously await the playing of three night games a week.

By MELVIN PAZOL.
On at least one point Cracker fans are definitely in unison.

MRS. EARLE PERKINS

games-a-week idea enthusiastically. "Three games under the lights each week will be perfect," she says. She believes the Cracker should win the pennant. Buster Chatham was her favorite player, and now that the wee shortstop is gone, Marshall Mauldin draws her attention.

Officer W. F. Crumley, on the day "switch" on the Atlanta police force, hails the three-night-games-a-week idea. He will be able to see more games now.

"The team should go right on," says Officer Crumley, just as if he were directing traffic on Whitehall street. He thinks they still have enough good ball players left to win the flag, but he would not commit himself as to who is the best player on the team. "I haven't played baseball since I was a kid, but I get a big kick out of watching the Cracker play," he stated.

"Night games are naturally more interesting than daytime games," decides Turner Ivey, 14-year-old student at O'Keefe Junior High school. "There's more action under the lights—and then I will be able to see more games if they play three nights a week."

Except for that last give-away statement one might have believed Turner actually meant what he said about night ball being "naturally more interesting."

The loss of Tom Sunkel won't hurt so much, Ivey believes, for he thinks the crop of newcomers should round out a nine with punch and piching.

Margaret Hall, who was waiting on the corner for a bus to bring the daily trek back to her Palmetto, Ga., home, thinks "the Cracker have a good chance to repeat."

She is another fan who can get to see them only at night. She attends business school here, and can't stay on for afternoon games. "Every now and then a crowd of us Cracker fans will drive in for night games," she said. "Otherwise I have to learn the results from my morning Constitution."

Tech Student Gets Ace at West End

Harold Florence, a Tech student from Cedarhurst, scored a hole-in-one yesterday afternoon at West End Golf Club when he hit his tee shot on the ninth hole.

One hundred and ninety-three yards long, the hole is a par three. Florence used a brassie. He was playing with Roy Butler, Henry Abercrombie and R. D. Jones.

Southern Badminton Meet Starts Friday

The Southern Y. M. C. A. badminton tournament will be held in the local "Y" gym Friday and Saturday. Teams will be entered from Knoxville, Chattanooga, Augusta, Albany, Miami and many other cities.

The tournament is in charge of the local "Y" badminton committee, composed of Ted Zuber, chairman; Grady Walker and Chauncey Mitchell.

Police Softball Team Holds First Drill Today

The police softball team, state champions last year, will hold its initial workout of the season today at 9 o'clock in Piedmont park. All aspirants for the team are asked to report.

In The DOG HOUSE

The setter people have been taking an awful beating the last few years. At times, doubtless they have resigned themselves to a last feeble claim:

"Well, anyway, setters are much prettier." It is surprising to note how many setter boosters there really are now that Sports Peerless Pride won the national championship at Grand Junction last week and two of the three winners in the recent Atlanta Field Trial Club's trials were setters.

The first cry that rang out at the Atlanta Field Trials when Edgely Georgia Rose was named winner, was:

"Where's Trammell Scott?" The setter people wanted to point out to the Major, who considers the pointer the sole breed of bird dog, that the Rose, owned

PETRELS RETURN TO GRID MONDAY

Patrick Calls Charges Back After Three Weeks' Layoff.

Oglethorpe's Stormy Petrels, with better prospects than in some time, will be called out on Monday for an extended session of spring football training by Coach John Patrick.

Patrick had the boys at work for three weeks and then called it off because of bad weather and examinations. Returning to drills Monday, they'll work some two weeks longer.

The nucleus of Patrick's club includes Angelo Farrar, fullback; Joe Tosches, half back; "Brick" House, fullback; Anthony Zelenick, tackle; John Morenc, center; Bob Mills, end; Orvil Axelberg, back; Howard Axelberg, guard, and Ernest Sheffield, tackle.

Zelenick is recognized as an outstanding tackle in this section, coaches saying he is probably the best in the state.

The Petrels have scheduled eight games and another is to be added. On the current slate are South Georgia Teachers, Erskine, Wofford, University of Kentucky, Presbyterian, Newberry, Stetson and Mississippi College.

EMORY NETMEN OPEN SATURDAY

Emory University's varsity tennis team will open its 1939 season on Saturday, March 18, against Wofford College, Athletic Director George Moyer announced Saturday.

Ten matches are on the tentative season's card released today. Included are engagements with Georgia Tech, Georgia, Alabama at Tulane.

Tennis Coach Steve Maxwell announced that Leonard "Fungo" Woodward, lanky netman who hails from the Philippines, is being counted on to fill the No. 1 position left vacant this year by the graduation of Bob Wyatt, New Rome city champion. Wyatt held the ranking post for three seasons.

Also among the candidates are Ralph Bridges, Atlanta, and Ed Tucker, Lithonia, both veterans from last year. Prominent among newcomers is Macon Smith, Memphis star who formerly competed on the Southwestern net varsity.

The season's schedule: March 18, Wofford; March 21, Elon College; March 23, Davidson College; March 24, University of Florida; April 24, University of Miami; April 28, University of Georgia; May 2, University of Alabama; May 8, Tulane University.

SPORTS PEERLESS PRIDE, AMERICA'S BEST BIRD DOG.

by J. D. Crump, of Macon, was very much of a setter.

The Major takes a fiendish delight in needing setter people. He has the habit of walking up to setter people and pointing at their dogs and saying in mock seriousness through carelessness:

"Where'd you get those squirrel dogs." This makes a wound which though time may heal, there will always be the scar. There have been conspiracies directed at the Major but they were never successful. Major Scott's pointers have won more than their share of victories.

Georgia bird dog men have seen Sports Peerless Pride in action. This War Admiral of bird dogs performed at Wayneboro last year. He won both the amateur quail and amateur pheasant events in 1937. Earlier this year at Shuquialak, this four-year-old black, white and tan ticked setter turned in a fine performance but was unplaced.

Sports Peerless, sire of Sports Peerless Pride, ran in the national trials twice and made creditable showings but did not win.

One of the outstanding features of the national trials was the splendid performance turned in by Cavalier, owned by Colonel W. H. McNaughton, of Cartersville. (The setter people in unison point out: "He's a setter, too.") Cavalier led the field in finds—seven covers and a single. What makes it more remarkable is the fact that Cavalier is a derby dog. For such a young dog it was indeed an outstanding exhibition.

'Whiskey' Gets His Milk.
You can't get ahead of college boys. No sir.

Over at the University of Georgia, the boys of Candler Hall, as it is, are vague about his ancestry.

Whiskey did not seem aware he was under discussion, for he wolfed his food, store-bought dog food, without looking up.

Somebody, looking down at him, said: "Surely, he's got a mother

Jacket Varsity '11' Scores Six Touchdowns in Spring Workout

DEVILS UNABLE TO CROSS GOAL OF FIRST TEAM

Pair, Gibson, Murphy Star; Two Weeks of Drills Remain.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

Two hours of terrific scrimmaging under a boiling sun concluded the first four weeks of Tech spring football training yesterday at Rose Bowl field.

The green-shirted varsity team rang up six touchdowns on a stubborn Red Devil eleven that battled gamely all the way but was never able to score.

Bobby Pair, fastest man to run on Tech turf in a decade, made one of the Green touchdowns. Billy Gibson passed to Paul Sprayberry and George Webb for two more; Gibson bucked over for another and Buck Murphy, veteran blocking back, sped through the line for another on the prettiest run of the day.

Murphy, who by his own confession, managed to gain only four yards last season, broke through center, turned on the speed and didn't stop until he had crossed the enemy goal 20 yards away.

PAIR SHOWS HEELS.

Pair, ex-Tech High speed demon, broke around end with twinkling feet and literally outran opposing tacklers to the goal line, 40 yards away, for the first varsity score. Pair's second touchdown came on a two-yard sprint after he had after Joe Bartlett, on an end around and a penalty, had put the ball in scoring position.

Bill Gibson, offensive mainstay of the Tech backfield last year, threw three fine passes which resulted in touchdowns, either directly or indirectly. The first went to Sprayberry, who made a great catch. It was good for 20 yards.

The second was thrown to Webb for another score. The toss traveled about 20 yards on the air and the ex-Monroe Aggie sped in, maintaining 15 yards for 6 points. A 40-yard pass from Gibson to Bartlett put the ball in position for the former to buck it over in the final minutes of the drill.

The Blue-clad substitutes made a battle of it all the way but never scored despite the fine passing of Dick Bates, who completed numerous tosses to Ends Braddy and Jordan. Indeed, one toss went to Braddy for 20 yards but the receiver was out of the end zone when it was caught, so it was ruled no good.

SOPHS SCORE TWICE.

Coach Bill Alexander started a sophomore-studded team against the reserves, and the yearlings did all right by themselves, making two touchdowns. First-year men in the opening lineup included Johnny Bosch, Hal Lamb, Bobby Pair and Ralph Plaster in the backfield and George Webb and Charlie Sanders in the line.

Roane Beard, center; Eston Lackey and Louis Perkins, tackles; Butch Anderson, guard, and Bartlett, end, completed the opening eleven.

Opposing the greens were Olcott and Clay, ends; Bridges and Wallace, tackles; Wood and Wilkins, guards; Quigg, center, and Coughlin, Butch and Sanders in the backfield.

The scrimmage marked the end of the first four weeks of practice, in which several sophomores have shown enough ability to be counted on as regulars when fall around.

There are two weeks of training left.

ards more concern than the right field spot, however. If Rucker were in camp and ready to go at top speed, it would clear up a few things.

Richards has another real problem—development of a flock of rookie pitchers. There are only two class men in the list of moundmen. He'll have to develop a winning staff from among Pete Stein, Onnie Robinson, Harry Johnston, Luman Harris, Larry Miller and the class men, Bob Durham and Clyde Small.

No Cracker club of recent years has caused the fan comment the current club has. But that isn't worrying Richards any. He's wondering how Alf Rubeling will do at second, can Alf Rubeling replace Johnny Hill, when will Rucker be ready, and who's gonna play right field, anyway?

$7.20 and $5 across the board. Today, an entry with Gosum, paid $4.80 and $4, and Jacola $4.60. A total of $199,380 was turned through the mutuels machines on the race, sixth event on the eight-race card.

A field of 19 starters broke from the silver gate after five horses were scratched. Honey Cloud stepped out in front at once with Major A. C. Taylor's Whitechee, second to Kayak II in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap a week ago, running second and Jacola third.

Westrope held Cravat back in the early going and was far behind when Honey Cloud winged to a two-and-a-half-length lead, passing the big green grandstand the first time.

THE IDEA IS THAT 'YOU OUGHTA SEE THE OTHER FELLOW'

Norris Price, of Fair Oaks, missed his three-month-old Beagle pup, and went looking for it. He found the pup, battle-scarred, under the house and a dead rabbit lying beside it. In the throes of death, the big rabbit had sliced the pup, and it was necessary to rush it to a veterinarian for treatment. Half a dozen stitches did the work, and the pup was out the next day looking for more rabbits to conquer. Price, the pup and the dead rabbit are shown above.

In Dixie's FIELDS AND STREAMS

March enters like a lamb and if the last 50 years are any indication, it's departure will leave some half million acres of good Georgia game cover well burned as a result of our annual "swinge" season.

For generations it has been time honored custom in this state to begin the big burn around March 1 and about 75 per cent of our farmers and landowners light a pine knot and start "greening" the woods, destroying insects and various other antiquated excuses which have been offered to justify uncontrolled woods burning which annually destroy millions of dollars worth of the state's natural resources.

Once upon a time, when King Cotton held sway in the south, these excuses were accepted by the public with little questioning, for on this product depended the welfare of the southland. Today presents quite a different picture. Sound thinking people realize that our forests are destined to play an important part in the future economic welfare of the south.

Education alone can make the change in public opinion that is necessary to provide an unburned home for our wild life.

Sportsmen can play an important part in this move by impressing farmers and landowners with the fact that in this day of multiple land use, game is just another cash crop for any wise tiller of the soil, and that only those willing to protect it will reap the harvest.

Even today some hunters cry in horror at the very thought of placing this sport on a commercial basis, still considering it as a God given right. But in this day of depleted game supply and increased public hunting, only those willing to pay their way have much prospects for the future.

True enough, there are more ways of making game propagation of interest to the farmer than just plunking down the cash. But until the landowner, guardian of the game, realizes that more wild life on his property means something besides a bunch of city rowdies invading his farm, destroying fences and other property in their search for sport, little help may be expected from him. When this point is clearly brought home the day of the annual "swinge" will be over and uncontrolled woods burning will find an army of farmers enlisted in stopping the destruction of forest and game by fire.

Richards Introduces New Training Stunt

'Noisy' Pop Flies Calculated to Relieve Cracker Outfielders' Early-Season Nervousness.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 11.—A new wrinkle in spring practice, never before tried in Savannah's municipal stadium, was introduced to the 1935 Crackers by Manager Paul Richards this morning.

The new practice consisted of hitting pop flies to the outfielders with all the pitchers and surplus candidates in the park close around yelling.

It's that sort of noise the outfielders will have to contend with in many of the parks, and several practice sessions at such will relieve nervousness.

Another big reason for the "chasing flies" amid all the noise was the possibility of cutting down accidents—a severe blow to the Crackers near the end of last season when Eddie Rose and Russ Peters ran together, going after fly ball.

INFIELD, TOO.

The infielders also were given a long session, catching pop flies with two and three players going after the ball.

Manager Richards was none the worse for a bruise on his left hand received fielding a ball at first base Friday. He didn't even have any bandages or ice packs on his hand today and went through the regular three-hour drill.

A record crowd of several hundred spectators, a majority of whom were young kids, saw today's long drill and seemed very much pleased.

Carroll Brown, former Yankee and Athletic pitcher and an uncle of Larry Miller, was among the spectators of today's practice. Brown is en route to his New York home, following a vacation in Miami.

Jumbo Barrett, former Southern league star and now a member of Savannah's police department, was another of today's spectators. He has been looking over some likely prospects for Savannah's team.

Skull practice will be featured in next week's practices, Manager Richards announced this afternoon.

stop and fields very much like Russ Peters.

Francoline has the largest forearm of any player in camp. He also has big broad shoulders and has caught the eye of both Bobby Lamotte, the president, and Chick Autry, manager of the Savannah Indians.

The New York boy has hit both right and left-hand pitching to all corners of the lot, many of which went into the left and right field stands.

GLAD TO GET HIM.

"We are mighty glad to have Francoline in the first draft and truly hope that the others given us will prove equally as impressive in the first workouts."

Richards decided to let him get a good start with Manager Al Leitz, the Waycross catcher.

Another cut is likely about the middle of the week and certainly by next Sunday when the first practice game will be played.

No decision has been reached yet regarding intra-camp games. In fact, with Savannah training in the afternoon, a complete game is out of the question and only the three or four-inning variety will be played if at all.

Al Leitz, the Waycross manager, will leave early Sunday morning with Isert and Clark.

from Elberon, N. J., set a world record of 2:08.8, smashing to ribbons both the indoor and outdoor marks for that distance.

The former 1,000-yard mark ironically was set by Cunningham at 2:10.1 in this same meet in 1935 when Glenn scored a double in that event and in the mile.

The outdoor record of 2:09.7 was set by Elroy Robinson in Fresno, Cal., on May 15, 1937.

Six times before, Cunningham had won the Columbian mile, starting with his first appearance in it in 1933. But tonight Fenske was the master, turning the distance in 4:11.1, compared to Cunningham's best time in any mile this year in New York of 4:12.6.

Allan Tolmich, unattached from Detroit, topped an easy triumph in the 60-yard invitation high hurdles in 7.4 seconds, two-tenths of a second off his indoor mark and one-tenth of a second off the meet mark he set last year.

Don Lash, rubber-legged Indiana state policeman making his last competitive effort before he attempts to break his own world record of 8:58 up at Dartmouth, scored an easy victory in the two-mile invitation feature in 9:02.4.

125-Foot-High Earth Mass Slides Toward Key-Pacific Thoroughfare

Giant Formation Swallows Boulders, Trees and Young Bull.

GILROY, Cal., March 11.—(AP) A gigantic earthslide from the "dead hills" of the famous San Andreas earthquake fault was moving slowly but uninterruptedly toward the Pacific coast's main Canada-to-Mexico highway tonight.

On a front about a quarter of a mile long, the 125-foot high earth mass was advancing down a slope toward United States Highway 101 at a point about five miles from here.

Engineers reported its advance at the rate of better than a foot an hour and said it was about a half mile from the thoroughfare.

The spectacle attracted hundreds of sightseers. "No smoking" signs were placed in the area to forestall any possibility of an explosion in the event the movement might uncover a pocket of natural gas in the earth.

The slide started Monday after heavy rains had soaked into the picturesque hill formation. It broke loose from the 1,130-foot level about 2 1/4 miles from the 1 3/4 miles down slope toward the road, which is at the 150-foot elevation.

Boulders, trees and everything else in its path were enveloped in the huge mass or dropped into huge fissures created by the downhill pull of the slide. One of these fissures swallowed up a young bull.

M. H. Ayres, state highway engineer, said the mass was sliding on a base of clay which had been made slippery by seepage from the rains.

Dr. Albert J. Newlin, Santa Clara University seismologist, inspected the slide and said recent tremors in the San Andreas fault undoubtedly stimulated the movement.

The San Andreas fault runs almost the full length of California and was responsible for the San Francisco earthquake of 1906. The name of the hills, Loma de Muertos, Spanish for "Dead Hills" and they straddle the fault a short distance from here.

Ayers said a continuation of the movement might necessitate relocation of the highway.

Trust Company of Georgia Opens Commercial Factoring Department

Establishment of a commercial factoring division by the Trust Company of Georgia, said to be the first important financial facility of its kind ever made available to industry in this section by a southern institution, was announced yesterday.

Entrance of the Trust company into the factoring field makes immediately accessible to southern textile mills as well as other industries a form of financing which hitherto has been confined to other parts of the country.

WPA OKAYS $133,596 FOR COLLEGE PARK

Sum Will Be Used for Completion of City Park and Golf Course.

Authorization of eight new projects, one of them in Fulton county, was announced yesterday by Miss Gay B. Shepperson, state WPA administrator. The projects will cost an estimated $284,746, of which $54,436 will be contributed by local sponsors.

The sum of $133,596 has been set aside for completion of the city park and golf course at College Park. The money is a supplemental grant to finish work already begun, and provides for the addition of several holes to the links, and the construction of tennis courts.

The location and total costs of the other projects are: Thomas county, $3,700 for malaria control drainage; Bleckley county, $46,937 for street improvements in Cochran; Turner county, $42,405 for extension of the Ashburn sewer system; Rockdale county, $31,952 for Conyers street improvements; Early county, $3,050 for malaria control drainage; Pikes county, $12,000 for the same type of work, and Pike county, $11,656 for work on the high school grounds at Williamson.

Lee Welfare Head Wins Reinstatement

AMERICUS, Ga., March 11.—(AP)—Lee county's revamped welfare board today reinstated for an indefinite period Mrs. Florrie Andrews, welfare director recently ousted along with three other members by the Lee county commissioners.

No reason either for the shape-up or the reinstatement of Mrs. Andrews was given. New members of the board are Chairman A. N. Davis, I. E. Varner and Douglas Lewis, who replace J. W. Forrester, Judge Ragal Long and J. I. Kaylor. R. L. Andrews is another new member, being appointed to fill a vacancy in the Smithville district.

The cash prizes—$15, $10, $5 and $3—will be paid to the winning students in three different classes, the elementary, the senior and the junior high. The names of the winning builders were not known to the judges until final selection had been made. All the little cut-out models on exhibition at the show will bear the names of the builders and the schools from which they came. A complete list of winners and the honorable mention list will appear in The Constitution Tuesday morning.

In addition to the building of the miniature homes, which has been regular class work for the past few weeks, and for which every student will receive a complimentary pass to the exposition, classes or individual students from the schools that desire to do so will visit the show each morning, beginning at 9 o'clock. They will come in a body, as scheduled below by Miss Smith, art supervisor, and will be admitted for a charge of only 10 cents. Thirty minutes will be allowed to each class, or double classes, to go through the exposition, and it is understood essays will be written by the pupils on their return to school about what they saw, what impressed them most, and the advantages offered in a show of the type of The Constitution's "House of Progress Exposition."

Here is the day and the hour the various classes of the schools will visit the exposition, accompanied by their teachers:

Tuesday Morning.
9 to 9:30—Highland Avenue and Calhoun Street schools.

The display of the hundreds of little homes, attesting the artistic touch and the natural mechanical bent of scores of students, makes a beautiful and interesting exhibit at the show. ## Children's Model Homes on Display

Hundreds of Strikingly Original Cutouts, Including Prize-Winners, Will Be Shown All During Week.

Competition has been keen. Hundreds of school children have vied in the miniature house contest, sponsored by The Constitution's "House of Progress Exposition," opening tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the city auditorium.

Hundreds of these little cutouts have reached the auditorium where they will all be on display throughout the coming week.

Twelve winners—homes that the judges have selected as the most original, attractive and best constructed—will be grouped together and their builders given cash prizes. The makers of 15 others, rated as next best, will receive certificates of honorable mention.

Children in nearly every white school in Atlanta's school system have entered miniature homes fashioned by their own hands, and erected under rules and specifications issued by those in charge of the show.

Dr. Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of city schools; H. Reid Hunter, in charge of the high schools; Miss Charlotte Smith, art supervisor, and practically all teachers in the system have encouraged the children in building these homes in their classes, and splendid co-operation of the entire school system has been accorded Foster B. Steward, director of the exposition.

The cash prizes—$15, $10, $5 and $3—will be paid to the winning students in three different classes, the elementary, the senior and the junior high. ## COMMUNITY CHEST PLANS 5TH PARLEY

Agencies Will Study How to Keep Atlantans From Relief Rolls.

How this year's Community Chest funds may best be spent to keep families from breaking down in face of emergencies and to keep Atlantans from public relief rolls will be studied by representatives of ten of the Community Chest family and adult agencies meeting tomorrow.

The meeting was called yesterday by Dr. Herman L. Turner, past president of the Community Chest and chairman of this year's budget committee, as the fifth of a series of group conferences by Chest agencies doing related work.

The recommendations of these group conferences, he explained, will be submitted to the budget committee as a basis for its proposals to the Chest board of directors for allocation of this year's fund and also as a guide toward fixing the goal to be sought in the Chest campaign next fall.

Representatives appointed by the family and adult care agencies to participate in tomorrow's meeting also were announced by Dr. Turner.

Gordon Brooke will represent the Atlanta Red Cross; C. H. McFee, Community Employment Service; Wheat Williams, DeKalb Red Cross; Hurd Crain, Family Welfare Society; Louis Moss, Federation of Jewish Social Service; E. Smythe Gambrell, Legal Aid Society; Fred F. Athearn, Travelers Aid; Dr. J. R. McKain, DeKalb Family Service, and Miss Aline Johnson, Churches Homes for Girls.

Harry Stone and J. S. Roberts will represent the budget committee.

Groups which already have held preliminary conferences in the new program of budget study include the agencies giving care and protection to children, those guarding public health, the sick and handicapped and those providing youth guidance and development.

"These studies, continuing through the year, will help to assure the wisest possible use of Atlanta's Chest dollars to do a constructive job of preventing as well as alleviating human distress," Dr. Turner said.

PLANS ARE PUSHED ON GARDEN CENTER

Construction To Begin in Spring on University Campus.

ATHENS, Ga., March 11.—(AP) Construction on the "Georgia Garden Center" on the University of Georgia campus will begin this spring. Hubert B. Owens, head of the university's department of landscape architecture, said today.

The garden center will be a landscaped sector of the University campus near the new home of the landscape architecture department and will serve as a memorial to the Ladies' Garden Club of Athens, the first garden club in America. The "living memorial" will be completed in time for the celebration of the 50th anniversary of the founding of the club in 1941.

Owens' plans for the garden center will include a half-acre developed as a naturalistic area with small trees, shrubs, and wild flowers, a formal garden on several levels, and an outside lecture room built as a patio.

Money for the original construction and planting of the garden memorial is being furnished by the Garden Club of Georgia. The university will be responsible for maintenance.

Bids on Model Cottage To Be Sealed

Buyer at 'House of Progress Exposition' To Get Pretty Landscaped Lot in Chelsea Heights.

Somewhere is going to get a home. Somebody is going to get an unusually well-constructed, modern, conveniently arranged home—when that somebody buys the cottage on the stage at the city auditorium.

To the highest bidder—under sealed bids—will go the pretty little house. The bid will include an ideally located lot of good size in Chelsea Heights, and also the addition of a second bedroom when the house is placed on the lot. It will also have a garage and all other modern arrangements as a completed home.

Ideal Features.
Among the very many interesting features of The Constitution's "House of Progress Exposition," opening at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, none will draw more attention than the five-room cottage on the stage. It has been built not only to show many ideal home features and excellent construction, but visitors to the show will find it tastefully and appropriately furnished by such exhibitors as Sterchi Bros. Stores, Inc., Rich's, and the Georgia Power Company, the latter having arranged and installed in it a most complete electric kitchen.

The lumber, mill work and building supplies were obtained through the Atlanta Lumber and Building Supply Association. Other equipment and material in the pretty home came from the local chapter N. E. C. A., the Decorative Company, Trailcar, Inc., Georgia Tent & Awning Company, and the Western Venetian Blind Company.

The latest in plumbing fixtures was supplied by Noland Company, Incorporated.

Problem of Design.
The stage cottage was designed by Alvin Roger Moore, well-known Atlanta architect. It had to be designed to fit the auditorium stage, to offer easy ingress and egress for thousands of visitors to pass through it, but at the same time it had to be planned as to proper fit and appearance on a lot when removed from the stage.

From the picture of it on another page can be noticed the arrangement of the garage and how the home will appear on Kathryn street, in Chelsea Heights, a pretty subdivision just off Ponce de Leon avenue, within the city limits of Decatur. Chelsea Heights is being developed by Homes Beautiful, Inc., under the supervision of H. J. Ewing. A number of pretty homes are already there, and 11 more are being made ready for construction.

The building of the home has been a dual proposition. Its contractors are Hardin & Ramsey, local builders, whose reputation for reliability and dependable work is well known. First the builders had to erect the home in the lumber yards of the West Lumber Company. It had to be completely set up and finished there. It had to be of the very best, sound, seasoned lumber, and erected in sections so that it could be set up on the stage, as you will see it, and later removed to the lot. Hardin & Ramsey have done a splendid job. Visitors are asked to note the excellent workmanship.

Meets FHA Standards.
The home has absolutely correct floor construction as required by FHA and as recommended by the

U-Shaped Electric Kitchen Is Last Word in Efficiency

Equipped by the Georgia Power Company, the all-electric kitchen in the model home to be shown at the "House of Progress Exposition" is the last word in kitchen efficiency and beauty. It conveniently groups the equipment and storage cabinets in a U-shape, so everything is at the homemaker's fingertips. The refrigerator and preparation counter are at the right. The range and serving counter are at the left. Joining them underneath the window is the combination sink and electric dishwasher. Underneath and above the work counters are handy storage cabinets.

American Institute of Architects, Association of General Contractors of America, and by the Atlanta Lumber and Building Supply Association. The sills, the floor joists and every other piece of lumber in it has been carefully selected and well put together. Everything about it meets FHA specifications, even the moisture content in the lumber, and as a result a commitment has been issued by the Federal Housing Administration to loan 90 per cent of the value of the house and lot to the successful bidder, provided, of course, he or she can meet the credit requirements of the federal government.

MORE LIGHT LESSENS TENSION OF READING
The nervous tension of persons reading can be markedly decreased by giving them more light. This was the conclusion reached in a series of unusual tests in the General Electric Lighting Laboratory near Cleveland, Ohio. Unknown to them, the pressure of the tested persons' fingertips was being measured through a button which they pushed whenever they turned a page. As their lighting was increased, the persons unconsciously relaxed in their chairs and the tension flowing from their eyes to their fingertips actually became less.

LIGHT COSTS LITTLE.
To light a home with tallow candles to the extent that it is lighted today with electric lighting would be at least 50 times as expensive. Electrically provides the cheapest lighting that mankind has ever known.

The building of the home has been a dual proposition. Its contractors are Hardin & Ramsey, local builders, whose reputation for reliability and dependable work is well known. ## Advice on Planning Your Kitchen To Save Energy Will Be Given

One in the Cottage at Auditorium Is Scientifically Laid Out With Electric Servants Ready To Do Housewife's Bidding.

The five-room cottage exhibited on the stage of the auditorium during the "House of Progress Exposition" has a complete all-electric kitchen.

Designed by Guy Lynes, kitchen planning engineer of the Georgia Power Company, in co-operation with Alvin Roger Moore, architect, the kitchen is a glowing tribute to "her majesty the housewife."

The light blue walls trimmed in dark blue and the dark blue floor serve as a stunning background for the gleaming white Westinghouse electric range, refrigerator, water heater and dishwasher.

In addition to the four "major" appliances in the all-electric kitchen, there will be many small electrical appliances, including a Mixmaster, electric kitchen clock, Silux coffee maker, Toaster, waffle iron. The kitchen is adequately wired to accommodate a complete array of electrical appliances.

"Too often, kitchens just grow," said Mr. Lynes. "Little care is given to convenience of arrangement, with the result that needless steps and waste of time are required for the preparation of meals. Unplanned kitchens rob women of their youth and leisure.

"Kitchen planning is simple. It merely consists of a sensible arrangement of kitchen equipment, so that meals may be prepared with the least time and effort," the Georgia Power Company kitchen engineer stated.

Visitors to the "House of Progress Exposition" who see the all-electric kitchen in the model cottage will get a first hand idea of how a planned kitchen differs from an ordinary, unplanned one.

They will observe that in a planned kitchen the refrigerator is next to the preparation counter; and the combination sink and dishwasher serves as a connecting link between the preparation and serving counters.

A home economist from the Georgia Power Company will be at the company's booth to give detailed information about kitchen planning to any interested persons and explain the free kitchen planning service offered by the company to its customers.

Life in Georgia, From Mountains To Sea, Told in Dioramas for Fair

Work Nearing Completion on Life-Like Scenes Showing 'State of Tomorrow'; Tremendous Possibilities of Development To Be Stressed in N. Y. Exhibits.

Dioramas, giving a comprehensive idea of Georgia in life-like scenes from the mountains to the sea, are nearing completion for the Georgia exhibit in the Court of States at the New York World's Fair.

The nine scenes on illuminated stages will depict such Georgia scenes as the seashore, the ceramic industry, cotton mill and mill village, an Indian mound, naval stores, cotton field and cotton gin, the mountains, the pulp and paper industry, and peach orchards and packing.

The Ocmulgee Indian mound at Macon is shown in the first diorama to be completed. A section of the mound is cut away so as to show both exterior and interior, and light arrangements give night and day effects as desired.

Artists of the Works Progress Administration working under Roy Dyer, diorama engineer, with Richard C. Job, director of the State Planning Board, supervising, are building out of silicate, wire, paper, chicken feathers, balsa

Where 'Home Show' Cottage Will Be Located

Here is the way to reach the lot in Chelsea Heights to which the house built on the city auditorium stage, for The Constitution's "House of Progress Exposition," will be removed. Many will want to see this location before placing a sealed bid for the house and lot. A commitment has been issued by the Federal Housing Administration to loan 90 per cent of the value of this house and lot to the highest bidder, subject to the bidder's ability to pass the FHA credit plan. Drive out Ponce de Leon avenue, turn on the new Scott boulevard, then follow the arrows. The exposition opens March 13 at the city auditorium.

DON'T KEEP YOUR EYES IN LOW GEAR TOO MUCH

Using the eyes for close work under insufficient lighting is like using a car continuously in low gear. Finally, the eyes may begin to "howl" in protest, but by that time the damage may be done. good lighting used at the beginning might have been the proverbial ounce of prevention.

DANGEROUS TO ENTER BEDROOM IN THE DARK

"Turn on a light and do not walk in your bedroom in the dark of the night." That is the moral of some of the latest figures of the American Red Cross on accidents in the home. More than one-fourth of all the dangerous falls in the home were found to occur in the bedroom, and most of these because people walked in the dark, without turning on a light.

MRS. W. F. MARTIN DIES AT RESIDENCE

Rites Tomorrow and Burial

Mrs. William F. Martin, wife of Brigadier General Martin, United States army, retired, died yesterday afternoon at the residence, 1158 Avon avenue, S. W.

A native of Fort Wayne, Ind., Mrs. Martin was the daughter of the late Joseph K. Edgerton, former president of the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad and a member of congress during the Civil War. She had made her home here for the last two years.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by a daughter, Mrs. L. W. Nichols, wife of Major Nichols, now stationed at Fort McPherson. Funeral services will be conducted at 4:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon at Spring Hill by Chaplain Orville E. Fisher. The body is to be taken to the National cemetery, Arlington, Va., for burial, under direction of H. M. Patterson & Son.

Two Hearn Stars Who Will Entertain at Home Show

Ken Keese, left, is pianist and featured singer with Harry Hearn's orchestra. Betty Raines, right, is also a singer in the band, which will be heard with the orchestra at the "House of Progress Exposition," sponsored by The Constitution. The exposition opens at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

HARRY HEARN BAND AT THE EXPOSITION

Finest Entertainment Will Be Provided Visitors to Auditorium.

Harry Hearn's 11-piece orchestra, which held the No. 1 spot in Atlanta at President Roosevelt's birthday balls for the past three years, with three featured artists as special entertainers, will be featured at The Constitution's "House of Progress Exposition," opening at 2 o'clock tomorrow at the city auditorium.

The orchestra not only will furnish the hottest swing music, low sweet rhythms and classical music—"and what have you"—but Hearn will present three popular entertainers as soloists and comedy whippers.

The orchestra will play each afternoon about 4 o'clock from the auditorium stage and again at night about 9. Nearly an hour's entertainment will be furnished by this accomplished group of college musicians. A rumba band and a Dixieland band, made as a part of his orchestra, will play catchy songs and instrumental selections.

Among the leaders in his soloists is Betty Haines, a vocalist. At the piano, Ken Keese will entertain, while Tiny "Casey Jones" Scarborough, with his 300 or more pounds, will furnish plenty of comedy and mischief-making.

Hearn's orchestra is among the most popular in the south with colleges, fraternities, clubs and hotels. It has just finished its ninety-sixth large convention engagement. Radio listeners all over the country have heard and admired Hearn. The orchestra has, in various contests, been voted the "best swing band," the "best sweet band," and the "best all-around band." That ought to be enough to commend it to the visitors to the exposition, where it will entertain for the entire week. Incidentally, every member of the orchestra is a college man and a highly schooled musician.

A rolling platform, entering from the side of the stage, will bring the orchestra into view at each performance.

Urban League

By
JESSE O. THOMAS

The purpose of the Bulletin is to chronicle the worthwhile things done for, by, and with the Negro, as a basis of increasing inter-racial good-will and understanding.

The Federal Writers' Project of the Works Progress Administration has in process 12 books which give an account of the negro in the American scene.

Negro workers on the Writers' Project in various states, as well as in the national office, have aided in getting out these books. The total number of members of the race now working on the Federal Writers' Project is about 180. They serve as editors, assistant editors, research workers consultants and typists. The project is giving employment to writers who otherwise would have little or no chance to use their training and ability.

Some of the country's best known writers are connected with the Federal Writers' Project. Among these are Zora Neale Hurston, Richard Wright and Claude McKay. To other writers the project has given an opportunity to develop ability which will serve them well in the future.

The books of the WPA Writers' Project nearing completion are "A History of the Negro in Virginia," "The Social and Economic Survey of Negroes in Little Rock, Ark.," "Negroes in New York," "History of the Negro," "The Florida Negro," "Negroes in Philadelphia," "History of the Negroes in Oklahoma," and the "History of the Negroes in Louisiana."

Sponsored by Hampton Institute, the "History of the Negro" in Virginia has been compiled by an all-negro project set up in the institution by the Virginia Writers' Project. Roscoe Lewis, of the Hampton faculty, supervises this work. From some 400 photographs taken by Robert McNeill, 22-year-old honor graduate of the New York Institute of Photography, will be selected illustrations for this history. The manuscript is now being edited in the Richmond, Va., office of the Writers' Project and will soon be published.

At Little Rock, Ark., the local branch of the National Urban League is sponsoring a social and economic survey of negroes in that city. This production of the Federal Writers' Project is also undergoing final revision and will be released in the near future.

Material collected and written by the largest staff of negro workers on the project will make up the WPA book entitled "Negroes in New York." This publication is being put into shape for release under the supervision of Rio Otley.

Miss Helen Boardman, a sympathetic and able writer of the other race, is writing the "History of the Negro." The New York city office of the Federal Writers' Project is the headquarters for this undertaking as the one-volume history nears completion.

Most of the writing and editing of "The Florida Negro" is being done by negro writers employed on the project in that state. Miss Zora Neale Hurston has made valuable contributions to this 60,000 word-book, which is about three-quarters done.

An interesting account of the negro in the Quaker city makes up the material being prepared for the history of negroes in Philadelphia. This forthcoming book is the production of the negro unit of the Writers' Project in the Pennsylvania metropolis.

Alert citizen sponsorship is the guiding influence back of the "History of the Negroes in Oklahoma." Twenty-one colored citizens banded together as sponsors of this study now well underway toward publication. Negro workers also helped compile the material comprising this.

"The History of the Negro in Louisiana" is an undertaking of an all-negro Federal Writers' Project at Dillard University. From official reports, this work promises to be one of the largest studies of its kind ever compiled. L. D. Reddick, of the Dillard University faculty, is supervising this project.

Added to these national, state and regional publications, are four books to be written by the national office of the Federal Writers' Project. A volume entitled "Portrait of the Negro as an American," by Sterling Brown, editor of negro affairs, Federal Writers' headquarters, will present a picture of the negro as an integral part of the American scene. In a book on the anti-slave movement, to be written in the national office, the dramatic story of the "underground railroad" and other struggles of Abolitionist forces to free the enslaved negro will occupy a key position. A book on negro folklore will be written by Sterling Brown and Dr. B. A. Boykin will assist in the preparation of this work. The fourth production planned by the national office of the WPA Federal Writers' Project is a book of narratives by ex-slaves.

FLOWERY BOWERS WILL GRACE SHOW

Vernon Frank's Fairview Greenhouse Provides Breath-Taking Display.

"Say It With Flowers"—is the way Vernon Frank's Fairview Greenhouse, located at 740 East Lake Drive, is going to express his interest in The Constitution's "House of Progress Exposition," which opens its doors at the city auditorium tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock.

Fairview Greenhouse flowers will blend in beauty and harmony with the marvelous landscaping artistically and beautifully worked out by Monroe's Landscape and Nursery Company.

For several weeks, Mr. Frank has been growing and preparing beds and pots of flowers of every description and color to present as his offering to the exposition. From the entrance to the big auditorium straight down the center, almost to the stage, there will be a great profusion of flower beds. A view as one enters the building will be so different from that usually seen at trade expositions that it will be universally acclaimed as the most decorative show of its kind ever attended. The floral display will interest and charm.

Equally as interesting and beautiful will be the landscaping around the cottage on the stage and throughout the auditorium generally, wherever location lends itself to landscape beauty. The work to be seen will all have been done by the Monroe company, and will be one of the greatly admired features of the show.

District Music Festival at Decatur Expected To Draw 1,500 Students

157 High and Grammar Schools Will Be Represented on Program Which Opens Friday; Orchestra, Glee Clubs, Soloists To Perform.

Student musicians from 33 high schools and 124 grammar schools will stream into Decatur Friday for the opening of the Fifth District Music Festival which will convene through Saturday.

More than 1,500 students in the district will participate in the programs, Mrs. Ruby White Brown, chairman of the festival, said. The festival will be held in the auditoriums of the boys' and girls' high schools at Decatur.

The program Friday and Saturday will feature orchestras, glee clubs, ensembles, soloists and similar musical groups. The band contest, a separate division of the festival sponsored by The Constitution, will be held April 21. At that time school bands, drum majors and majorettes will compete in a gala musical event expected to attract music lovers from over the state.

The festival will open at 9 o'clock Friday morning with instrumental and vocal solos. They will be followed by ensembles, glee clubs and orchestras. The orchestral competition will take place in Decatur Girls' High school auditorium, while the vocal groups will compete in the adjoining Boys' High school auditorium.

Lamar Ferguson, superintendent of Decatur public schools, will be host to the visiting musicians.

Prominent judges have been selected to name winners of the various events.

E. J. Getwood, dean of music at Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn., and director of the glee club at Vanderbilt University, will judge the vocal contestants. He also is well known as director of the "Old Harp" singers of radio fame.

E. R. Sides, director of public school music in Charlotte, N. C., will judge the orchestral competition. He will bring his 75-piece orchestra from Charlotte to present a special concert in honor of festival participants. This concert will be held at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon in the Girls' High auditorium.

Mrs. Brown said the festival was expected to be the largest ever held in the district. She praised the Decatur P. T. A. council for its aid in planning for the event.

SEEK TO CONDEMN 30 HOUSING TRACTS

Authority and Owners Unable To Agree on 'Reasonable' Price.

Suits to condemn 30 tracts of land to expedite construction of the 30-acre $3,300,000 Clark Howell Homes just west of Techwood was begun yesterday in Fulton county superior court by the Atlanta Housing Authority. Judge Paul S. Etheridge set preliminary hearings for March 20.

The Clark Howell Homes, comprising more than 600 low-cost housing units, will be the first of four such projects undertaken by the housing authority in the $14,250,000 development here.

Hirsch and Smith and Candler, Cox and Lamb, law firms, filed the suits in behalf of the housing authority after negotiations for a "fair purchase price failed." Attorneys said other suits would be filed as circumstances warranted, but expressed the hope that amicable agreements can be reached to avoid litigation wherever possible.

They also said several condemnation suits will be mandatory to clear titles even where purchasers and sellers agree, but all the suits filed yesterday were ones in which the authority and property owners could not arrive at "any reasonable figure."

In addition to the property owners, the suits named Atlanta, Fulton county and the state of Georgia, explained as a formality due to the fact that the authority must have clear fee simple titles to all parcels of property free of any incumbrances—even tax liens.

Clark Howell Homes will be bounded on the east by Lovejoy street; south by Mills street; west by Luckie street, and north by a 10-foot alley extending from Luckie street to McAfee street between Gresham street and North avenue.

The project will lie to the south and west of Georgia Tech.

CLUBWOMEN PLAN STATE EXPOSITION

Georgia Products Show To Encourage Policy of 'Buy-at-Home.'

Products from Georgia's fields and factories will be displayed in a state exposition sponsored by the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs, May 15-20, at the city auditorium, Mrs. James R. Little, federation president, announced yesterday. The exposition will be part of a movement to encourage a "buy-at-home" policy.

"With the great World's Fair just opening in New York, presenting Georgia advantages and Georgia products to the rest of the world, Atlanta's federated women consider it especially appropriate to educate our own people to the vast scope of Georgia resources and Georgia products," Mrs. Little said.

For Whole State. "This particular period, when our pride in our state will be stimulated by the showing we make before the world in New York, is the time at which we can start a 'buy Georgia' movement among our own people, which will really put Georgia industry and Georgia products of all kinds years ahead in their rate of progress," the Atlanta club leader pointed out.

"The Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs feels that although the exposition will be held in Atlanta, it is an exposition of Georgia products for the whole state and of tremendous interest to the state federation. Mrs. Albert Hill, state president, has endorsed the project, and the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs also will pay to the state federation $10 for every $10 paid to a federated club in a county."

The exposition in Atlanta, Mrs. Little said, is being organized with the close co-operation of the agricultural extension department of the University of Georgia, the agricultural department of the state of Georgia, Georgia manufacturers and others.

Board of Directors. The board of directors for the exposition includes W. S. Brown, University of Georgia Extension Service; Columbus Roberts, commissioner of agriculture; C. F. Palmer, Eugene Harrington, Wiley Moore, past presidents of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; Charles J. Haden, Frank Shaw, industrial secretary, Atlanta Chamber of Commerce; T. M. Forbes, Miss Emily Woodward, past president of the Georgia Press Association; Mesdames James R. Little, A. Homer Carmichael, David Marx Jr., John K. Ottley, Charles J. Haden, Samuel Lumpkin, A. McD. Wilson, Ed L. Almand, Henry M. Nicholes, Edward F. Daniel, Norman Sharp, Raymond H. Wolfe, Murdock Walker, Oscar Palmour, George Ripley, Robert K. Rambo and Robin Wood.

Mrs. Little announced that Virgil W. Shepard, who will supervise installation of the Georgia exhibit at the New York World's Fair in April, will return to Atlanta to direct installation of the Georgia Exposition exhibits in the Atlanta auditorium in May, acting as managing director of the exposition here.

SHOT BY "UNLOADED" GUN. AUGUSTA, Ga., March 11.—Jimmie Jay, 19, was accidentally wounded Thursday while examining an "unloaded" pistol with his friend, Marvin Garrett. The bullet entered the youth's abdomen. His condition was reported serious.

Crushed Ankle Nets Steel Worker $7,500

A crushed ankle yesterday was worth $7,500 in Fulton county superior court—at least that was the verdict.

E. E. Peek, steel worker, sustained injuries in a parking lot operated by Thomas C. Cowan about two years ago, and filed suit seeking damages. The case was placed before a jury several months ago, and Cowan did not defend the suit. There was a mistrial because the jury reportedly could not agree whether to award Peek $100 or $500 damages.

Yesterday a Fulton county divorce jury, which accepted the case in Judge Virlyn B. Moore's division on agreement of Peek's counsel had written a verdict of $7,500 with the foreman being a railroad claim agent. Cowan refused to defend the suit for a second time.

'MOURNERS' BENCH' REVIVAL TO OPEN

Dr. Stoker To Conduct Meetings May 7.

An old-fashioned "mourners' bench" revival will open May 7 in a temporary tabernacle at Williams and Sixth streets, Dr. R. R. Stoker, general chairman and director of the evangelistic campaign, announced yesterday.

Dr. J. Fred Johnson, pastor of the First Cumberland Presbyterian church of Chattanooga, will lead the first six weeks of the campaign. He will be assisted by the Rev. Wyatt Lorimore, also of Chattanooga.

Dr. Stoker said gospel trucks with loudspeakers would be used to carry the campaign into every section of the city. The meetings will be sponsored by a group of Atlanta citizens.

Following this evangelistic campaign, Dr. J. Frank Norris, who Friday night closed a series of meetings at the Atlanta theater, will open another revival in the same tabernacle.

Here's How Termites SECRETLY ATTACK YOUR PROPERTY

Study this drawing. It shows you how termites can seriously damage your property before you know it. These tiny wood-eating insects nest in the ground. They enter a building by boring into wood in contact with the ground, or by tunneling through and over brick and masonry walls to reach the wood above. Once they gain entrance they start their work inside the wood, hidden from sight. Termites can undermine and weaken foundation timbers and wood-work without giving the slightest indication of their presence. . . . until costly repairs become necessary.

SOIL IMPROVEMENT BOOSTED IN GEORGIA

New High in Forage Crops Also Reached in 1938, Agronomist Reports.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. ATHENS, Ga., March 11.—Georgia farmers last year placed the largest acreage in history to soil improvement and forage crops, E. D. Alexander, Georgia Extension Service agronomist, reported today.

He said figures revealed that more than 10,000,000 pounds of winter legume seed were used in the state during 1938. This was enough to seed 381,116 acres in vetch, Austrian winter peas and crimson clover.

Austrian peas proved to be the most popular of the winter legumes, as farmers planted 218,678 acres to this protective winter cover crop. Hairy vetch ranked second, with 84,905 acres, and crimson clover was close behind with 77,286 acres. Monantha vetch was sown on 247 acres.

The agronomist said Georgia farmers last year planted 140,811 acres in ryegrass, 48,538 acres in corn, and 134,800 acres in alfalfa. They sowed 104,944 acres in lespedeza, and left 53,890 more acres to re-seed.

Permanent pastures were established on 38,120 acres in the state, and 28,706 additional acres were cleared for pastures preparatory to seeding. The reports also showed that winter legumes were sown in orchards on 59,759 acres.

EX-PRINCIPAL WINS SCHOOL POST FIGHT

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION. AUGUSTA, Ga., March 11.—Miss Ethel Young, former school principal here, demoted last year to a teacher's position with a $1,000 slash in salary, this week won a supreme court fight for return to her former position.

In her suit for reinstatement, Miss Young cited the Richmond tenure act, which provides that a teacher's position becomes permanent after three years unless vacated for legitimate reasons. Judge A. L. Franklin, in Richmond superior court, ruled that the board of education acted illegally, and the case was taken to the high court. Under the supreme court's ruling, Miss Young may recover the difference in salary due her and be returned to her former post.

Friday will make an interesting pate in this great musical gathering which will assemble approximately 2,000 students to participate in the competitive programs of soloists, small ensembles, choral organizations, and orchestras.

Mrs. Ruby White Brown, director of music in the Decatur schools, is chairman for the festival, assisted by a large and capable committee.

One of the features of the festival will be the presentation of the Charlotte Central High School Symphony Orchestra, with Robert C. Smith conducting, in a free concert for the festival participants and their families and friends at 1 o'clock Friday afternoon in the auditorium of Decatur Girls' High school. This orchestra has just returned from a guest appearance on the program of the National Music Educators' Conference in Louisville, where they made an outstanding success.

L. B. Sides is director of music in the Charlotte schools.

Choral critic for the festival will be Robert Getwood, director of the Vanderbilt University Glee Club, and dean of the music school of Peabody College; also director of the Old Harp Singers of radio fame. He will also serve as critic for the piano competitions. The festival will have critics instead of judges.

L. B. Sides, of Charlotte, will act as critic for the instrumental groups and orchestras.

The program will begin at 9 o'clock Friday morning, with high schools and junior high schools of the district appearing in alphabetical order, presenting their outstanding soloists, followed by the smaller ensembles, and later the large orchestras. The program will take place at Decatur Girls' High school and Decatur Boys' High. The same program will be followed Saturday with the elementary schools.

All programs are open to the public.

Outstanding Musicals.

A musical of super-excellence and super-artistry was presented by Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Elsas to a group of music-loving friends last Tuesday evening at their home in Druid Hills.

It was a program that will long be cherished in the memory of those who heard it, for it was one of those rare occasions when every performer was genuinely inspired and gave of his best.

Mrs. William R. Elsas opened the program playing the entire Sonata in C major, Opus 2, No. 3, by Beethoven, and giving it an interpretation that was masterful. Her technical command, and the clarity with which she essayed each theme, and the depth of feeling in her tone, made it masterpieces.

Mrs. Howard Claude Smith Jr., soprano, and T. Stanley Perry, tenor, gave generously of their vocal prowess and interpretative charm in a group of seven delightful duets by Dvorak and Schumann. Mrs. Charles Chalmers was the perfect accompanist.

Robert Harrison, violinist, with J. T. Pittman at the piano, gave a performance of the entire Mendelssohn "Concerto in E minor" for violin, that won for him unlimited praise for the seasoned artist, the amazing technique, the excellent intonation, and the emotional fervor with which he presented it.

Patricia Makinson, soprano, with Mrs. Chalmers at the piano, lent her gloriously beautiful and richly colored voice in two exquisite songs, "Traume," by Wagner, and "Devotion," by Strauss.

The program closed with Robert Harrison, violinist; Gerog Lindner, violinist; J. Thomas Hutcherson, cellist, and J. T. Pittman, pianist, giving a magnificent interpretation of three movements of the Brahms Piano Quartet, Opus 28. Especially did the fiery beauty of the last movement captivate the listeners. The whole work was presented with finished ensemble and polished phrasing, and a warmth of feeling that made each note enjoyable.

Nelson Eddy Coming.

It seems that the whole town awaits the coming of Nelson Eddy on Wednesday, March 29. His concert will be at the city auditorium, presented by Marvin MacDonald, as an extra attraction of the season.

Perhaps no other concert star has the public that Nelson Eddy possesses. Young and old, people in all walks of life know him through radio or movie appearances, love his voice, and are waiting for an opportunity to once again see him and hear him in person. Almost every day I am asked the question—Is it too late to get tickets to the Eddy concert? and my reply is—all I know is that Manager MacDonald says they are going like "hot cakes," so you had better get yours before it is too late!

"The Gondoliers."

The Atlanta Agnes Scott Alumnae Club will present the Agnes Scott Glee Club in the light opera, "The Gondoliers," at the Atlanta Woman's Club auditorium on Friday night, March 31, at 8:30 o'clock.

Tickets may be reserved by calling the alumnae office, Dearborn 1726, or Virginia Wood, at Walnut 8225.

Jeanette MacDonald Concert.

Jeanette MacDonald, of movie fame, will be presented in concert at the Royal theater in Columbus, under the auspices of the Wynnton Parent-Teachers Association, on Friday night, March 24, at 8:30 o'clock.

This is Miss MacDonald's debut tour on the American concert stage, though she made a nine-month concert tour of the capitals of Europe in 1931.

Three years ago she was offered a contract by the Metropolitan Opera Company, but movie contracts made it impossible for her to accept.

Born in Philadelphia, she began singing nursery rhymes at the age of three. She is entirely American trained.

Evans Concert Postponed.

Wilbur Evans, famous American baritone, who was scheduled to give a concert in Athens last Wednesday night, arrived in Athens Wednesday with a very bad throat and a temperature. He postponed his concert until Thursday night, but when his throat failed to react to treatment he was forced to cancel the engagement temporarily.

A new date—May 4—has been set for his Athens concert. Hugh Hodgson will be his accompanist for this concert.

Initiation Ceremony.

The initiation ceremony of the Alpha Epsilon Phi Club, of which Aida Tedder de Bray is counselor, was held in the Little Attic Playhouse last Saturday night, with Buena Langford, president, presiding. Honor guests were Mrs. John B. Guerry, president of the Georgia Federation of Music Clubs; Mrs. Harold Coolidge, president of the Atlanta Music Club, and Mrs. Waldo Oettinger, editor of the official page of the federation.

New members initiated into the club were Larry Engle, Evelyn Wilson, Betty Jane Elms, Betty Faye Garver, Bonnie Jean Garver, Dorothy Bridges, Betty Bob Walters and Mary Clem Kendall.

RIVERS' SON AND BRIDE SAIL FOR BERMUDA

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—E. D. Rivers Jr., son of the Governor of Georgia, and his bride, the former Rubie Ellison, sailed today aboard the Holland-American liner Volendam for a Bermuda wedding trip. Mrs. Rivers is the daughter of Mrs. J. Harold Hoover, of Orlando, Fla.

Upon their return the couple will live at the Shoreham hotel in Washington, D. C., where the Governor's son will work on preparations for the national convention of the Young Democrats Clubs of America at Pittsburgh in August.

UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA WILL OFFER 20 SCHOLARSHIPS

COMPETITIVE TESTS WILL BE PROVIDED FOR EACH DISTRICT

Caldwell Cites Growth of Student Body on Campus in Athens.

ATHENS, Ga., March 11.—(P) President Harmon W. Caldwell announced today 20 scholarships, divided among two districts from each congressional district in the state, would be awarded annually beginning next year.

He said the scholarships would be awarded by competitive examinations for which graduates of accredited high schools will be eligible.

In each congressional district a two-year tuition scholarship will be given to the highest ranking student on the examination and a one-year tuition scholarship to the next highest ranking student.

In announcing the new scholarships, Dr. Caldwell said the awards were in line with a movement at the university to attract superior high school graduates and to maintain a high scholastic standard.

He said 3,600 students have registered at the university this year, and that twice as many are in the university system as 10 years ago, although state funds have increased little more than half.

In recent years, he added, Georgia has seen fit to lend more financial support to the university, and already the results are apparent. But, he said, more money is needed to carry on equally with other universities.

STUDENTS REPAY ROTARIAN LOANS

$226,591 Lent by Fund in Atlanta, Only $5,407 Is 'Uncollectable.'

The Rotary Educational Foundation of Atlanta has loaned a total of $226,591 to 870 students in the 17 years since its inception, it was disclosed yesterday in the report of Kendall Weisiger, chairman.

"While first preference has been given to students who are residents of Atlanta, and second to those of Georgia, attending colleges in Atlanta and vicinity, the trustees have not felt bound by such territorial limits," the report states.

"So, of the 870 students helped, 483 have attended schools situated in Atlanta, 344 elsewhere in Georgia, and the remaining 63 in other parts of the United States and abroad."

"Of the 870 students assisted, 696 have now graduated, and 500 have fully repaid their borrowings, with interest at 6 per cent."

Few Fail to Repay.

In the 17 years of its operation, the fund has collected $181,096 in principal and interest, and passed to suspense $5,407 as being uncollectable.

The hope of the trustees that many of the beneficiaries of the fund would settle in the south and lend their skill and knowledge to the upbuilding of this region has been borne out by the recent analysis of the present whereabouts of 788 beneficiaries of the fund, now out of college, according to the report.

This analysis shows that 693 beneficiaries are in the southeast, 13 in the southwest, five in the west, 11 in the northwest, and 66 in the northeast.

Of the 693 in the southeast, 178 are in Atlanta and 320 of them in Georgia, outside Atlanta.

Many of the beneficiaries of the fund have become members of the Rotary Club and other civic organizations. A few have served their organizations as president.

Trustees of Fund.
Present trustees of the fund, named by the directors of the Rotary Club, are William D. Ellis III, Norman E. Elsas, Robert L. Foreman Jr., Ewing S. Humphreys, Thomas C. Law, James C. Malone, Richard Pope Smith, George Winship and Kendall Weisiger.

Past trustees are Charles D. Atkinson, Milton W. Bell, S. Frank Boykin, J. Bulow Campbell, Eugene M. Hudson, Ferd M. Kaufman, Willis A. Sutton and Harold B. Wey.

"Out of their long experience, the trustees have come to feel that the lending of money to worthy students is, in its essence, a manifestation of the democratic process," concludes the report, "since it enables more of the able men and women of the state to receive the benefits of higher education, despite their lack of the wherewithal with which to pay for it."

ATLANTA GIVES SITE FOR BOY SCOUT CAMP

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.
ROME, Ga., March 11.—Officers of the Northwest Georgia Council of Boy Scouts announced today Sidney H. Dew, of Atlanta, has donated a second 40-acre tract of land near the Everett Springs community, in Floyd county, for establishment of a district encampment for Boy Scouts.

After Mr. Dew presented the first tract to the council a few days ago, it was found that a right-of-way was needed to the property, so he donated another tract adjoining the first, bringing the total reservation to 80 acres of mountainous woodlands, with a clear creek and a fine spring for water supply.

Bethesda Orphanage To Benefit From Admissions to Three Famous Places; Azaleas and Other Blossoms Provide Gay Color for Approaching Spring.

SAVANNAH, Ga., March 11.—blossoms being in full flower at present.

(P)—Savannah gardens will attract a great many visitors from today through March 26, three of the most beautiful to be opened for the benefit of 200-year-old Bethesda Orphanage March 11 through April.

The famous Wormsloe Plantation, which has not recently been open to the public, will be an unusually interesting spot to be visited, and the Wellesley Manor Gardens of Judge Arthur W. Solomon at Grimsby's Point, and Kilarney and William Murphey's Gardens at Montgomery will be included in the tour.

Owners of the gardens have tended with care the azaleas which were threatened by the recent freeze. The greater part were saved through extensive precautionary measures, and the flowers are now a riotous mass of colors. Savannah itself is brilliant with the spectacle of multi-colored azaleas, which have been developed to such an extent of recent years that Forsyth park and all the squares in the heart of town are veritable flower beds. Avenues of the flaming azaleas are also planted in the southern section of the city and the length of Victory drive.

PIN-BALL THIEVES VISIT ROADHOUSES

Special TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MARIETTA, Ga., March 11.—Two well-dressed young men, riding in an expensive sedan, victimized at least three roadhouses in Cobb county and reaped a large harvest of nickels as the result of the newest "slicker" scheme reported to Sheriff G. H. McMillan.

Attendants at a roadhouse three miles north of Chattahoochee river on the Dixie highway, reported the pair stopped at the place today to play the pin-ball machines.

After several minutes, one of the men left the machines and engaged the attendants in conversation. Shortly afterwards, the strangers jumped into their car and departed.

An hour later, the owner of the machines, making his rounds to collect the nickels, discovered they had been robbed. He discovered the same at three other near-by roadhouses.

NASHVILLE DELAYS UTILITY PURCHASE

TVA Insists That City's and Chattanooga's Co-operation Is Essential.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., March 11.—(P)—The $78,600,000 purchase of Commonwealth & Southern Electric properties in Tennessee cannot be consummated without the co-operation and participation of Chattanooga and Nashville, TVA Chief Power Engineer J. A. Krug said tonight.

Krug's blunt statement came after he conferred during the day with TVA chiefs and laid before them the progress of negotiations under way in Chattanooga looking toward drafting of a purchase contract satisfactory to TVA, C. & S., and participating municipalities.

Final agreement on a contract has been delayed due to insistence by Nashville officials that more time is needed for a careful study of the situation, with an appraisal of electric properties by an independent agency to supplement the TVA's study.

"The participation by Nashville, Chattanooga and the TVA is essential to consummation of the proposed deal," Krug said. "No other single community's participation is necessary."

Chattanooga apparently is satisfied with its part in the program, Krug said.

CLAYTON TO BALLOT ON REPEAL SATURDAY

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

JONESBORO, Ga., March 11.—Clayton county voters will go to the polls next Saturday for a referendum on the question of county legalization of liquor sales.

Ordinary Alan Kemper set the election for March 18 after receiving a petition bearing approximately 1,500 names. Clayton county has a registration list of approximately 2,200 voters.

Repeal advocates here have based their appeal to the voters on the fact that revenues raised through licensed liquor sale will be used for school purposes.

TWO BRIDGES WASHED OUT.

NEWPORT, Ky., March 11.—(UP)—Two large steel bridges over 12-mile creek, in the eastern section of Campbell county, were washed away late today by a sudden rise of the creek, and roads were washed out, causing damage estimated at more than $125,000.

MISFORTUNE CREDITED WITH SAVING WORKMAN

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

MARIETTA, Ga., March 11.—A misfortune was credited today with saving the eyesight of E. W. Atkins, 44, cotton mill worker. After a piece of steel struck Atkins in the eye recently, a Marietta doctor removed it and prescribed specially constructed

"blinkers," which he instructed the patient to wear until the eye improved.

A "starting box" at the mill later caught fire and blew up, spraying hot oil over Atkins. Although he received first-degree burns, doctors today credited the blinkers with saving his eyesight and preventing serious consequences from the accident.

EXCAVATIONS MAY GIVE CLUE TO PRE-HISTORY OF GEORGIA

SCIENTISTS LOCATE THREE DIRT HOUSES NEAR BALL GROUND

Skeletons in Burial Area Found Resting in Folded Position.

CANTON, Ga., March 11.—(AP) New information on habits and customs of early inhabitants of the Etowah river valley in north Georgia, which eventually may aid scientists in the rewriting of the pre-history of Georgia, has been unearthed through archaeological explorations in Cherokee county.

Professor Robert Wauchope, of the University of Georgia, director of the WPA-State Archaeological Survey, said today the excavations thus far completed have produced evidence that the ancient Indians experienced difficulties with floods on the Etowah just as do the farmers there today. Three different mound sites have been examined and definite findings add to the knowledge of Indian village life there, he said.

Three-Stage Mound. On the F. E. Willbanks farm, WPA workers found a mound which had been built up in successive stages, he said, some of which evidently were added immediately after overflows of the river.

Deep deposits of river sand, such as now being laid down by the river, were found between layers of muck and clay which the Indians had carried in and heaped up to make a substructure for a religious or civic house of wood. Not far from the mound, archaeologists discovered the burying grounds of the village. Skeletons unearthed indicated the bodies had been buried in a folded position, characteristic of certain

Opened Earth Mounds Along the Etowah River Tell of Indians' Customs of Living

tribes, in graves cut into the red clay. Large stone slabs had been set up around the sides of the graves.

Ancient Houses. Three miles from Ball Ground, just north of Canton, on the property of Dr. H. L. Hendrix, workers unearthed remains of three houses, one built on top of the other and separated by thick black deposits of what Professor Wauchope termed "kitchen refuse."

This refuse is made up of broken pottery, animal bones, charcoal, clay beads, stone arrowheads, needles made of antlers and bones, bits of sea shells and other ordinary household articles of primitive design. The shells are believed to have been brought from the coast, and, therefore, were probably highly prized by the Indians, investigators said.

The two uppermost houses were nearly destroyed by frequent cultivation of the soil and by flooding, but the third, well protected by thick layers of earth, was found to be in excellent condition. The house was circular, surrounded by a shallow trench approached by a clay ramp. In the center, archaeologists found a burned clay fire place. Large stones, probably used to hold down the roof, were found scattered over the floor.

Original Post Holes. Position of the walls were traced by finding the original post holes. The holes were filled with mold from the wooden posts and with earth of different color from the red clay of the house floor, thus enabling the investigators to locate them.

Professor Wauchope explained the presence of the three houses, one above the other, by the theory that when earth washed in by flood waters accumulated to the floor level the ancient Indians merely built a new house on top of the old one.

Up the river from Ball Ground, where the Etowah makes a horseshoe bend near the mouth of Sitting Down creek, the survey party excavated a site on the property of Tom Holcomb. Here again the found a mound which had been built up in layers, the earth and clay fills having been brought in by hand, probably a basket load at a time. Thus far three graves have been uncovered there also.

Conch Shells Found. Like other upland Indians of Georgia, the ancient inhabitants of this village prized conch shells brought to them by trade from the coast. Professor Wauchope said. One entire conch was found with one body, and a device known as an "ear plug," a form of ear ring, made of conch shell, was found with another.

When the field work in Cherokee county has been completed the party expects to move to other sites on the banks of the Etowah.

Atlantan Quarantined Three Days On Ship With Moslem Pilgrims

Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby Writes of Going Almost to Walls of Mecca; Entered Desolate Palestine Where Fear and Armed Troops Rule.

Quarantined for three days on a Moslem pilgrim ship in the Red Sea after a trip almost to the walls of forbidden Mecca, Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, Atlanta psychologist and world traveler, found herself free for the first time in many weeks to write a letter home.

The letter arrived in The Constitution's office yesterday, nearly a month after it was mailed. Headed Khedivial Mail Line, Tor Sinai Peninsula, Egypt, and dated February 17, Mrs. Ashby's letter read:

"I arrived here at Tor early this morning and have to stay three days in quarantine before I proceed to Suez.

"My visit to the Hejaz, my stay at Djeddah, and the privilege of going within a few miles of Mecca make an outstanding chapter in my travel experience.

Visits Ancient Capital.

"Before coming into the Red Sea, I made a trip to the Sudan. From Khartoum I had a long trip through the desert to the ruins of Meroe, the ancient capital of Ethiopia. Many old temples have been excavated there and some things are still intact after more than 2,000 years. There is an interesting group of pyramids there also.

"In Syria I went to the Cedars of Lebanon, and found people skiing. Coming from Damascus over the Lebanon mountains I was

The relics uncovered in explorations thus far are being sent to the archaeological laboratory at the University of Georgia, Athens, for further study.

Professor Wauchope, in making announcement of his new findings, expressed hope that Georgians with information regarding other unexplored Indian sites would transmit such information to the Athens laboratory.

"I saw H. H. King Ibn Saud when he came from Mecca last Sunday, and the next day visited his palace outside the walls of Jeddah, and took two pictures which I hope will turn out well.

"In Luxor, I went into the Valley of the Kings, and through Tutankhamen's tomb, and then to Thebes. My guide told me how very long it used to take to visit these places by donkey. 'But,' he said, 'thanks to the American donkey now, we can do it in a few hours.'

"I asked what the American donkey? 'The automobile,' he said. 'Nearly all the cars in Egypt are American made.'

"I shall be in Cairo a week and then go into Jerusalem for two weeks.

"It is a bit more than I bargained for to have to stay in quarantine for three days here, but I am on a pilgrim ship and going to stop in Egypt, so I have to comply. There are two other pilgrim ships here. Two thousand pilgrims were marched off yesterday and given a dissection bath.

"Tor is interesting, curious and strange, but I shall be glad to get to Cairo. Getting to Cairo from where I've been will be like getting into Atlanta from Cairo. The places I have visited have been so strange, that Cairo will be almost like home."

SENTENCING OF SPIES DELAYED FOR TEST

LOS ANGELES, March 11.—(AP) Sentencing of two Russian-born men convicted yesterday of espionage was delayed today until March 20 to afford time for preparation of possibly a long legal fight to determine just what constitutes danger to the national defense under the espionage act of 1917.

Those convicted are Hafis Salich, 33, naturalized American and former operative of the United States naval intelligence service, and Mikhail Gorin, 34, Pacific coast manager of Intourist, Soviet travel agency.

35,000-ACRE TRACT TO BE DEVELOPED

Whitfield Land To Be Taken Out of Crops, Built Up for Pasture.

Special to THE CONSTITUTION.

DALTON, Ga., March 11.—The federal government's newest sub-marginal land purchase project, announced this week in Washington, will be made up of 35,000 Whitfield county acres that will be taken out of crops and put into pastures and forests.

The new project, located entirely within Whitfield county, is to be called the Limestone Valleys and Uplands Project of the Soil Conservation Service.

The predominant agricultural problem of the area is the continued misuse of the land resources through the cultivation of rough land not primarily suitable for crops. Cotton and corn are the main crops, but the yields are low and farming is carried on principally on a small patch basis.

It is proposed to develop, protect and control the use of the lands to be acquired so that a number of low-income families will have a better basis for making a living. Grazing privileges will be extended for the promotion of livestock to farmers remaining on privately owned land on which supplementary feed crops can be produced. Farm incomes will be further supplemented by a careful use of the wooded acreage.

The work will include the prevention of further soil erosion, fencing for establishment of pastures, the development of forest areas, including forest fire protection work, such as construction of fire lanes, and towers.

It is also proposed to establish recreational facilities in selected areas, and to encourage development.

Telephone Call As Robbers Rob Thwarts Bandits

A casual telephone call rang police, not so casually—and thwarted an armed robbery in a laundry at 1676 Peachtree street last night.

As reported to police, here's what happened:

C. A. Blackston, of 985 Deckner avenue, S. W., operator of the laundry, and his wife, were preparing to close when two negroes entered. Both drew pistols and ordered the couple to "show us the money."

"I wasn't a bit scared," Mrs. Blackston said afterward. "I told the bandits the money was in the rear, and they marched us toward the back.

"A few seconds later, I heard the front door open. In spite of the bandit, I walked toward the front of the store. The person who entered was a young man—I don't

JOE NEWTON FREED OF MURDER CHARGE IN DAUGHTRY DEATH

Four Already Under Life Sentence in Slaying of Wealthy Planter.

SYLVANIA, Ga., March 11.—(AP) Another chapter in the prolonged litigation resulting from the 1937 slaying of Charlie Daughtry, wealthy Screven county planter and naval stores operator, was written today with the acquittal of Joe Newton, Bloomingdale merchant, on a charge of murder.

The jury, minus one member who was excused on the last day of the trial because of illness, brought in its verdict after deliberating about two hours.

Newton, who denied any connection with the killing during the trial in the Screven county superior court, was tried with his son Ralph on the same charge last September. A deadlocked jury resulted then.

Already sentenced to life imprisonment in connection with the case are John Burns and Osborne Newton. Both have appeals for new trials pending. Lonnie Lanier, also sentenced to life, was granted a new trial by the supreme court last February. Aaron Nelson, negro, also is under life sentence. He was a state witness in the original trials.

Another development today in connection with Daughtry's death was the denial by Judge Charles Worrell of a motion for a new trial of a civil suit by B. W. Miller, administrator of the estate left by the prominent farmer.

The petition, filed by attorneys for Miss Daughtry, named Miller as complainer and Attorney Albert Cobb and Miss Daughtry as respondents.

Miller asked the court whether Miss Daughtry's share of the estate should be paid to her or Cobb. A jury in December returned a verdict giving $2,000 to Cobb, who was asking for one-half of Miss Daughtry's estate, which is valued at $25,000.

LENDING FOR HOMES SETS 9-YEAR RECORD

Big Gains Shown by Savings and Loan Bodies, Mostly for New Homes.

CHICAGO, March 11.—The largest dollar volume of home lending in any January for nine years was done by the savings, building and loan associations this year, the United States Building and Loan League reports. Their $55,567,000 estimated loan disbursements represented a net gain of 13.2 per cent over January, 1938, and more than half of the gain was accounted for by loans for building new homes, the rest of it by loans to buy existing properties.

A total of $19,488,000, or 35 per cent of the month's lending, went directly for construction of some kind, either the building of an entirely new house or the remodeling of an old one. This continued the emphasis upon job-making activities which has prevailed the past six months in the savings and loan associations' lending programs.

Clarence T. Rice, Kansas City, Kansas, president of the league points out that organized efforts to keep home building going on in winter as well as in the more seasonable months have had their part in maintaining the high percentage of savings and loan mortgage money diverted to these channels. As examples he cites the $1,264,000 construction loans by associations in New York state, and the $1,821,000 by those in Ohio as well as the $2,756,000 in California where home building is always in season. Illinois also made a creditable showing with $859,000 in construction loans by savings and loan associations in January.

The seasonal drop in total lending volume from December to January took place, but was only 13 per cent this year, Mr. Rice said, as compared with 22 per cent a year ago.

Building on Peachtree at Junction of W. Peachtree Is Sold.

Announcement was made during the week of two realty deals—one a sale, the other a lease—that involved around $80,000 or more.

The sale was of property at the southeast junction of Peachtree and West Peachtree street, near Baker street, to the Peachtree-Baker Corporation, understood to be a Ben J. Massell company. It was sold by the New York Life Insurance Company.

The property is improved with a two-story building, measuring 25 feet at the apex, 111 feet on the two Peachtree and 86.2 feet across the back line. Several retail concerns occupy the building.

Price was not disclosed, but it was understood to have been less than $50,000. It is assessed for city tax purposes at $60,000.

Prior to the erection of the present structure several years ago, the site was for many years improved with a hotel. The property originally was owned by the Ragan family.

The lease was a five-year transaction for a building, 109 Peachtree street, taken over by Schneider & Son, jewelers, involving a rental of approximately $30,000. Lesser was the estate of E. K. Lumpkin.

The lease, negotiated by the Adair Realty & Loan Company, realtors, is effective about April 15, and will double the lessee's present store space located next door. It is based on a percentage of sales with a minimum guaranteed rental. The property is being extensively remodeled.

A large number of realtors is expected to be on hand.

More than $30,000 in improvements in new buildings and a new theater has just been completed at the corner of Sylvan road and Dill avenue.

It is understood that a number of other commercial houses are soon to be erected in this particular section, making it one of the main trading spots on that side of the city.

The "Sylvan" theater is one of the most modern community houses in the city. Its seating capacity is 500, and it has all modern equipment, such as air-conditioning, R. C. A. sound equipment, automatic heat, new streamlined seats, and in every way right up to the minute.

D. A. V. Club and New Theater Building

Above is shown the new and comfortable clubrooms of Betty Harrison Jones Chapter No. 1, D. A. V.'s of the World War. Considerable amount has been spent on the house before making use of it as a clubhouse. It is located at 449 Seminole avenue, Little Five Points, and its use has been tendered free by the owner, Veteran Fred Long.

New theater, the "Sylvan," seating 500 and modern in every respect, has just been completed at the corner of Dill avenue and Sylvan road. It was built for George F. Longino, will be one of the Lucas & Jenkins' interests, and will be operated by the East Point Amusement Company. It will open to the public on Tuesday.

This community is blessed with excellent coarse aggregate for concrete and in most cases good foundation conditions. The local sands, or fine aggregates, are usually of inferior quality, being poorly graded, structurally unsound and contaminated with impurities detrimental to enduring concrete. Efforts in the past to remove these impurities by economical washing have failed. Examples of failures due to inferior sands are in evidence all over the city. The unfailing result of using a contaminated sand is the slow but inevitable disintegration of aggregates be investigated before construction is started, and clean, durable aggregates be selected. The initial cost of the concrete will be slightly higher but its life will be greatly increased.

In discussing the use of concrete in building construction, it is deemed advisable to start with the footings and work up, assuming that the footings have been determined in the design. It is extremely important to have footings of ample size to carry the wall loads and of sufficient spread to properly transmit this load to the soil according to its bearing power. While a 1-part cement, 2½-parts sand and 5-parts stone mix is used in many cases a 1-part cement, 2½-parts sand and 3½-parts stone mix will produce a much better quality of concrete and is much more capable of sustained bearing power. The additional strength and durability are well worth the small additional cost. All wall footings should be reinforced horizontally and longitudinally, the horizontal steel being the load bearing steel and the longitudinal steel being the temperature and belt steel. The majority of the major cracks in houses can be eliminated by proper care in design and construction of footings.

Basement Floors. Great care should be given to the construction of basement floors and walls. It is much easier and more economical to provide water-tightness during construction than later. A properly mixed and placed concrete of a 1-part cement, 2½-parts sand, 3½-parts stone mix with sound, well-graded aggregates will produce watertight floors and walls without the addition of admixtures or waterproofing compounds. The design of basement walls to support the superstructure usually provides sufficient thickness. Basement walls should be reinforced both horizontally and vertically. A basement floor should be at least 3 inches thick and preferably 4 inches thick. A properly placed floor will be watertight and a foundation conditions. The local sands, or fine aggregates, are usually of inferior quality, being poorly graded, structurally unsound and contaminated with impurities detrimental to enduring concrete. Efforts in the past to remove these impurities by economical washing have failed. Examples of failures due to inferior sands are in evidence all over the city. The unfailing result of using a contaminated sand is the slow but inevitable disintegration of aggregates be investigated before construction is started, and clean, durable aggregates be selected. The initial cost of the concrete will be slightly higher but its life will be greatly increased.

Proper Proportions. The workability of placability of concrete is controlled by the proper proportioning of fine and coarse aggregates. All mixes in which the volumetric proportion of coarse aggregate is twice that of the fine aggregate are harsh and undersanded. A 1-part cement, 2-parts sand, 4-parts stone mix, even when designed and controlled, is not a good mix, although it is in general use in home construction. It is undersanded from 7 to 10 per cent. A 1-part cement, 2½-parts sand, 3½-parts stone mix is much better and has good workability. The portland cement is the bonding agent, or glue, of the mix and water provides placability. Only sufficient water should be used to give placability and concrete should not be wet enough to flow into place but should be worked into place. The lower the water content per bag of cement within a reasonable limit, the greater the strength and durability of the concrete.

Listed below are a few items that should be given careful consideration in the use of concrete in home construction:

1. All concrete sections should be correctly designed for the work they will be subjected to in the structure.

Only Clean Aggregates.

2. Care should be exercised in selection of aggregates and only clean, durable aggregates should be used. Local creek sands are usually of inferior quality. Clean, durable, well-graded sands are available in Atlanta, being shipped

LUMBER DEALERS JOIN IN MOVEMENT 'BUILD HOME NOW'

National Body of 23,000 Members To Aid Chambers of Commerce.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 11.—The National Retail Lumber Dealers' Association today threw the full support of its 23,000 membership behind the program of the United States Chamber of Commerce to organize "Build Your Home Now" drives in communities all over the United States.

In an announcement scattered throughout the country, the national organization of building material suppliers urged the cooperation of material men with local chambers of commerce to promote home building, especially in the low-cost home brackets.

Model for the movement is the New Orleans, La., promotional plan inaugurated by that city's Association of Commerce, which has set a goal of 1,500 new homes at an average cost of $4,000 during 1939. The United States Chamber of Commerce is broadcasting details of this campaign to 400 chambers of commerce secretaries in as many communities with the suggestion that similar programs be launched in each.

The New Orleans drive is predicated on the theory that any aid to the building industry as a whole will also increase the business and profits of every person and firm engaged in business of any kind. These include real estate operators, building material dealers, contractors, architects, merchants, lawyers, financial agencies, public utilities, home furnishing retailers, appliance dealers, etc. The campaign contemplates the use of newspaper and radio advertising, signboards and street car signs, moving picture trailers, booklets and envelope inserts. The campaign is scheduled to continue for 13 weeks, starting March 19. The cost of the campaign is estimated at $14,000 to be subscribed by allied building and financial interests of the city.

Commenting on the movement today, Don A. Campbell, of Lebanon, Ky., president of the National Retail Lumber Dealers' Association asserted:

"It is through such efforts as this that focus public attention on housing and the opportunities for home ownership, that the building industry can begin to absorb the need for homes in the United States today—a need that has been variously estimated up to 750,000 homes a year for the next five years before balance between supply and demand can be reached."

FIGURES STRANGELY MATCH.

Amazed was the word to describe the post office staff of Bristol, Okla., Employees checked and rechecked figures, but their first total was correct. Receipts for the Bristol post office for the last quarter of 1938 were exactly—the penny—the same as for the final three months of 1937. The total was $7,422.43.

in. They are well worth the additional cost. Washed granite screenings or granite sand is an excellent fine aggregate.

3. Concrete should be placed as dry as possible to fit the needs of the particular job. Correctly designed mixes are easily secured from your local dealer, the Portland Cement Association, or the Atlanta Lumber and Building Supply Association.

Talk on Educational Program Given to Fulton County Council

Representative delegates from the 42 locals of the Fulton County Parent-Teacher Associations met in the Fulton County Council of Parents and Teachers on Wednesday, Mrs. Charles Trowbridge, president, presided.

M. E. Thompson, of the state Department of Education, spoke in answer to a request from the council that it be given a statement regarding legislative support of the state's educational program, in which the council was interested. Little assurance of the financial support for the payment of teachers' salaries or for the maintenance of the present educational program could be claimed at this time, Dr. Thompson said. He added that for some months the state Department of Education had been crippled because of uncertainties concerning financial support, though bank clearings and other business indications point to more than normal public ability to support the program which our last legislature launched for educational service to the state.

Resolutions from the Fulton county council asking for support of library service and adult education programs after public school teachers were paid for the term of school guaranteed by the state were passed by the council, as real measures of economy.

Mrs. W. L. Dunn, of the Rivers Association, chairman of Parent Education for the council, made an appeal for the well-conducted parent education class, after reporting more than 200 meetings for such study in Fulton, and the enrollment of more than 400 students.

A representative from Red Cross asked for the recommendation to Mrs. Trowbridge of local workers for the Red Cross roll call in April. Many associations have taken advantage of Red Cross classes and are preparing to lend active support to the campaign.

The nominating committee presented a slate with Mrs. Charles Trowbridge's renomination as president, which was unanimously adopted.

Many schools reported interesting projects, among them the use of the cultural book review benefit by the Benteen school with the gain of a new interest in literature as well as a fund for the treasury. The fact that the state convention is approaching brought the announcement that the President's Club will foster co-operative trips to Augusta and interested convention delegates may call the president.

At Parkerson the parent education program under the direction of Mrs. Jere Wells, has had very high enrollment as the discussion method of approach has been used. Mrs. Northcut, president of George F. Longino school, reported the culmination of endeavors on the part of the P-T-A. to purchase a mimeograph machine as an aid to the more quickly dispatched written material for their teachers and for Parent-Teacher notices.

Mrs. Earl Morris, of Ben Hill, reported active support by the Parent-Teacher and Campfire Girls, and the offer of a "Campship" to the girl giving most to the school community by her efforts in Campfire, the guardian, Miss Alma Wade, choosing the winner.

"HALF-SIZE" LE GANT OF YOUTHLASTIC

"You seem inches taller, Mother; you've lost that dumpy look."
"Yes, I'm short—but satisfied! You were right about 'Half-Size' Le Gant."

This mother's darling isn't exaggerating. "Half-Size" Le Gant, for shorter women who wear half-size dresses, does lend a definite illusion of length to the figure. And, like all Le Gants, it is different from ordinary corsets because it has the comfort of elastic with the control of cloth. No "yanking down this corset!"—it won't ride up.

Waycross Presents
Fine Arts Program

An enthusiastic group of members of the Waycross Woman's Club and their friends assembled recently at The Pines, home of the president, Mrs. Jack Williams. Mrs. W. G. Townsend, chairman of the department of fine arts, introduced the program with well chosen words about the enrichment of life gained through study of the arts. She announced that the program had been arranged by Miss Dolly Highsmith, talented chairman of the art division.

Art of the 18th and 19th centuries was presented by Mrs. J. T. Blalock read an informative paper on art and artists of this period. Each picture exhibited was posed in front of an attractive background of copies from the original in the "Album of Art." Miss Ruth Williams gave a sympathetic interpretation of the pictures at the piano during the readings. When Stuart's "Washington" was shown, George and Martha returned from the shadows of yesterday to complete the program with the stately steps of the minute.

Mrs. Davis Lane and Mrs. J. E. Penland opened the business session with singing, and Mrs. Herbert Bradshaw brought interesting resume of the club institute held in Valdosta, which was attended by 16 members of the club. President announced the eighth district convention to be held in Homerville on March 15 and named Mrs. J. M. Fesperman transportation chairman for all who would attend.

Miss Dolly Highsmith stated that the fine arts department would sponsor the "Exhibit of Georgia Artists" in April. Mrs. Raymond Paulk, chairman of the American home department, was congratulated upon winning a prize, and for the success of a series of lectures on "Home Decoration." Assisting hostesses were Mesdames Arthur Lott, J. M. Fesperman, Cecil Miller, S. G. Coleman, Harry M. Wilson and Miss Dolly Highsmith.

Canton Clubwomen
Hear Judge Jenkins.

The American citizenship department of which Mrs. Tom Arnold is chairman, presented the program at the recent Canton Woman's Club, with Judge J. H. Hawkins, of Marietta, judge of the superior court of the Blue Ridge circuit, as guest speaker.

Judge Hawkins emphasized the importance of American citizenship, especially now, with the turmoil of many foreign countries making Americans more appreciative of their own country. He outlined his remarks in a comparative manner pointing out the advantages of American citizenship and the opportunities it affords. He also cited the important part clubwomen have in molding a greater American citizenship and how they are aiding in "adjusting democracy for human welfare."

Mrs. C. E. Day Jr., with a group of her classroom pupils, rendered songs, "Our Flag" and "Lincoln." The business session was presided over by Mrs. J. W. Blackwell, first vice president. Mrs. C. K. Cobb, chairman of Tallulah Falls school, will sponsor a benefit entertainment at an early date and a proposed pilgrimage to the school during the spring is being planned. Mrs. J. H. Bagwell gave the report of $18 derived from a recent benefit in the anti-polio drive.

In the division of library service, Mrs. P. W. Jones announced new quarters had been secured for the Cherokee county library. She gave a resume of the library since its beginning two and one-half years ago with the nucleus of less than 100 books and now over 2,000 and serving that many patrons in the county.

Lexington Club Holds Recent Meeting.

Emory University forum leadership group members were recent guests of the Carrie Dyer Reading Club, of Acworth, home of the group's president, Mrs. E. M. Bailey. The luncheon honoring the visitors was in celebration of the forty-first anniversary of the club and charter members and past presidents were other honored guests. Mrs. R. C. Bean, of Atlanta, is fifth district chairman of sales of dogwood seals which has become an annual event. This drive is to aid in making Atlanta the "dogwood city." Proceeds from sales benefit individual clubs and Tallulah Falls school.

As a means of discovering "unseen gifts" in the boys and girls of the community, Hogansville Woman's Club sponsored a "talent show," with Tallulah Falls school the beneficiary. This original idea of Mrs. C. J. Killete, chairman for Tallulah, proved a brilliant success, furnishing the "dollar-a-member" not only for the Women's Club, but for the junior clubwomen. Mrs. Killete is urging all the clubs in the fourth talent to adopt this plan to find talent that needs recognition, and earn the coveted dollar-a-member goal. In appreciation of Mrs. Killete's efforts, she was presented with a gift from the Junior Club of which she was the founder.

'The American Short Story' Subject Of Fitzgerald Club Meeting

"The American Short Story" was the subject featuring the program at the recent meeting of Fitzgerald Writers' Club. Mrs. Nellie Lowman Williams was leader; Rev. Bascom Anthony Pafford was speaker; and Mrs. Beuna Vista Watson was special guest. Mrs. Leila Stephens entertained members at her home, and Mrs. Williams presented her subject by giving each one an opportunity to express their choice of one present-day short story writer.

Dr. Pafford, who is pastor of Central Methodist church, and is a brother of the author of "Lamb in His Bosom," winner of the Pulitzer prize, and a brother of a former Fitzgerald citizen, H. M. Pafford, of Waycross, gave an original "round-up" of his idea of the worth-while short story.

His strongest point was that obscene and vile literature should be avoided like a plague or an epidemic, as it is probably as hurtful to humanity as either. Dr. Pafford conducts the quarter-hour children's meeting at his church on Sunday morning.

There was a discussion by "The Round-Table-ers" and the conclusion was reached that the American short story was created first by Edgar Allan Poe almost 100 years ago, his predecessor and nearest rival for this fame was Washington Irving. The short story is one of the most popular forms of American fiction, and has taken a strong and

Inheritance Scholarship Given School
For Great-Great Niece of Tallulah Founder

By Bessie S. Stafford, Editor of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

We often hear of a baby "born with a gold spoon in its mouth," but Paul and Mildred Seydel's first grand baby was born on February 19 with a scholarship for Tallulah Falls school in her little hand.

Tiny Elizabeth Ruthford Seydel is a true inheritance child in loyalty to this great training school for girls and boys of the north Georgia Appalachians as her proud grandmother, Mildred Seydel, put on record in sending her check for $150 to Mrs. Hugh M. Dorsey Jr., who is scholarship chairman for the Young Matrons' Circle for Tallulah Falls school. Mildred Seydel's letter reads:

Dear Laura: You have a new cousin, Elizabeth Ruthford Seydel. The future belle arrived on Sunday, February 19. We hope for a long visit with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Seydel. Her grandmother, Mildred Seydel, wishes to give a scholarship to Tallulah Falls school in her name. You see, she is a true inheritance child, the great-granddaughter of John Ruthford, the founder of the school whose brother was John Ruthford, record in sending her check for $150 to Mrs. Hugh M. Dorsey Jr., who is scholarship chairman for the Young Matrons' Circle for Tallulah Falls school. Mildred Seydel's letter reads:

She gets the name of Elizabeth Ruthford from her paternal great-grandmother, Mrs. Vasser Woolley, who was Elizabeth Ruthford, of Athens. Mrs. Lupton was her aunt. Mrs. Dorsey was Laura Whitner and through her large family she also shares an inheritance of good deeds. She and little Elizabeth Ruthford Seydel are cousins. In addition to the Tallulah scholarship in her hand, little Elizabeth Ruthford Seydel may be said to have been born with a Tallulah hand-woven blanket over her crib for, at the earliest possible moment after the good news of the young lady's safe arrival reached Tallulah, the very prettiest new blanket just off the loom was speeding on its way to Atlanta to keep the "inheritance baby" warm and cozy.

Bessie Ruthford Woolley, who is a very young looking great-grandmother, by the way, wires her delight in the distinguished compliment of her namesake and "MADE IN JAPAN" REPLACED. An effect of anti-Japanese boycotts in various parts of the world was seen at Tokyo when mechanical toys were shipped abroad without the inscription, "Made in Japan." The word "foreign" was substituted for the more explicit mark of origin.

District conventions continue. On March 15 the eighth will be held in Homerville; on March 16 the tenth will convene in Lavonia; on March 18 the seventh will meet in Rockmart. This should be a season of revival and good fellowship that will be of lasting benefit.

Mrs. Albert M. Hill, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke to members of the West End Study Class of Atlanta Wednesday on "Women Meeting the Challenge of Democracy." Mrs. Hill's message was enthusiastically received by her listeners.

Junior Drama Club, which is a part of the Fitzgerald Women's Club, met recently and the play "Allison House," by Susan Glasspell, was reviewed by Mrs. Ralph McKenna. Yearbooks made by Mrs. Fred Astin and Mrs. C. A. Holtendorf were distributed and admired. Mrs. G. E. Ricker, junior member, was present. Mrs. Owen Seagraves was hostess and was assisted by Mrs. Jimmie Patrick.

Through the Vienna Woman's Club column of Dooly County Citizen interesting items come to state federation headquarters. Recent issues have carried the federation foundations: Tallulah Falls school and student aid, health legislation, community projects, club programs, and accounts of state meetings. Mrs. W. Ewing Griffin is the enterprising president of the Vienna Woman's Club.

The main steps in the development of the short story are: Poe standardized the short story; Hawthorne moralized it; Bret Hart colored it; Jack London vitalized it, and O. Henry humanized it.

Irving's "Rip Van Winkle" is perhaps the best loved short story ever written. Walt Whitman was the champion short story writer in the school of realism. He once wrote "What I tell for tell for precisely what it is. You shall stand by my side and look in the mirror with me."

Mark Twain and Joel Chandler Harris were among foremost writers of short story in America. Mrs. Mamie West Bass read an interesting paper concerning the background of the short story. She said the Chinese in fine arts and culture have been in advance of the Japanese down through the ages.

Mrs. I. Gelders urged the members to impress upon the youth of the community the necessity of reading the classics in their early life, especially between the ages of 10 and 18 years of age, when the mind is most impressionable.

Mrs. Ruth Porter Mullin related her experience in the "short story world" and it was brought out that she had written three short stories that had been accepted and really well paid for by a popular current magazine. Mrs. Mullin's favorite author, she said, is the French writer, Victor Hugo.

her keen gratification in the scholarship gift which is evidence that little Elizabeth will "begin life right" with the thought of helping others which is the foremost tradition of the baby's family.

Miss Armstrong And Dan Bowden Honored at Parties

Miss Alice Armstrong, whose marriage to John Daniel Bowden will be a social event of Tuesday, was honored at three parties on Saturday, the first being a luncheon at which Miss Margaret Preacher entertained at her home on Peachtree road.

Mrs. Lloyd Preacher and Mrs. B. Russell Burke, mother and sister of the hostess, assisted in entertaining.

A color motif of green and white predominated in the dining room, and covers of the guests were marked with miniature silver slippers filled with rice and tied with white tulle bows.

Guests were Miss Armstrong, Mrs. Patsy Q. Armstrong, Misses Alice Palmer and Alice Reynolds, of Jacksonville, Fla.; Mrs. A. Warren Rhodes, Misses Sybilla Pringle, Peggy Pringle, Isabel Boykin, Rachael Burton, Ida Akers and the hostess.

In the afternoon Miss Armstrong and her fiancé shared honors at the cocktail party at which Mrs. Francis Latimer Brown and her brother, Pete Latimer, were hosts at their home on Collier road.

Guests included the wedding personnel and a few close friends of the hosts. The house was effectively decorated with a profusion of pastel shaded spring flowers.

In the evening Miss Armstrong and Mr. Bowden shared honors at the party given by Mr. and Mrs. Griggs Shaefer, at the Piedmont Driving Club. Covers were placed for Miss Armstrong, Mr. Bowden and the members of their wedding party.

Miss Hobbs Weds Robert Lee Wilson.

DUBLIN, Ga., March 11.—The marriage of Miss Marion Anne Hobbs to Robert Lee Wilson, of Dublin, formerly of Atlanta, was solemnized March 5 in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allen Hobbs, in Dublin.

Dr. C. D. Graves, pastor of the First Baptist church of Dublin, officiated, and Noble Marshall and Mrs. J. R. Laney presented a musical program. Jack Baggett and Walter Hobbs Jr., lit the candles.

Frank Wilson, of Atlanta, was his brother's best man.

Miss Virginia Adams, of Thomaston, was maid of honor. She wore a model of cell blue trimmed in lime green and carried a bouquet of Hollyhock roses tied with satin ribbon.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an imported model of navy sheer, with matching accessories. Her flowers were gardenias showered with lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Wilson, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs, is the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Arnold, of Atlanta and Rock Hill, S. C. The late Judge and Mrs. A. L. Hobbs, prominent Laurens countians, are her paternal grandparents.

Mr. Wilson is the second son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lee Wilson, of Atlanta. He owns and operates the Western Auto Supply Company here, where he and his bride will reside after a wedding trip.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs entertained at a reception. They were assisted by Mesdames O. L. Chivers, B. H. Lord, Wesley Brinson, Howard Waldron, C. U. Smith, Charles Hicks, I. G. Prim, Clayton Cordell, Newton Michael, Dave Brandon and Misses Jeanette Chivers and Margaret Thompson.

Rev. B. A. Pafford, pastor, officiated in the presence of relatives and friends.

Miss Alice Lee McCormick presented a program of music, and Mrs. Roy Adams, soloist, sang. Candles were lighted by Jake Paulk and Woodrow Sutton.

The bride chose her two sisters as her attendants. Mrs. Thomas W. Aldred, of Davisboro, was matron of honor, and wore a model of sapphire blue crepe. Miss Marguerite Hattaway, of Sandersville, was maid of honor, and wore a gown of Suez rose alpaca. They wore hats of black straw and carried black kid bags adorned with rose carnations and valley lilies.

Their only ornaments were pearl necklaces, gifts from the bride. Ushers were Jake Paulk, C. B. Henderson, Woodrow Sutton and Clyde McCranie, all of Ocilla.

The bride entered with S. G. Pryor Jr., by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Vivian Maxwell, of Charlotte, N. C.

She wore a three-piece suit of beige Shetland wool, with navy blue accessories and a blouse of cyclamen chiffon. Her blue hat was trimmed with a veil, and her flowers were fluted orchids and valley lilies.

Mr. and Mrs. Tyler left for a wedding trip to Florida. Upon their return they will reside in the Whittle apartments in Ocilla.

MISS BETTY LOUISE DUTTON.

Engaging the sincere interest of a host of friends throughout Georgia and Ohio is the announcement made today by Mr. and Mrs. Wilmer C. Dutton of the betrothal of their daughter, Miss Betty Louise Dutton, to Charles Franklin Hunt, of Atlanta, formerly of Springfield, Ohio. The marriage of the popular young couple, which unites families long prominent in the social, cultural and financial annals of Ohio, will take place at a June ceremony.

Miss Dutton came with her parents to Atlanta for residence from Cincinnati, Ohio, last summer. Since that time she has been in a definite place for herself among younger social ranks by her great personal charm and her gracious, friendly manner. Petite and dainty, her patrician beauty combines hazel eyes and golden hair.

The elder daughter of her parents, the lovely bride-elect is the sister of Miss Peggy Dutton, of Atlanta, and of Wilmer C. Dutton Jr., who is a student at Dartmouth in Hanover, N. H. Her mother was before her marriage Miss Florence Bardsley, of Philadelphia, Pa., from whom the bride-to-be inherits much of her beauty and charm.

Miss Dutton was graduated from Miss Doherty's College Preparatory School for Girls in Cincinnati. Later she attended the University of Cincinnati, after which she became prominently identified as a leader in organization work of the younger set. Since coming to Atlanta she has been inducted into membership of the Girls' Circle for Tallulah Falls and the Rabun Gap-Nacoochee Club. Mr. Hunt, scion of a well-known Ohio family, is the only son of Mrs. Robert D. Hunt and the late Mr. Hunt, of Springfield. His mother was before her marriage Miss Stella Moore, of Springfield. Miss Betty Hunt, of Springfield, is his only sister.

Assisting the hosts in receiving their guests will be Miss Marjorie Carmichael, Miss Anne Scott Harman, Mesdames Homer Carmichael, Shine Fleetwood, Wallace Daniel and Ralph Ragan.

Miss Anna Belle Watson Weds John Blick Jr. at Church Ceremony

Miss Anna Belle Watson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson Watson, became the bride of John Strauchan Blick Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. John S. Blick, at a beautiful ceremony taking place yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock at the Peachtree Christian church.

The Rev. Dr. Robert W. Burns, pastor of the church, officiated in the presence of a number of friends and relatives. Mrs. Victor B. Clark, organist, and Robert Harrison, violinist, presented a musical program prior to and during the ceremony.

The church was beautifully decorated with a green and white color motif prevailing. Vases of Easter lilies were placed on each side of the beautiful marble altar. Cathedral candelabra holding lighted white tapers were arranged before a background of handsome palms.

Ushers were Dr. W. S. Dorrough, R. E. Lee Field, Edmund L. Plant, Jesse Draper and Dr. Harold McDonald and groomsmen were Jack Eastland, of Louisville, Ky.; Charlie Clements, of Buena Vista; Charles Montgomery and Littleton Little.

Miss Betty Jane Watson, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Edward B. Dodd, of Gainesville; Miss Jane Blick, sister of the groom, and Misses Nina Fuller and Elizabeth Blackshear. The attendants were gowned alike in becoming models of moonstone blue net shirred at the waist and featuring sweetheart necklines, large puffed sleeves and full double skirts trimmed with tiny bows and tulleman ribbon. They wore bandeaux of tulle and carried bouquets of tulleman roses, peach snapdragons and blue iris, tied with ribbon to match their bandeaux.

The flower girl, little Miss Louise Watson, cousin of the bride, preceded her down the aisle, carrying a basket of flower petals. She wore a miniature model of the gowns of the other attendants. Jimmy Watson, cousin of the bride, was ring-bearer and carried a white satin pillow on which rested a red rose, to which was tied the wedding band. He wore a white satin suit.

The lovely bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage, and they were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Roy T. Fricks. The bride's beauty was enhanced by her becoming model of tulip white duchesse satin, fashioned along simple line with a sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and a court train. Her illusion tulle veil was held in place with a coronet of handsome princess lace and orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of valley lilies and orchids.

Following the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Watson entertained at an informal reception at their home on Rumson road, guests including members of the wedding party, immediate relatives and out-of-town guests. The house was decorated throughout with white sweetpeas, white snapdragons and greenery. The bride's table in the dining-room was covered with a handsome lace cloth and had for its central decoration the beautifully embossed three-tiered wedding cake, flanked by Wedgwood candlesticks holding white tapers.

Mrs. Watson received her guests in a gown of orchid chiffon, made with elbow-length sleeves and a wide, flared skirt. She wore an orchid straw hat and a shoulder spray of deep purple orchids. Mrs. Blick, mother of the groom, wore japonica lace, posed over taffeta with a hat of matching shade and a bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies. Miss Mary Frances Yates kept the bride's book and Mrs. Sidney Penny assisted in entertaining. Mrs. Gladys King presented a program of accordion music during the evening.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Blick left on their wedding trip to Miami and Havana, Cuba, after which they will reside at 1208 Peachtree street. Mrs. Blick traveled in a navy blue wool suit with powder blue crepe blouse, a small hat of navy blue French straw and other navy blue accessories.

Atlanta College Belles Join Educational Tour of East

Luncheon Here Awaiting Visit by Entire Group

By Sally Forth.

"READIN', 'RITING AND 'RITHMETIC" is a familiar chant sung by the heavy of Atlanta girls attending various colleges in the nation. Especially is this true at Stephens College in Columbia, Mo., where 15 popular Atlanta belles are enrolled. Pictured on this page today are several Atlanta students shown taking part in activities at the Missouri institution. One of the most interesting projects sponsored by the college for its students is an annual educational tour that begins in March of each year. Atlanta students participating in the tour this season included Emmelyn Carter, George Dargan, Mary Jo Brownlee, Elnora Murrah and Dana Shadburn. The youthful travelers visited Washington, D. C., where they were tendered a reception by Mrs. Roosevelt at the White House. A motor trip from the national capital to near-by Annapolis, Md., where the school belles were entertained at the United States Naval Academy, was a high light of the trip. A stop at West Point for a visit to the military academy was another thrilling experience for the girls. Leaving their traveling classmates at Charleston, S. C., Emmelyn, George and Mary Jo came to Atlanta yesterday for an "off-the-record" visit with their parents. They will be joined here on Tuesday by other members of the tour for a day's stay in the south's Gate City. The entire group will be honored at a luncheon at Georgia Tech, after which they will visit Emory University. A highlight of the luncheon will be the entertainment planned by Dr. M. L. Brittain to include a performance by the Tech Glee Club and a dress parade on Grant field. In addition to the 250 college belles who will be honored, special guests will include Governor Rivers, Mayor Hartsfield, Bobby Jones, Charlie Yates, "Bitty" Grant and Dorothy Kirby. Atlanta girls attending Stephens include Marjorie Armstrong, Mary Jo Brownlee, Emmelyn Carter, Joy Clough, George Dargan, Lucille Hartsfield, Carolyn Loeb, Charlotte and Margaret Matthews, Elnora Murrah, Barbara Ann Nelson, Dana Shadburn, Mary Louise Bailey and Betsy Wyche, the latter being an army daughter, of Fort McPherson, and Peggy Marie Weill. Other representatives from the state include Charlotte Bacon and Lorraine Ferrell, of Albany; Ruth Anne O'Daniel, Augusta; Evelyn Bell, of Bolton; Martha Jane Blackwell, of Canton; Ann Chancellor and Katherine Richards, of Columbus; Helen Dietz, of Covington; Nancy Landreth and Virginia McElroy Stadman, of Fort Benning, and Ann Heatherly Corn and June Patten, of Macon. A FEATURE of the wedding reception honoring the former Rosemary Townley and George Smathers, whose marriage took place in Miami on Friday, was the toasting of the bridal couple.

Miss Allen Weds Mr. Butler At Decatur Methodist Church

The marriage of Miss Alice Angel Allen to Harry Thomas Butler, of Nashville, formerly of Atlanta, was solemnized yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at an impressive ceremony at the First Methodist church in Decatur.

Rev. J. W. O. McKibben performed the ceremony before an assemblage of relatives and friends.

A program of nuptial music was presented prior to and during the ceremony by Miss Frances Burgess, organist.

Palms, ferns and smilax formed a background around the altar for cathedral candelabra holding white tapers.

Baskets of calla lilies were placed on either side of the greenery and tulle bows marked the pews reserved for the families and close friends.

Miss Dorothy Elizabeth Smith was maid of honor and only attendant. She wore a model of dusty rose woolen, which featured a high neckline and worn with a short quilted jacket. A fuchsia colored felt hat and matching accessories completed her costume. She wore a shoulder bouquet of sweet-peas.

Ushers were Grover M. Chady, of Atlanta; Herbert Leek, Sam Buchanan, and DeVaughn Woods, of Nashville.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Milton Frank Allen, and they were met at the altar by the groom and Charles P. Edmondson, who was best man.

The bride wore a three-piece costume suit of azure blue wool. The full length coat was trimmed with blue fox fur. Her hat of azure felt was an off-the-face model, trimmed with gray and worn with a brief veil of gray. She wore navy accessories and her shoulder bouquet was formed of lavender orchids.

Following the service, Mr. and Mrs. Candler W. Butler, parents of the groom, entertained at an informal reception at their home on Ponce de Leon avenue in honor of their son and his bride. The guests included the bridal party, the families and a few close friends.

Receiving with the hosts were the bride's party and Mrs. A. S. Allen, mother of the bride. Palms and ferns with calla lilies and white snapdragons formed the decorations in the drawing room where the guests were received.

Assisting the hosts were Mesdames Bartow Fladger, Ira Hardin, Herman Jones, J. K. Starr and M. K. Pentecost.

The lace covered tea table was centered with a three-tiered wedding cake embossed in white and green and surrounded by white sweet peas and valley lilies. Crystal candelabra holding burning white tapers were placed on either side of the central arrangement.

Miss Nell Allison Becomes Bride Of Mr. Sheldon at Chapel Rites

At a twilight ceremony yesterday afternoon, Miss Nell Sprunt Allison, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Andrew Allison, of Kiangyin, China, became the bride of Charles Sheldon III in the Winship chapel of the First Presbyterian church. Dr. William V. Gardner, the pastor, assisted by Dr. J. Spole Lyons, performed the ceremony at 6 o'clock in the presence of members of the family and a limited number of friends of the young couple. Prior to and during the ceremony a musical program was given on the organ by Dr. Charles Sheldon Jr., the groom's father.

Palms and ferns, amid which were placed four pedestal baskets of Easter lilies, formed the attractive decorations. Cathedral candelabra holding burning white tapers cast a soft glow over the ensemble and added a note of solemnity to the occasion. Clusters of lilies tied with white satin ribbons marked the pews reserved for members of the two families.

Miss Jane Guthrie was the bride's maid of honor and only attendant. She was given in a model of fuchsia summer taffeta fashioned along becoming princess lines with puff sleeves and sweetheart neckline. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of yellow snapdragons and talisman roses.

The dainty bride entered with her brother, Alexander Allison, of Hampden-Sydney college in Virginia, by whom she was given in marriage and they were met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Brooks Sheldon, who was the best man.

She was a beautiful figure in her model of white lace fashioned with inserts of lace. The dress was on princess lines with the skirt widening in the back to form a graceful train. The short puffed sleeves and sweetheart neckline were becoming features. Her fingertip veil was caught to her hair by a coronet of lace and fastened on either side by clusters of orange blossoms. Her flowers were a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Mrs. Sheldon, the groom's mother, was gowned in a hyacinth pink chiffon, untrimmed, and her flowers were Joanna Hill roses. Mrs. M. E. Ward, of Ellenville, Miss., grandmother of the bride, wore black chiffon and her flowers were roses. Mrs. Robert B. Foster, of New Orleans, aunt of the bride, wore white chiffon and her flowers were also roses. Mrs. George Calhoun, the bride's cousin, was gowned in black marquisette trimmed in aquamarine and her flowers were sweetpeas and roses.

Miss Carol Rosenberg Becomes Bride of Dr. Jack Kelvin Bleich

Miss Carol Marjorie Rosenberg became the bride of Dr. Jack Kelvin Bleich, at a ceremony solemnized last evening in the main parlor of the Standard Club.

The ceremony was performed by Rabbi David Marx in the presence of the immediate families, and Kenneth Whittington, violinist, and Miss Frances Wallace, pianist, played a program of nuptial music.

The improvised altar was banked with palms and ferns before which were grouped pedestal baskets of white calla lilies. Cathedral candelabra holding white tapers flanked the rostrum, and vases of calla lilies formed the aisle through which the bridal party passed.

Miss Marie Rice was her cousin's only attendant. She was gowned in blue tulle over taffeta and she carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

The bride entered with her father, Dr. Herbert Jerome Rosenberg, and was met at the altar by the groom and his brother-in-law, J. Kuniansky, who was best man.

The bride wore a wedding gown of white tulle over satin, the bodice of which was fashioned of rose-point lace from her mother's wedding gown. The veil fell from a cap of lace trimmed with orange blossoms. An exquisite lace handkerchief first used by her maternal grandmother in her wedding in 1882 was carried by the bride. The bride's bouquet consisted of valley lilies centered with purple orchids.

Mrs. Herbert Rosenberg, mother of the bride, wore an imported lace dress of hyacinth blue and a shoulder bouquet of orchids.

After the ceremony the bride's parents entertained at a dinner in the main dining room of the club. The mantel was draped with smilax and beautified with pastel colored spring flowers, and guests were seated at a long banquet table which was adorned with vari-colored flowers.

Dr. and Mrs. Bleich left for a wedding trip to Varadero Beach, Cuba. The bride traveled in a three-piece suit of Azorean blue worn with navy accessories, and a shoulder spray of orchids. The young couple will reside at Hotel Briarcliff, 1050 Ponce de Leon avenue, when they return.

Mrs. Bleich is the sister of Herbert J. Rosenberg Jr., and Leman L. Rosenberg. Her maternal grandparents are Mrs. Marcus Loeb and the late Mr. Loeb, one of Atlanta's beloved pioneer citizens. Numbered among South Carolina's oldest families are her paternal grandparents, Mrs. Abe Rosenberg and the late Mr. Rosenberg. The bride graduated from Druid Hills' High school, and attended the University of Georgia.

Dr. Bleich is the son of Samuel Bleich and the late Mrs. Bleich, of this city. He is the brother of Mrs. I. Kuniansky, Miss Lillie Bleich, of Atlanta, and I. B. Bleich, of Washington, D. C. Dr. Bleich is an honor graduate of Boys' High school and of the Georgia School of Technology. dent in surgery in Sinal hospital and received special training in pathology at Johns Hopkins hospital, in Baltimore. For the past four years, the groom has been engaged in private practice here in Atlanta.

Georgia Baptist W. M. U. History To Be Published Soon by Mrs. Neal

Executive board of Georgia Baptist W. M. U. met Monday. The period of devotion was led by Mrs. W. O. Mitchell and was based on the third chapter of First Corinthians. The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Burney, of Waynesboro, state president. Georgia women have been organized 57 years. Mrs. W. J. Neal, who for 20 years was president of the union, and who now is connected with Bessie Tift College, is writing a history of this, the largest religious group in Georgia. The manuscript will soon be pressed. Every Baptist home should place a copy of this history in its library.

Miss Mary Christian, executive secretary-treasurer, and Miss Miriam Robinson, Young Peoples' secretary, have had a busy month aside from heavy official duties. The executive board voted to recommend to the annual W. M. U. meeting that another division be formed and that it be composed of a few associations from each of these two divisions, the new division to be known as the south-central. This would make three divisions of equal size and strength in south Georgia.

The four vice presidents present were Mesdames W. O. Mitchell, Peter Kittles, W. A. Adkins, and J. L. Clegg. Each has been busy planning association meetings, teaching mission study books and holding conferences. Georgia is divided into seven divisions. The southeast and the southwest divisions are unusually large. The executive board voted to recommend to the annual W. M. U. meeting that another division be formed and that it be composed of a few associations from each of these two divisions, the new division to be known as the south-central. This would make three divisions of equal size and strength in south Georgia.

THE MAN OF THE HOUR?

It may be too early, as yet, to foresee with confidence the outcome of the European conflict of national ambitions. The peoples of the Old World have not completely recovered from those well-founded jitters which have plagued them ever since dictatorships began their sword-rattling policies. There is still the possibility of war and, while that possibility exists, there can be no mental peace or security.

Nevertheless, recent developments and reports indicate the specter of war is today receding further and further into the background. Observers are almost unanimous in declaring the cause of peace is far stronger now than it was, even so short a while ago as one or two months.

Various factors have brought this about.

The aggressive nations, the totalitarian states of Germany and Italy, while still stronger in armed strength than the democracies—chiefly in aviation—are terribly vulnerable financially. Germany needs export trade—must have it. Italy is in desperate straits for cash. France and, even more, Britain, have the financial and economic strength. It is to the democracies the other nations must look for loans, for trade and for investment.

Evidence of this is seen in the eagerness with which the Hitler government has met proposals for a trade treaty with Britain and in the economic nature of the Italian proposals for concessions in the Mediterranean and North African areas.

In Spain, the end of the three-year civil war is near. Franco, even though he owes much to Germany and to Italy for military support in the field, must have money with which to rehabilitate his ravaged land. Like the others, he can only get this from England or France. The urgency of his financial need is apt to force him to co-operate with those two nations, rather than with his erstwhile allies.

Most important factor, in all probability, is the policy that has been pursued by President Roosevelt and the United States state department. The dictatorship nations know, today, the sympathies and the material support of America, in event of a European conflict, would be on the side of the democracies. And the economic, financial and moral weight of this country is more than sufficient to give any prospective aggressor pause.

In addition to this, England and France are proceeding fast with their programs of greater armament for defense. Not yet equal to Germany and Italy in the air, nevertheless they are rapidly catching up. It is now estimated their combined strength in war aviation will at least equal that of the Germans and Italians before the end of 1940. They are proving that, once awakened to danger, the peoples of democratic countries can be even more efficient than the regimented laborers of the authoritarian states.

Through the entire picture looms the figure of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, of Britain. Gradually, as fuller realization comes to the British people, his policy of "appeasement" is growing popular. Reasoning people are understanding that, behind the demands of Hitler and Mussolini, are certain considerations of justice. Honesty is compelling the world to acknowledge that the errors, the injustices and the crimes of the Versailles treaty must be undone.

But it is not in Britain alone that the popularity of Chamberlain and his policies grows. Despite rigid censorship, reports are seeping out of Germany that tell of the great popularity of the British statesman among the people there.

Kept in ignorance of world situations because of the rigid government control of the German press and radio, the people of the Reich only awoke to the near possibility of war, last September, when Hitler's mobilization of the army made it impossible to longer maintain their confidence in continued peace. At the same time, the British instituted a series of world news broadcasts by short wave radio and, before the Nazi government could prevent, a large part of the German population learned the truth, through these broadcasts.

The German people want peace as sincerely, as earnestly, as any people. They are realizing today that it was not Der Fuehrer, but Chamberlain who maintained world peace last year.

It begins to appear that, when the history of our period is finally written, it may be a history of international justice overcoming international greed, of peace maintained by honest acknowledgement of past mistakes and sincere effort to rectify them.

And the one figure which, it now seems probable, will go into history as the man of the age, the man who led a world away from fear into the path of peaceful security, is the figure of Neville Chamberlain. With his umbrella.

THE LUDLOW AMENDMENT

The Gallup Poll discloses a preponderant, though decreasing, majority in favor of the Ludlow proposal for a national referendum before war could be declared, except in the case of an attack on the United States, its possessions or territories, or the western hemisphere. By its very nature, the proposal is attractive to the citizens of the United States and on the surface is disarming.

But the fact that the Gallup survey reveals a sharp and steady drop in the sentiment for the proposal would indicate that at least some measure of thought is being applied to its application in reality.

The guilelessness of the suggestion is well demonstrated in the exception that war could only be declared without a vote of the people in the case of an attack upon the United States, etc. If a mass bombing raid on Paris or London were to be carried out, for example, it is probable the United States embassy would be struck. There is an attack upon the United States. The embassies fly the American flag and are United States soil.

Of course this is not the danger of the proposal. As in the instance of the neutrality act, it would tend toward the fostering of warlike tendencies on the part of other nations, since the hands of the executive branch of the government would be dangerously tied by this constitutional amendment. The national interest is not solely endangered by direct attacks on the United States or its territories. The seizure of the Azores under some conditions could not be tolerated, and prompt and effective action would become necessary to forestall their occupation by a hostile nation. Instead, under the Ludlow amendment, it would become necessary for the President—and the congress—to convince the American people this occupation must be met with force of arms, after which a vote would be required before the navy and the army could move from a base.

No war in which this country has been involved has failed to have the popular approval of the people, and it is safe to assume this would again be the case. The Ludlow amendment would then be a chasing of a shadow around the bush, with the added silliness of being a distinct danger to the safety of the country and more likely than not to lead to a situation in which war would be necessary under adverse conditions.

If the congress is not to be trusted to carefully weigh the issues of peace or war, and to restrain the executive branch, which it has the power to do, then it cannot be trusted to perform any of the other duties that the constitution has vested in that body. If it votes to submit the Ludlow amendment, then the nation will see the spectacle of the congress of the United States voting "no confidence" in the congress of the United States.

MORE OIL SOURCES NEEDED

It is an established fact that the cotton oil mills in Georgia have insufficient cottonseed available, year after year, to make an economic, profitable crush. The decline in cotton production in the state during the last 25 years struck a telling blow at an industry which, in itself, represents a business equal in value to one-third of cotton.

It is a mistake to look upon the cottonseed products industry as merely incidental to cotton. It is a thing unto itself—strong, virile, expansive—vital to the state and to the south, both industrially and agriculturally.

Thirty years ago there was ample seed, ample oil to meet the requirements of domestic consumption. No cottonseed oil was imported. However, each year has seen a slight falling behind in the ability of the industry, due to a lack of materials, to meet the demands for oil until, in 1936, some 200,000,000 pounds of cottonseed oil were imported.

The tendency now is to hold down cotton production. First, because of the surplus; second, because of the lack of a growing demand for more cotton. The cottonseed products industry, however, is in no such position. On the contrary, there has been a steady increase in the demand, as indicated by the importation of cottonseed oil, while, at the same time—to make the pinch a little more severe—the chief source of materials has been restricted in exact proportion to the government cotton acreage allotment.

Although the state of Georgia should not surrender another single cotton acre to non-production, it would doubtless prove generally profitable to produce other seeds and beans for crushing purposes. The oil mills need these materials in sufficient volume to justify a crush.

Unless additional crushing materials are produced to meet the increasing demands for vegetable oils and feed for the state's growing livestock industry, importations will gradually become larger and larger with a corresponding economic loss to the farmers and crushers of Georgia.

Politicians will have to pay their way into the New York fair. Now, if they have to kick in with income taxes, too, it will be hard to tell them from people.

With two great fairs to be walked around this summer, what are the alert shoe manufacturers doing about a number that will swell with the feet?

The high court speaks, and we have seen the last of the sitdown strike. Again the cry will be, "Workers, arise!" instead of "Brother, pull up a chair."

Those who know her say young Brenda Frazier has a heart of gold, that she is generous, and polite to old people and photographers for the press.

Thieves in California carried away half an acre of trees. Nothing like it has been seen since the last act of "Macbeth."

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

1929 TAKES A BEATING That boom year, 1929, has taken a beating from the manufacturers of Atlanta and Fulton county. Atlanta factories have produced a manufactured output valued at $152,704,389. That is the highest level ever attained, leaving the boom year 1929 in the wake by about $12,000,000. This is the result of the federal industrial census completed through 1927.

Fulton county, which in the 1935 census figures of the United States Bureau of Manufacturers, was the largest industrial center of the southeastern section, is almost sure to retain that honor.

The final figures not yet are released. Fulton county showed an industrial increase of almost $50,000,000. The boys yesterday were busy with the front page story, showing the industrial gain with diagrams, smoking factory chimneys and so on. The figures are there, too. But I want to put them down here for a bit of study as we go along.

Atlanta men and women employed as wage earners in factories—20,223
These were paid in wages—$18,331,980
The factories spent for materials, fuel, etc.—95,283,986
Value of produced products—152,704,389
Value added—57,420,403

Atlanta beat the 1929 industrial mark by a substantial margin. Remember, too, that department stores are up and that new records have been set by them. Recall, too, that bank clearings and retail trade are improved. When the 1938 industrial census is completed, another gain is anticipated.

Fulton county's record indicates to what extent Atlanta is Fulton county. Fulton county showed 27,142 wage earners, $24,079,590 paid in wages, $124,316,651 spent for materials, fuel, electricity, etc. The value of products manufactured $195,714,695 and a value added by manufacture of $71,389,044.

The state census reveals that:
Georgia men and women hired as factory wage earners—159,496
They received in wages—$110,501,344
Factories spent for materials, fuel, etc.—439,145,132
The value of products manufactured was—708,452,241
The value added in manufacture was—269,507,109
This reveals that Fulton county hires almost a fifth of all the factory workers; produces almost a third of the value of Georgia's manufacturing.

THE DISTURBING FACTOR This industrial news is remarkable news, indicating the growing importance of Atlanta and Georgia as an industrial state.

It ought to indicate to the legislature, now about to adjourn, just who pays the taxes and who makes the wheels go around. Industry and business do the job.

There is one very disturbing factor. Georgia is an agricultural state. Yet nowhere may it be proved. The disturbing fact of the statistics is that while Georgia's manufactured production was better than $708,000,000, her farm production was but $323,000,000 and her mineral production but $13,000,000.

This gives the state a total production of more than $1,000,000,000. It is pleasant to be ranked as a billion-dollar state. Yet it is disturbing to see the lack of balance between agriculture and industry. There, in the cold, clear figures of dollars and cents, is the problem in Georgia—of restoring agriculture to its proper place so that industry may not have to carry too much of the load of production, taxation, relief and the growing burdens produced by this lack of balance.

"WHAT ARE LEADERS?" Last week at Griffin, when the vegetable growers heard the farmers and legislature had behind out advertising, co-operation and grading standards, a grower asked:

"What are leaders? A leader must expound, may insist, may teach, yet if the people will not follow he is powerless."

That, of course, is true. Georgia's agricultural income is approximately 50 per cent cotton. Georgia has refused to believe in livestock, in poultry, in any other crop.

Georgia, the largest pork producing state in the southeast, still imports about $15,000,000 in pork products each year and about $10,000,000 in poultry and eggs.

The farmers have formed few co-operative organizations. They still try to work against the forces of economics as individuals. They can't do it.

The start must be made by the growers themselves. A thousand talks have been made. The ledger has been shown to be unbalanced and the reasons therefor explained. No one does anything. The President's report of the NEC on the economic condition of the south is, with some few exceptions, essentially true. Yet the individuals as yet have done little, or nothing, about it.

Industry has outstripped agriculture. Yet industry would be trebled in its output if the farmers could buy. Not until there is a balance between the two industries, of manufacture and agriculture, will there be a real forging ahead.

Half a Day Without Result.

This has been one of those days it is now Friday afternoon, about 2 o'clock and the entire forenoon has been spent in fruitless efforts to corral an idea for this Sunday column.

Did you ever have a day like that?

It is discouraging, too. For, when quitting time came around on Thursday, things were in good shape. Normal output for the remainder of the week would bring Sunday with that satisfying feeling of the job well in hand and nothing much to worry over.

But half a day has gone, with nothing to show for it. And the schedule is slipping behind. 'Fraid there'll have to be some extra time put in on Saturday to catch up.

Portrait of A Worried Fellow.

All morning he had done nothing but sit before a typewriter, stare at blank paper and realize mind has gone blanker than usual. Luckily, wrote that little verse yesterday. Not much good, but certainly as readable as anything that could be done today, in this frame of mind.

Every ten minutes of the forenoon there'd be an irritated arising from his chair. A meander through the office, disconsolate. Still, nary an idea.

Once, despite the rain, walked around the block. Paused at a newsstand and purchased a couple of picture magazines and the latest issue of Time.

Interesting article in Time about William Randolph Hearst. Read it, but it didn't sprout a suitable idea for this column.

Went to luncheon and eavesdropped on masculine and feminine conversation at near-by tables.

"There is one man I simply cannot stomach," said a male voice, near by. Glanced up, guiltily, but he wasn't talking about me. Someone else, across the room.

That waitress seemed in an unusual hurry. There! She split half a glass of water. Had to change tablecloth. Knew something like that would happen.

Lovely hostess greeted me with usual cheerful smile and cashier helped to make the day better, as always.

Looked at a few books and magazines, in library department. Why is it that you grow older? Is it the eyes failing, or an increasing spirit of the blaze? That "e" should have one of those little accent dingusses, but don't suppose composing room has it.

Cigarette Stubs.

Such fruitless efforts to concoct a column have something similar, in worry production, to the emotions of a new father, while waiting to hear the first cry of the newborn from the room where the miracle of life is being re-enacted.

Count fifteen cigarette stubs in the ashtrays on the desk. Too many, of course, but when a guy's nerves are ragged, he smokes subconsciously. Probably not so harmful, at that, for most of the stubs are exceptionally long. Hard on the incidental spending money, though.

What was that remark I overheard at lunch. Oh, yes.

Charming woman, probably about 40 years of age. Small and alert and attractive. Smart dresser, too. Says to her companion, another attractive creature:

"I've wished all my life that some man, other than Bill (must be her husband) would make love to me. It would be so satisfying. But they don't. And I'm left to worry that Bill is the only male in the world to whom I'm alluring."

Hum. Is that the way middle-aged women feel?

Reminds me of the line Trixie Friganza used on the vaudeville stage, when she was getting quite old.

"Girls," she'd say. "A horrid man followed me the street this afternoon. Winked at me, too. Even tried to speak, when I was looking in a show window. And, girls, was I proud? At my age, you know. I'm nearly 70!"

Well, the column space must be about filled, by this time. Guess I can quit. But, unless the ideas come more easily tomorrow, it's a mystery to me what's going to be in the Monday column.

Twenty-five Years Ago Today.

From the news columns of Thursday, March 12, 1914:

"Washington, D. C., March 11.—(Special)—Two regiments of infantry were ordered by the war department today to the Mexican border. The seventeenth, now stationed at Fort McPherson, Atlanta, and the ninth, stationed at Fort Logan, El Paso, will go to El Paso and Laredo and relieve the cavalry now there."

And Fifty Years Ago.

From the news columns of Tuesday, March 12, 1889:

"The exposition fund continues to gain. Yesterday's returns were most encouraging. Although only two of the committees reported yesterday, the total amount raised was increased by over one thousand dollars."

By M. ASHBY JONES.

HAVE FAITH IN DEMOCRACY.

I have been insisting that faith in democracy depends upon our faith in mankind, and that its success and perpetuity depends upon that faith. Democracy is very much a belief in the possibilities of man being a being. Who is your fellow man? According to your appraisal of his value, and his place in the scheme of the universe, will be your attitude toward him, and your treatment of him in the daily relations of life. If you consider him of secondary importance, as merely a means toward some end other than his own welfare, you will inevitably subordinate his interests and welfare to some other objectives.

If a man is something to be used for that which you consider higher and more valuable, then you will ruthlessly sacrifice his interests and welfare in the pursuit of those ends. If men are mere animals, the means and bounds of whose lives are marked by birth and death, then there are no reasons why they should not be bought and sold in the markets of the world, or regimented into forced routines for the support of the state. But if you believe that he is God-created, he becomes the supreme value of all the values on earth. Indeed, all other values, material wealth, the state or the church, must be determined by their service to the welfare of human life. Here is the magna charta of democracy, rooted in the fundamental religious faith, that man is God-made, and endowed with divine rights and capacities.

American Democracy. The story of American democracy is in perfect harmony with that statement. When our forefathers gathered in old Independence Hall in 1776 to justify before the decent opinion of the world their right to self-government, they wrote their democratic creed. It was something which they believed to be true, not about a Spaniard or a Frenchman, a Hollander or an Anglo-Saxon, but that which they believed to be true of "all men." That they were endowed by their Creator with certain "inalienable rights, life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," and that the authority which governed them should be the creature of their own divine right to choose.

This is a very real sense was their definition of a man, the kind of being they believed him to be. Afterward, when they came to translate this declaration of faith into political terms, they incorporated in our constitution, what we like to call the "Bill of Rights"—a fuller and more definite statement of those rights. First is freedom of religion, then follows freedom of speech and the press, then freedom of assembly and petition.

They are saying in these two great instruments, that a man, just because he is a man, without distinction of race or class, is a God-endowed being capable of governing himself.

The Conflict. Now we must frankly and fearlessly face the truth that every totalitarian government—whether we call it Nazism, Fascism, Communism or Militarism—distinctly denies the fundamental faith of democracy, in a God-created humanity endowed with inalienable rights. From the nature of such a government, its will must be dominant in every realm of life, and no freedom of variation can be allowed. The people, with their individual obligations and loyalties, their personal standards and aspirations, are subordinated to the objectives and purposes of the state. So the government must be the center and dictator in every area of life. In order to accomplish this, it must literally imprison on the mind of the nation.

It determines what books may be read, and what may be published in the newspapers. The radio is the mouthpiece of the state, while film and stage are used to dramatize the dictator's ideas. In order to maintain such complete control over the life of the people, it is absolutely necessary to take control over religion. To allow the people to choose their own God, is to allow them to choose a higher authority than that of the state. Such a God may issue orders at variance with those of the state, and reveal ideas in opposition to those of the state. So the totalitarian government must not necessarily seek to abolish religion, but to control it. If there is to be a God then the government will furnish one.

Religious Freedom. Just here we need to be clear in our thinking. Religion, if it is truly religion, and not an imitation form which has been imposed by force, must be free. The moment the slightest expression of force takes control, whether by state or church, religion is destroyed. Freedom is the very breath of religion. And it is just here that the democratic and totalitarian ideas face each other in a trustless conflict.

Let us of the democratic faith clearly understand that reconciliation, or appeasement, between these two means death to democracy. It is significantly revealing that the totalitarian governments, seeking to control the people, take charge of religion. In striking contrast, it is equally significant, that our forefathers, seeking to give the people control of their government, ordained in the constitution: "Congress shall make no law respecting the establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." If we would protect and preserve our democracy, we must protect and preserve in its purity this source-spring of our freedom—freedom of religion.

The State of Business---I

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY.

Accepting without reservation that Messrs. Morgenthau and Hopkins mean to achieve recovery, and that their friends and associates in the business world must not be too optimistic over the possibilities of a few good speeches and a few honest confessions achieving very much.

Because, the prolongation of the 1929-1932 depression and the stagnation of the stream of capital were not the products of psychological aberrations. They were definitely due to errors of judgment, errors in legislations, errors in administration, errors in attitude, resulting in a political-economic complex which must be dissolved before we can hope to create prosperous conditions in this country.

This complex its advocates term the New Deal. It is a curious confusion of socialistic, reformist and reactionary processes, all tending in the direction of an almost Fascistic concentration of public and private power in administrative agencies under the President. It provides the paradox of a trend toward Fascism with the objective of preserving democracy.

FAILED IN OBJECTIVES. It has failed in its three major objectives: 1. To reduce unemployment; 2. To establish a government-controlled but privately owned means of production and distribution; 3. To restore the 1928-29 figure for national income produced not by the risky profit and loss capitalistic, competitive process, but by government spending and lending, financed by increased taxes and increased public debts.

In all this, the New Deal has failed. Unemployment has increased. Government control has reduced the efficiency and capacity of industry. National income produced remains far below the 1928-29 figure—perhaps $65,000,000,000 for 1933-39, if that.

Let us avoid quarrels and recriminations. Let us simply produce the above balance sheet and sit down with Messrs. Morgenthau and Hopkins and anyone else who wants to come along, to see what can be done about it. Let us diagnose our problem honestly, not to knock anyone or to save anyone's face, not to affect the 1940 election. Let us enter this discussion with the sole objective of bringing an experimental period to a close, keeping whatever benefits have come from the experiments, discarding the scum that has risen to the surface. Let us go about this in a healthy way.

THE FLOW OF CAPITAL. Our first problem is to get privately held capital functioning again. Obviously, private capital is being hoarded in low-interest bearing accounts—government bonds, savings bank deposits, etc. This capital is non-productive. It is stagnant. It is as stagnant as the gold buried at Fort Knox or the silver buried at West Point.

That privately owned capital is held by the whole American people. It is true that the duPonts hold a piece of it and the Rockefellers hold a piece of it. But you and I also hold some. Every Sam and Jake and Bill and Maggie holds a piece of it. Every man who bought ten shares in Baloney, Inc., or who opened a hot dog stand on the road from Hopkunk to Punkhiko or a stationery store or a grocery store, all these have a piece of this hoarded capital.

As long as they hold it and hoard it, we shall be economically stagnant. Capital must work at creating new wealth. But capital can only work under two stimuli, either for (a) safe investments or (b) for speculative enterprises which involve profit or loss. It is the (b), the speculative process, the venture capital, that is most essential for prosperity. It is speculative capital that brings into the world new commodities, new services, new enterprises, new and higher standards of living.

This pen with which I write this is a product of several waves of speculative capital. The electric light which brightens a gloomy day, the radio which keeps me company while I work, the vacuum cleaner that I hear performing its service in another room, the steam heating radiators that keep out the cold and damp, the telephone at my elbow, the typewriter on my secretary's desk—all these and many more things and services that I could list are products of speculative capital.

THE RIGHT TO BE WRONG. The essence of the function of speculative capital is the right to use money, the right to be wrong, the right to risk one's own possessions, the right to take a chance in a fair, competitive market, the right to meet in that market similarly conditioned competitors and not the overwhelming power of government which never risks anything, because it can make its error "right" by legislation and taxation.

Speculative capital will only function within the rights which I have enumerated. Reject or reduce or qualify those rights and speculative capital takes to cover. Its owners hoard. In some countries, hoarding is accomplished by buying diamonds and other jewels or works of art, or by actually digging holes in the ground. Here it is done by buying tax-exempt government bonds or by maintaining inactive bank deposits.

No speeches, no good-will, no co-operation will change this situation. Raymond Clapper seems to believe that if the National Association of Manufacturers had invited Harry Hopkins to make a speech, some cataclysmic upsurge would have taken place. He has written at least two articles on the subject which made no sense to me, because even if the National Association of Manufacturers, the United States Chamber of Commerce, the Republican national committee and all the anti-New Deal organizations united to hold a monster demonstration for Harry Hopkins or even for Franklin Roosevelt, it would not change the picture. It is part of the New Deal error to assume that the "strike of capital" is an organized conspiracy. That is nonsense. Men hold on to their money because they feel that an investment will not be productive of favorable results under present conditions.

ERRORS MUST BE RIGHTED. It is the conditions then that have to be changed. That must be done by legislation. The errors of the New

The Law And the People

By PEYRE GAILLARD.

Not infrequently during the 150 years of the nation's history, sharp differences of opinion, resulting in much personal bitterness, have arisen between the senate and the President of the United States. Most of these, have been purely political differences to be forgotten in a few years.

Occasionally, however, these differences involved governmental principles of a far-reaching nature. Such was the recent flare-up over what appeared on the surface to be a routine presidential appointment of a federal judge.

In this case the potential federal jurist turned out to be "personally obnoxious" to the senators from Virginia, where the appointee, if confirmed by the senate, would have held court. Confirmation was, accordingly, refused. Of course the appointee wasn't actually obnoxious. As a matter of fact the senators didn't even know the gentleman, personally. So the term, "personally obnoxious," although freighted with a meaning somewhat akin to the average man's aversion to skunks, means nothing of the sort.

Figure of Speech. It would be possible, if indeed it hasn't already happened, for the most intelligent, the most lovable, the most all-round admired man in a state—and the most honest and best fitted for the job—to become personally obnoxious to senators under certain circumstances. The term is nothing more than a figure of speech to describe a situation rather than descriptive of the appointee himself or of the senators' feelings toward him.

Those far-sighted men who wrote the constitution of the United States had certain contingencies in mind when they phrased its several articles. They had just shaken loose from the strange hold of autocratic power. They were exceedingly wary of and on the qui vive for anything of a nature remotely resembling a one-man government.

They did not intend, for instance, that any man, any President, should have unrestricted power to fill vacancies or offices to be created in the future. They realized that such unrestricted power of appointment, under certain circumstances, without the approbation of the peoples' representatives in congress, actually could be utilized to change the form of government without the consent of the people.

Limitation on Power. It was felt it would then be too late for the people peacefully to do anything about it. They were not far enough removed, it should be remembered, from the shackles of an autocracy, to have forgotten its inconveniences. Hence that limitation on the appointive power "by and with the advice and consent of the senate"—to quote from the constitution.

President Franklin D. Roosevelt, in his open letter to the rejected Virginia appointee, pointed out that this rule of senatorial courtesy—rejected when and where personally obnoxious—"exists in no place in the constitution." He insisted that the operation of the rule gave "individual senators what amounts, in effect, to the power of appointment."

Practical Method. Neither of these premises seem to rest on particularly solid ground. It would obviously be impracticable for all the senators, 96 of them, to give advice on every federal appointment. It would be nothing less than an absurdity for a senator from Arizona or from Maine to give advice to the President on the appointment of a customs collector in Georgia. So a more practical method gradually developed out of experience. Eventually only the senators from the state in which the appointee lived, or in which the office to be filled was located, were consulted or asked for advice. This custom has been in usage so long it is now regarded as a part of the constitution.

If a President disregards this long established rule of seeking advice from the accepted senatorial source before appointing, he may look for trouble when the time comes to ask senatorial consent or confirmation. Senatorial courtesy is a thing unto itself. It has little regard for party affiliations. It is not to be taken lightly.

Fear of Spring. Oh, strange it is that I, a lover of spring, should fear the sudden birth of blossoms in rain. The songs that heralding robins sing, and April's conquering hail again—more strange it is that every joyous bird, and daffodil should make me like a cry.

When deep inside I know that golden flood of early sunlight, streaming from the sky, is no more beautiful. But once in spring, when I was very young, I gave my heart to a girl who was as bright as a star, and now bright flowers always bring a hundred thoughts of her who was a part of everything that tender April breathes. Whose words were sweet as lilacs laden with rain.

A Teacher Speaks. And I am paid to teach you dates And bloody facts of bloody wars While out beyond my window Trees are turning green And daffodils are yellow All along the street How can I think of kings and presidents And all the intricacies of politics When a redbird sings himself in all his gaudy splendor On this window sill My dear, my dear, let's all forget The tragic pattern of the past Remembering only—this day is spring!

—EDNA FLOYD.

Light. Across a tired face a gleam of sunlight fell That lighted up a distant view long hid In memory's well Upon the harbor's darkened face long after close of day I know the moon with tender grace will trace a silvery way And to a sorrowful heart that beats though slow and long years roll, A gentle voice from distant stars will tell.

ON THE RECORD

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

Mr. Hore-Belisha's statement in the house of commons to the effect that in case of war the British government would envisage sending 300,000 men to France sounds sensational, but is logical and inevitable should a general European war break out in which one or more continental powers contend with Britain and France.

Great Britain cannot defend herself on her own ground. The British Isles are too small and too vulnerable to make any such program at all feasible.

If there should be war the best thing that Britain could do would be the least costly in lives would be to move as many men to the battle line as quickly as possible and assure a quick and victorious outcome.

I am inclined to think that Mr. Hore-Belisha's statement—although a prognosis of fact—was intended again as a warning to the Nazi and Fascist governments.

For there is not the slightest doubt that these governments, following the incredible capitulation at Munich, had outlined a grandiose program for 1939.

Whether this program has been abandoned, modified, is, of course, a matter for speculation.

SENSATIONAL ARTICLE. But the "Journal des Debats" presumes to know what the program of the axis powers is, or was. A sensational article appeared in that paper this week. Its publication is the more significant because only a few days before the French woman journalist Genevieve Tabouis, in an article in "L'Oeuvre," had revealed in more vague terms what is now precisely stated in the "Journal des Debats."

Mademoiselle Tabouis's article brought her into sharp conflict with M. Bonnet, the French foreign minister, who had the article denied, naming Mademoiselle Tabouis and denouncing her in such unmeasured terms of reproach that the press association protested. But "L'Oeuvre" is a Left Wing paper, hostile to the Daladier-Bonnet policy.

The "Journal des Debats" cannot be so deceived. It is generally regarded as the organ of the Comite des Forges—the most powerful French industrial group. It has been pro-Bonnet, pro-appeasement and pro-Munich. The author of the article is a well known journalist, M. Bernus.

INSISTS ON VALIDITY.

The "Journal des Debats" insists that it is in possession of documents which show the validity of which set forth the plans adopted by the axis powers for 1939.

It says that the success of these plans depends on a surprise attack. Therefore, the "Journal des Debats" publishes them in the belief that the mere fact of their being known, provides that they are taken seriously by the French and British governments, may act as a preventive measure against their being put into practice.

This plan of the axis powers consisted in the first line of creating all sorts of difficulties for the western democracies on as many fronts as possible.

The occupation of the Island of Hainan by Japan was one move in this campaign.

The Italian campaign against France is another. Under the plan Italy would enormously reinforce her troops in Libya, looking toward French Somaliland and the agitation in Palestine and Syria would be pushed, if possible, to the point of revolution. Italian

BACK TO THE STICKS

By HAL STEED.

Riding on the highways you have smiled to yourself at the exaggerated local pride of small-town communities. You pass under the grandiloquent arch studied with electric bulbs which invites you to tarry in Jonesville, the friendly city in the foothills. Signs on the license tags of passing automobiles invite you to stop at such and such a place and see the waterfalls, the echoing cave, or other natural or unnatural wonders near by. You wonder at the utility of these signs, and have a feeling of superiority if you live in a large city.

Presently you see a sign on a New York automobile tag inviting you to visit the World's Fair in that city. Yes, New York, the most cynical, sophisticated and aloof of American cities, is adopting small-town ways. When did New York ever hold a fair before and solicit patronage from the rest of the United States? Such high enterprises were left to Chicago, St. Louis and other provincial cities. New York needed no advertising. If you went there for culture or to go on a bender and see some night life, you did so unsolicited. You were tolerated during your stay. You were not pressed to stay longer and to return.

Are Cities Doomed? Behind the World's Fair and this unenvied booster spirit of the metropolis is more significance than appears on the surface. It is a sign of the decentralization and decline of big cities. Henrik Van Loon says that in time, a couple of centuries or so, New York will have shrunk to the insignificance of a New England fishing village. Limitation of immigration upon which it thrived for so many decades is halting its growth. Tenement houses in large areas on the east and west sides formerly crowded by aliens have gone vacant. Tall buildings which had discounted a continued increase of population are being razed to save taxes. Competing glamor spots have sprung up. Hollywood is gradually monopolizing the show business, including the radio. Broadway is degenerating into a mid-way. Miami is enticing easterners with balmy weather, racing and night clubs. Mountain reservations, new coast regions, invite tourists who formerly went to New York and Atlantic City.

The movement away from cities

general mobilization would immediately follow.

Joint action was envisaged for a date as nearly as possible following the end of the Spanish civil war. At the agreed-upon moment Italy would officially formulate claims in Africa and in Europe, and these would be unequivocally backed by Hitler in a speech in which he would set forth German claims in the form of an ultimatum.

These would be accompanied by a lightning operation which, in the mind of Hitler, would bring immediate capitulation by the western powers. This operation would consist of a brusque attack against Holland and possibly Switzerland.

The German army would seize positions in these countries as "territorial pledges" under the pretense that the move was not for conquest but only a "provisional occupation" taken for purposes of "defense." (If this interpretation of what constitutes defense seems fantastic to us let us remember that the controlled German and Italian press has repeatedly defined "aggression" as resistance to just and right claims, with the axis powers determining unilaterally what claims are right and just.)

With German troops in Holland and possibly Switzerland threatening further action, Hitler would then list his demands and ask Britain and France to give immediate satisfaction.

HITLER MUST BE WARNED.

The "Journal des Debats" insists that it is necessary that Hitler should be warned immediately that his plans are known, his calculations are wrong, and the outcome of any such move will be catastrophic for Germany.

The "Journal des Debats" editorializes that the first gain will be made if Hitler knows that the benefit of surprise is lost, and it denies the governments to inform Hitler that they are aware of his intentions.

The article concludes with the words, "We are not in the habit of launching sensational information without proof, and we hope that this article will be taken seriously."

It is the belief of this column that the plan here envisaged exists. The Dutch and the Swiss have displayed the greatest apprehension in the last months. The Swiss borders are being fortified with a ring of steel. The tension in both countries has been enormous.

REASONS TO PAUSE.

But it is also the belief of this column that the sullen resistance of the German public since Munich to any further adventures and the exceptional solidarity shown by the western world have already given Hitler serious reasons to reconsider.

That the plan has been permanently abandoned, however, is not in the least likely. It will be actual again the moment the western democracies go to sleep.

It is this connection it is greatly to be hoped that congress will not indulge in any action which might at this time give comfort to the axis powers.

For the result of such a program as envisaged here would be either war or another capitulation. And the eventual end of this systematic aggrandizement will be, again, either war or general revolution. We ought either to repeal the neutrality act or let it stand as it is. But we certainly ought not to present to the world at this moment the spectacle of a nation divided on foreign policy. (Copyright, 1939, for The Constitution.)

NEW YORK SKYLINES

By CHARLES ESCOURT JR.

NEW YORK, March 11.—The news straight from the cash-register is that the town's plushiest saloon has been suffering from a severe lack of customers. This is the most drastic kind of suffering known to plush saloons, and so the place is supposed to be so desperate as to make the proprietor bend and twist and curl like bacon on a frying pan.

Your Uncle Charlie meant, this week, to tell you about a fellow named Garbo who works in the Spanish consulate here, but he has just been down bending over the grapevine and got this extra bit of news about the saloon. This fellow Garbo is getting sick and tired of hearing his friends call him "Big Feet Toots" and asking him whether he is really going to give up everything and marry Stokowski, and is a very cast all-gathered, but we'll just have to crowd him out of the paper.

Uncle Charlie also meant to tell you about Mary Ryan, who runs the lost and found department down at the Hotel McAlpin. What's lost mostly, she says, are pajamas and false teeth, but there's a new twist involved in the job. Once in a while, like the time a young married couple had a hair-pulling match in their room and slammed out of there never to see each other no more. A few days later, Mary got a letter from each, directing her to send a job with over articles to different addresses. Mary promptly passed a resolution that they'd have to come down together to establish ownership, and when they arrived, they fell into each other's arms and started to cry. Whether the job was of setting the property they came for if Mary hadn't hollered "Hey!" after them as they went arm-in-arm down the hall toward the big red setting sun. But we haven't got space for Mary, either.

Two-Fold Havoc. It is high time this tide of migration turned. It has worked a two-fold havoc. To the cities it has brought labor competition, burdens for the free hospitals and the community chests. It created slums, squalor and disease and it left behind it soil erosion and rural slums.

Rural electrification is already halting this migration. In time it will start a counter migration back to the land. For rural America it will bridge the gap between the eighteen-seventies and 1939.

In nearly every issue of our newspaper you read of a new electrical association supplying 200 miles or more of electric lines for rural areas. Festivals are held in near-by towns to celebrate the event. Displays of electrical appliances, refrigerators, radios and plumbing are shown. A new life of greater ease and of entertainment has begun. No wonder they celebrate!

New Farm Freedom. It was the lack of comfort and entertainment which drove young people from the farm. They refused to work all day at such drudgery as chopping wood and drawing water only to have to go to bed before 9 o'clock because of the gloom of oil lamps and lack of radio. Now they are staying on the farm, enjoying its comparative independence, and its new freedom. How many average city dwellers will envy them?

For most of the migrants to the cities were soon disillusioned. They found that only a few could own automobiles, sport club memberships, and do night life. For most people life in a city is a treadmill. The only part of it the average worker knows is the route by which he goes to and from the crowded suburb where he lives. His only recreation on Sundays and holidays is window shopping or deserted streets, or street car rides to crowded parks where he and his kind try desperately to forget their loneliness—and there is no loneliness like the loneliness of the city.

Bishop O'Hara, of the diocese of Savannah-Atlanta, outlines plan of crusade for decent literature in Lenten pastoral. The following quotations from the bishop's pastoral letter prove conclusively the ever-growing evil of indecent literature:

"Your attention has been called to the fact that, since the beginning of the depression, exactly 366 new magazines of lewd and immoral character have come into being. . . . It is estimated that lewd and off-color magazines have a circulation monthly of 15,000,000. . . . The mind of the United States government on this matter is clear; it forbids the sending of lewd literature through the mails.

If the government considers it a crime to disseminate immoral publications through the mails, why is it that we see such literature so abundantly displayed? . . . In order to check the increased and increasing extent of crime, it is necessary, in the first place, to bring home to the consciousness of society the responsibility of self-interest for the causes which result in crime. Indecent literature is an active cause of crime and the responsibility for it rests in large part upon society. The cure, consequently, is in educating society to its responsibility and in inspiring it with the will and with the enlightenment of self-interest to overcome this evil cause and condition. The place to stop the flood of crime among the youth of America is at the source. . . .

Wishing to do our part here in Georgia in the crusade to preserve our American youth of every creed and class from the immoral contagion of indecent literature, we ask all to co-operate in making this crusade fruitful and effective. As a first move in this campaign, you will be asked to sign, as previously stated, a 'pledge to aid public morality.' Your signature to members of the National Organization for Decent Literature. The bishop's pastoral is prefaced with these words: 'Dearly beloved in Christ, we cannot exaggerate the situation. Powerful agencies, with satanic designs are at work in the world bent on the destruction of souls. If the church does not speak up against this frightful scourge, who will? We to stand idly by when we behold a tragedy that is going on about us in the hearts of youth? The church would be faithless to her duty if she were to remain silent when the enemies of all that is good are slaying with might and main and with every means at their disposal to demoralize the world.'

Are we Americans so poor, after all? According to a paragraph in the Christian Advocate, Nashville: Results of a recent survey indicate that every dollar spent in the United States when spent is divided as follows: 24 cents is spent for living luxuries, 21 cents; waste, 12 cents; for government, 10 cents; 9 cents for crime; 2 cents for education, and for the church, 1 cent.

Methodists Report 5,000 New Members—The North Alabama conference is one of six conferences in Southern Methodism reporting in 1938 more than 5,000 members received on profession of faith. Its total was 5,505 of a grand total of 117,000 for the denomination. Incidentally, this grand total is the largest reported by the conference of this church in more than a decade, and compares with a total of 94,000 in 1937. Gallup Survey By DR. GEORGE GALLUP, Director, American Institute of Public Opinion. Copyright, 1939.

NEW YORK, March 11.—As Europe wonders whether there is to be a new military showdown between Britain and France on the one hand and the Rome-Berlin axis on the other, American public opinion is swinging into line behind President Roosevelt's policy of giving specific, concrete assistance to our World War allies in the event of another conflict.

Every government in Europe has known that American sympathies would lie with Britain and France in case of war, but a nation-wide survey by the American Institute of Public Opinion indicates today that this traditionally neutral country is willing to go much farther in implementing that sympathy than many careful observers—both in Washington and in European capitals—may have guessed.

Here is the way the rank and file voters in all parts of the United States are defining this country's role in the event of a war at the present time, the survey shows:

1. While the public is strongly opposed to becoming a party to another war, three voters in every four in the Institute survey favor selling food supplies to Britain and France. This would mean flour, sugar, meat and other staples that every nation—and especially insular Britain—requires in wartime.

2. Fifty-two per cent are willing to permit the sale of fighting planes and other war materials to the two countries in the event of such a war.

3. At this point, however, public opinion begins to draw the line. By an overwhelming majority (83%) the voters declare that the American army and navy should be kept out of any such conflict.

The first indication of how far Americans would be willing to go to help Britain and France came in an Institute survey published February 22, in which 69 per cent of the voters said they would favor doing "everything possible to help England and France win, except go to war ourselves."

Today's survey shows some of the actual steps they would be willing to take. The vote on the different propositions is:

"In case a war breaks out, should we sell Britain and France food supplies?" 76% YES 24% NO

"Should we sell them airplanes and other war materials?" 52% YES 48% NO

"Should we send our army and navy abroad to help England and France?" 17% YES 83% NO

Only one per cent of those interviewed said their sympathies would be with Germany and Italy in case of another major war. The great bulk of those who object to help England and France win, except go to war ourselves."

Christian Influence is Growing—Foreign missions as reviewed by the Madras conference reveal three salient facts, according to a statement issued by the Universal Christian Council on Life and Work. Condensed, these are as follows: 1. A shifting of missionary forces today from Asia toward Africa is very marked. Recent growth of the work in Africa is astonishing. The greatest possibilities seem now to be there. 2. Reductions in missionary income have not greatly reduced the number of stations or workers. A reason is the mission lands' churches' increasing sense of responsibility. 3. Despite depression, unrest, Godless movements in Europe, and attempted revival of native religions, the increase in number of Christians indicates that "the Kingdom of God is in the increase."

by the guests. Effervescent champagne was sipped from a much cherished loving cup, a valuable heirloom in the groom's family.

The handsome goblet was originally designed for George's great-grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nicholas Honaker, of Abington, Va., upon the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary. The gold from which it is made came from the mines owned by the groom's ancestors in Georgia.

The wedding reception, given by the bride's mother, Mrs. John Townley, took place on Di Lido island amid a setting of tropical beauty. Fragrant waxy gardenias predominated in the floral decorations, and the plaintive melodies of stringed instruments completed the glamorous effect.

Colorfully-attired guests who gathered to congratulate the bridal pair, dined at small tables shadowed by brilliantly striped umbrellas scattered over the lawn.

DR. T. D. ELLIS is in earnest about this matter of raising money to save Wesleyan College. When he spoke last Sunday at St. Mark church in behalf of the famous institution of learning, he practically moved the vast audience to tears.

Following his address, a lady who had given him the strictest attention, approached Dr. Ellis, who, by the way, heads Wesleyan's board of trustees.

"I have no money," she told him, "but I'll pray for Wesleyan."

"Lady," replied the speaker, "can't you give a dime? We want your prayers, of course, but money is our aim."

National Defense Week Observed By American Legion Auxiliary

By MRS. DAN H. DAVIS, State Director Publicity, American Legion Auxiliary.

The auxiliary to the Robert D. Collins post, of Perry, observed National Defense week with a fitting program at the recent meeting at the Legion home. G. W. Rhodes, Legionnaire and president of the Perry Kiwanis Club, spoke on National Defense, "Do we need national defense?" he asked. "We are facing a world in which there is no safety, except in strength and no security except in armed vigilance." He gave present day China, Ethiopia, Spain and Austria as examples. Mr. Rhodes said that keen observers believe there will be war, but he thinks America, if it could be sufficiently armed to protect not only her east and west coasts but the Canadian coast line and those of the countries south of her, is the power that can avert a world war. He urged doubling the navy, warships and army and tripling the air force and its equipment to keep America from being a nation to grovel in the dust.

Miss Rosalyn Paul gave a newspaper article on the attempt to change the national anthem. Mrs. Joe Mitchell sang "Dear Land of Home," and Mrs. J. M. Good sang "In Flanders Field." Miss Paul was the accompanist. Mrs. L. M. Paul Jr., American and national defense chairman, introduced the School of Technology and Clemson College. He is now connected with York Ice Machinery Corporation.

speaker and other numbers on the program. Committees were appointed by the president, Mrs. J. B. Calhoun, to plan for the Legion's birthday party on March 16. Hostesses were Mesdames C. E. McLendon, Joe Andrews, C. E. Andrews and Earl Ogletree. The members of the General Daniel C. Stewart chapter of the D. A. R. were guests.

Georgia must win! The Virginia department is running the Georgia department a close race in the membership contest which closes April 1. Mrs. R. G. Vinson, membership chairman, is offering a personal prize to the district director making the greatest numerical increase in membership between March 1 and April 1. Won't you challenge another district director in this race?

The auxiliary of the Ivory Woodward unit No. 127, of Buford, entertained the Ivory Woodward post members and 75 visiting Legionnaires and their wives at a banquet this week. After the banquet a handsome set of colors, gift of Bona Allen Jr., was presented to the post by Professor W. N. Nunn in behalf of Mr. Allen. Honorable DeLacey Allen, past commander of the Department of Georgia, was the principal speaker.

Barnesville American Legion auxiliary entertained with a birthday party recently at the Woman's Club. State Adjutant Stanley Jones was guest speaker. A number of officials of both the Legion and auxiliary attended. Among those invited were Mrs. Dan H. Davis, of Macon, Sixth district director; Mrs. J. E. Sorrells, of Macon, of Joseph N. Neel unit, and Mrs. Jack H. Hall, of Macon, Accompanying them was Mrs. R. L. Smith, also of Macon.

Have you had your birthday party yet? Don't forget the Legion is 20 years old this month. Mrs. W. S. Davison, state department president, and Logan Kelley, of Buford, were unable to be present this past week end in Atlanta, for the official visit of the national president due to serious illness. The auxiliary regrets Mrs. Davison's illness and hopes she will soon be completely recovered.

Combining the Wisdom of Past and Present

By LUKE GREENE.

Playboys and society sisters who go to college for a rip-roaring four-year vacation may soon find academic doors closed to them if an experiment proves successful at Oglethorpe University.

Dr. Thornwell Jacobs, president of Oglethorpe, thinks a college education today isn't what it used to be. It has become too standardized, he says. It no longer fits men and women to become outstanding leaders in their respective communities. He proposes to do something about the situation.

Consequently, he has worked out a plan whereby he will pick the seven best young men students he can find from the seven principal regions of the United States. They will enroll at Oglethorpe next fall with all expenses paid. Then the experiment will really begin.

Each of these seven student "guinea pigs" will take a college course that exceeds the ordinary college course in quantity and breadth by at least 100 per cent. It will be carefully selected by President Jacobs and will lead to a specific end.

Dr. Jacobs says this special course will "embrace an introduction to the whole world of human knowledge." As an example, he cited the treatment of modern language in the present-day college work. "The average boy studies one or two modern languages for a couple of years each and shortly thereafter forgets both of them to such an extent that he cannot speak either fluently, and a little later, cannot read either well," he said.

"Under my proposed program," he continued, "each of these seven men, when he leaves Oglethorpe, will be able to speak all of the principal modern languages with perfect fluency, to all intents and purposes, as well as he speaks English."

Sciences to be included in the course are physics, chemistry, biology, astronomy, geology, botany, anthropology, bacteriology, archaeology, physiology and anatomy. Special emphasis will be placed on government, economics and politics and on all of the expressive arts.

Briefly, Dr. Jacobs has prepared a course of study, encyclopedic in character, which includes and enlarges upon all of the old liberal arts subjects in addition to all other fundamentally important subjects.

Dr. Jacobs plans to bring each of these seven students from a different section of the United States. One will come from New England, one from the north Atlantic states, one from the south, one from the middlewest, one from the central west, one from the Pacific coast and one from the country-at-large. They will all be registered in the Lupton School of Liberal Arts. The university is now contacting superintendents of education at various points in these territories, requesting them to recommend students for the experiment.

Here are some of the students at Oglethorpe University who are looking forward to the inauguration of a novel experiment in education at the institution next fall. Dr. Thornwell Jacobs pointed out that any of these students would qualify for the experiment, but the real subjects will be imported from different sections of the country. Seated at the piano are Audrey Thurston and Mary Latta. Second row, left to right, are Clara Belle Huffman, Maurine Brooks, Deas Hamilton and Perrin Walker. Standing at the back are Jimmie Lanier, Phil Scales and Dick Tomlin.

No applicant will be accepted unless his standing is such that he may be spoken of as "the outstanding student in the community for the last decade," the president pointed out. The course will be rigid and will require a high degree of mental ability and determined application.

For a long time Dr. Jacobs has believed that the ordinary college course is no longer sufficient or efficient for its purpose.

"In the old days," he said, "a person who had enjoyed four years of study at a first-class college was so much better informed than other citizens of the community that, automatically, he became their leader in public matters. Men so prepared were in position to integrate the limited knowledge of their neighbors. They were equipped, so to speak, with intellectual telescopes and microscopes. They could see both farther and deeper than their fellowmen. Inevitably they became the leaders of their community because they saw life as a whole."

"The ordinary college education is no longer able to do this for those who pursue it. Most students who go to college now-a-days have in mind a purely utilitarian preparation for life. They want to earn a living and they feel that four years of preparation for earning that living will give them enough of the broadening and cultural side of life."

"In the meantime, the old liberal arts education has stayed put. It is no broader now than it was 100 years ago and compared with the intensive development of special courses leading to special degrees for special purposes, it has fallen behind."

"The graduate of the school of liberal arts today, after his four years of preparation to rule the world, finds himself very little more cultured and with scarcely a broader vision than his friend who took the course in engineering or accounting. The result is that although everybody is going to college, nobody's getting a college education."

Dr. Jacobs believes that unless something is done to remedy this situation the American college will be split in two. He continued:

"Half of it will go to the junior college and the other half to the professional school. This will mean that the educated citizenry of the country will all be specialists, each in his own limited field, and there will be no educated men in the United States, in a well-rounded sense, except those who have been wise enough to educate themselves without going to college or after leaving it. The country, therefore, will lack the thing that it needs most, namely, well-trained men who know everything about something and something about everything."

Terms and conditions under which the seven "guinea pig" students will be admitted to the university provide that they shall be recommended by the school authorities of their district as outstanding men in scholarship, leadership and character, and that they shall maintain this leadership throughout their stay at the university.

They will be subject to the same rules and regulations as other students. In fact, the only difference between them and other students will be their course of study.

"The most interesting part of this story will come after these young men leave college," Dr. Jacobs pointed out. "A record will be kept of their careers and the careers of their successors in the experiment to see whether such an education, at least 100 per cent broader and deeper than that ordinarily obtained by college graduates, has the effect of putting them in the position once enjoyed by college graduates. It will show whether such an education gives them the ability by virtue of their greater knowledge and wider information and better training to become proportionately greater leaders in all branches of human activities."

The check-up will cover, their success in their chosen professions or avocations, their qualities of leadership, their position in the community with respect to matters other than their profession or trade and their standing in those qualities which include not so much the making of a living as the making of a life.

"The time has come," Dr. Jacobs said, "when it is absolutely necessary that some men shall be trained to look over the heads of the myopic specialists and of the common herd; to see farther and more clearly than they do; to integrate all of their knowledge and to combine, as far as it is humanly possible, all of the wisdoms of the past and the present."

His idea is that one such man in any community is of more importance than 1,000 half-educated mass-products. He feels the colleges should devote less time to the education of "country-club loafers" and "embryonic crooks" and more time to the education of men of character who have the will and ability to learn.

The essence of the experiment is to give an exceptionally broad education to the exceptionally able student with the expectation of producing an exceptionally capable leader.

And if the experiment succeeds, Dr. Jacobs believes that other colleges and universities will have found a way whereby the American college may be restored to its former position of importance and dignity.

It may mean a revolution in the realm of education!

Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., Second Oldest in National Society

By YOLANDE GWIN.

The historic pre-eminence of the Atlanta Chapter, D. A. R., as the second oldest in the national society, as well as the first organized in Georgia, warrants special recognition upon the eve of the 41st state conference opening here on Tuesday, when several hundred daughters will attend.

Craigie House—the present one located on Piedmont avenue—is the home of the Atlanta Chapter, the first in the United States to own its own house. The present house was named after the Massachusetts building at the Cotton States and International Exposition held here in 1895. The building, one of the many erected by the various states for the exposition, was a replica of Craigie House, the home of H. W. Longfellow in Cambridge. Through the efforts of Mrs. Joseph Morgan, it was presented to the Atlanta Chapter and used as a chapter house until 1911. During the exposition, many visiting notables were entertained by the Atlanta Chapter, and in December, 1895, Honorable William Lovering came here to present the Massachusetts building to the Atlanta Chapter.

Although the chapter continued to meet at the house until 1911, plans for a permanent home were in the minds of the D. A. R., and during the regency of Mrs. William Dickson, in 1892-1894-1895, the second regent of the chapter, she secured from George W. Collier Sr. donation of the lot upon which the present house stands. Mrs. Frank Orme was regent in 1893 and initiated the first efforts toward providing a fund for erecting a chapter house. It was in the latter part of her regency that the Massachusetts building was presented to the chapter by the Honorable Lovering. It was during the regency of Mrs. W. D. Ellis in 1905 that she was instrumental in finding the deed to the lot on which the present chapter house stands on Piedmont avenue. The lot was presented by G. W. Collier, and $425.69 was raised for the building fund for the house during the regency of Mrs. Thomas H. Morgan, regent during 1906-1907. The following term, in 1908-1910, while Mrs. S. W. Foster was regent $1,000 was raised for the building fund, and old Craigie House was sold for $400. When Mrs. Joseph H. Morgan was regent in 1910-1912, financial dilemma in erection of the building was solved, with timely aid and money given by Captain George Hope, Judge J. N. Bateman and Major Joseph Morgan.

Mrs. S. W. Foster gave the memorial window to Mrs. Martha Berrien Duncan and Miss Junia McKinley, organizers of the chapter. On June 14, 1911, the new chapter house was opened. A piano was bought, gas heaters installed, and $628.21 paid on the debt of the chapter house during the regency of Mrs. Samuel D. Jones in 1912.

When $518.25 was raised during the regency of Mrs. James O. Wynn in 1913-1915, the last payment was made on the chapter house.

In the present chapter house there are many relics of historical value and interest, the most historical being the gavel owned by the chapter, the gift of Mrs. E. P. McDowell Wolff and made from the tree which grew by the grave of Patrick Henry. The gavel was used to open the first Continental Congress held in the Memorial Continental Hall.

To record the founding of the Atlanta Chapter, organization and founding of the national society must be recognized. The Atlanta Chapter's "mother," the national society, was founded at a call meeting on August 9, 1890, in the apartment of Mrs. Ellen Hardin Walworth at the Hotel Longhem in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Benjamin Harrison, wife of the President of the United States, was named president-general of the society. Following invitation to prominent women, with purposes of the society outlined and with requests that women with Revolutionary descent send in their names, 300 applicants were received by September 8.

On October 11, the organization meeting was held at the Strathmore Arms, the home of Mrs. Mary S. Lockwood. She was made historian general and 818 charter members were enrolled. Four members of the Atlanta chapter were listed as charter members of the national society, including Mrs. Aurelia R. McMillan, Mrs. John M. Slaton, Mrs. H. M. Patty and Mrs. Francis Block. It was recommended that "the society secure rooms and later a fire-proof building to deposit Revolutionary relics and historical papers." A committee was appointed and the ultimate result was the handsome Memorial Continental Hall, the Administration Building and Constitution Hall in Washington.

The first chapter of the national society was formed in Chicago March 20, 1891; the second in Atlanta April 15, 1891, and the third in New York April 19, 1891. The late Mrs. Augustus Ramon Salas, of Waynesboro, Ga., was in New York soon after the organization of the national society, and attended a meeting called to promote the organization of a chapter in that city. It was formed four days after the Atlanta Chapter. She applied for membership and her name was the second from Georgia placed on the roll of the N. S. D. A. R., the first being that of Miss Mary Hammond Washington, of Macon, who was No. 81, and who was admitted January 15, 1891. Mrs. Salas suggested the name of Mrs. Martha Berrien Duncan, of Atlanta, as honorary state regent from Georgia.

The Atlanta Chapter was organized at the home of Mrs. Duncan and Mrs. Henry Jackson was elected regent. In the organization, Miss Junia McKinley acted as genealogist. Mrs. Salas was made state regent and upon her resignation, Mrs. Henry Jackson was elected second state regent.

Charter members of the Atlanta Chapter were

Mrs. M. B. Duncan, Miss Junia McKinley, Mrs. Henry Jackson, Mrs. Hoke Smith, Mrs. McKinley Bussey, Miss Sara Frances Grant (now Mrs. John M. Slaton and the only living member of the chapter here), Mrs. Samuel Scott, Mrs. Porter King, Mrs. Jane L. Byers, Mrs. Robert C. Brown, Mrs. Hugh Hagan (now Mrs. Lucian Cocke, of Roanoke, Va., the only original member now living other than Mrs. Slaton), and Mrs. William L. Peel.

Among early members were Mrs. F. H. Orme, Mrs. Francis Block, Mrs. William Dickson, Mrs. Albert Cox, Mrs. H. M. Patty, Mrs. A. J. Orme, Mrs. J. G. Scrutchin, Miss Aurelia Roach (now Mrs. A. R. McMillan), Miss Nena Mitchell, Mrs. Alex Hopkins, Mrs. Reed Boylston, Mrs. John B. Gordon, Mrs. Francis Gordon Smith and Mrs. W. M. Layden. The first state conference was called by Mrs. S. B. C. Morgan, the state regent, and was held at

The Real Story of the Naming of the "Bulldogs"

By BILL MUNDAY.

So long controversial along the rialto in recent years, the mystery as to whom or to what must go the real credit for the name "Bulldogs" being accorded University of Georgia athletic teams, at last has been solved.

And all because George Du Maurier, in 1894, wrote a phenomenal best-seller, "Tribly." His book instantly became a sensation and was on every one's tongue and mind just as is "Gone With the Wind" today.

Almost simultaneously with the release of his masterpiece, here in Atlanta was born a solid white female Boston terrier—in time to be acquired by Charles H. Black Sr. Of course she could be christened only "Tribly."

Now in the fall of 1894 when Mr. Black was dispatched to the University to become a member of what has proved one of its most distinguished classes—that of 1898—naturally and boyishly he carried his pet.

Having enjoyed the book, all and sundry were fascinated by "Tribly," too. She soon became the campus pet and the mascot of the Chi Phi house. Daily "Tribly" trod down to old Herty Field with her master for football practice, running signals with the boys and playfully making herself very much in evidence.

"Pop" Warner, husky, tall, brawny, just turned 24 and a recent graduate of Cornell, was making his debut as Georgia's coach—one which was to net the "Red and Blackers" their first and only pigskin championship. But that is another story.

One morning "Tribly" failed to appear for her breakfast and, after a frantic search she was discovered proudly suckling her new-born brood—13 white puppies—and all alive.

Where there had been one mascot before, now there were 14. Tenderly her human friends cared for them. The pups grew fat and plump and ere long had reached the barking stage; then, began trekking on still weak underpinnings after their mother around the back yard.

But they were too young yet, thought "Tribly." She had a plan, though.

So, imagine a somber late fall afternoon when the fond mother appeared for a grid workout, with her children scampering after, darting through the warriors' legs and yelping and jumping as "Tribly" had been wont to do before they came.

"Well," suggested one of the players, "Tribly" has brought us a name, 'Bulldogs.' And all cured!

So, on each afternoon of a contest the boys would tie red and black ribbons around the necks of the mascot-in-chief and her offsprings, and so attired, they would appear as perhaps the first "sponsors" of southern football ever saw.

About a year ago, bemoaning the friendly tiff hither and yon agent the nicknaming of the "Bulldogs," Charles Mize, of Athens, himself of the class of 1898, penned a strong article objecting to other claims and reciting the story of "Tribly." It was published in a south Georgia paper.

Read at the Fortieth Reunion of the class in Athens last fall—which assembled 33 of the original 43 graduates—think of that—his action was unanimously sustained. Resolutions that "we presented the Bulldogs with their sports cognomen and deplore that 'Tribly' is not receiving her merited due as are we" also were adopted.

The lads of 1898 also pointed out that they were the first to wear cap and gown on Commencement Day.

Truly a most remarkable array they must have been! It was during their years that Georgia enjoyed its greatest prowess afield. Under Pop Warner they won, as already stated, the institution's first and only gridiron title. With the late and immortal Hughie Jennings as their coach, they rode to fame on the diamond and, directed by John Meehan, now a prominent Chicago attorney, they captured the Southern conference track championship.

Ever loyal to their alma mater, in after years, they have been on the firing line in every alumni activity. They have erected a bronze plate outside the wall of the Old College room, occupied as mates by Alexander H. Stephens and Dr. Crawford W. Long, honoring the memory of these two noted Georgians.

They love their heritage. But they don't desire the folks to forget "Tribly."

Joseph E. Johnston, "Hard Luck" General of the Confederacy

BY COLONEL THOMAS SPENCER.

On January 19, 1807, there was born in Virginia a baby—later named Robert Edward Lee. Two weeks later, in Prince Edward county, Virginia, February 3, 1807, another baby was born. This second baby was Joseph E. Johnston. Both these men entered the military academy at West Point in 1825. Both were graduated with honors in 1829. In West Point at the same time there was another man destined to play a great part in later years when the country was divided by war. This man was Jefferson Davis.

The trio—Davis, Johnston, Lee, were to be very prominent in the shaping of the Confederate States of America. This trio—Davis, Johnston, Lee—are inseparable as to events that followed with the coming of the War Between the States. It was Joe Johnston's ill luck that brought good luck to Lee.

It was the ill will of Davis that brought more of the ill luck to Johnston. Johnston, by the ill luck of being wounded at Seven Pines, Virginia, was to bring undying glory to Robert E. Lee. This same ill luck was to throw Joe Johnston into obscure commands—where, like Pierre Gustave T. Beauregard—he would be a great lost soldier in a great "lost cause." We can't separate the career of Joe Johnston from the thing we shall call "ill luck." Our English language can hardly supply better words.

Over a period of many years there has been much discussion as to the real merits of Joseph E. Johnston. Some of the historians and biographers have said he was great, others that he was not great. Some, to shield the real truth back of Joe Johnston's greatness, have had to slur over his career in the Confederacy, or to ignore the man altogether. To make of Johnston the real hero that he was, the writer must sacrifice some of the "greatness" of Jefferson Davis.

The trend seems to have been "don't hurt Davis if we must forget Johnston." Or, "we must build of Jefferson Davis a great character and forget Joe Johnston." However, Joe Johnston is going to walk through this story in his true light of greatness, and for a day be shown as he was—a great strategist of the great armies of the Confederate States of America, though, of course, I expect to be criticized for what I write. But—after all—it is the TRUTH we want of our history.

Let's call Joe Johnston "Ill Luck Joe" and see what is back of this ill luck. Maybe you have a better word for the events that dogged his career throughout the Mexican War and then the Civil War. Maybe you want to call it "lack of merit," or "lack of real quality." However, facts—the TRUTH—of the Johnston career will prove that there was no lack of quality or merit. On page 41, of J. W. Jones' "Life and Letters of Robert E. Lee" there is a reference in one of Lee's letters to the trip he and Joe Johnston made to Mexico during the Mexican War. Lee wrote, "I have a nice stateroom on board this ship," and "Joe Johnston and myself occupy it, but my poor Joe is so sick all the time I can do nothing with him." Yet this same Joe Johnston was almost physically perfect. Just the opposite of the ill luck that was to follow. One simply cannot separate ill luck from Joe Johnston.

Johnston's was a brilliant career in the Mexican War, yet War Department records show that Joe Johnston was wounded not less than FIVE times during the campaign in Mexico. Previous to the Mexican War, Johnston had been wounded in the Seminole War, he having received several wounds, plus thirty or more bullets that penetrated his clothes. In 1860—when the question arose as to who would be made quartermaster general of the United States army—four names were submitted. The names were Joe Johnston, Robert E. Lee, Charles Smith and Albert S. Johnston.

Of these four, the name of Joe Johnston was picked. This is important in events that followed—for one must later remember that officers who were formerly in the United States army and who offered their services for the Confederacy were to be picked and rated by the rank they had formerly held in the United States army. Remembering this, one will see another link that was forged in the chain of ill luck that seemed to pursue Johnston through the four years of the hell of the War Between the States. One simply cannot separate Joe Johnston from the ill luck. The thing actually becomes a part of him. That—his severest critics—must admit.

At the break of the war Johnston resigned from the United States army—headed for Virginia—and offered his services to the Confederacy. Joe Johnston could not have done less. He came of a fighting family. His father had been a lieutenant under Robert E. Lee's father—the famous "Light Horse Harry" Lee of Revolutionary fame. Joe Johnston was first and last a great soldier. Johnston was assigned to command in the valley of Virginia—there facing the Union leader, Patterson. The Federals far outnumbered the Rebels. To the east—around Manassas—lay another Confederate army. This army was commanded by P. G. T. Beauregard. Coming out of Washington was Brigadier General Irvin McDowell with his "Grand" army of Federals—marching on Manassas (Bull Run)—where he was to start his effort to "drive the damn Rebels back into Richmond."

The time actually became the hero of Sumter. He eluded Patterson—moved on Bull Run—and arrived in time to take joint command in the first great battle of the war. On that 21st July, 1861, the Rebels whipped the Yank—pushed him back into Washington—and names heretofore unheard of became names of magic in the Confederacy. Beauregard already the hero of Sumter was again a hero. Joe Johnston had made for himself a name of greatness. B. E. Lee, of South Carolina, lay dead, but not until he had nicknamed the great Jackson as "Stonewall." "Jeb" Stuart was in the start of his greatness.

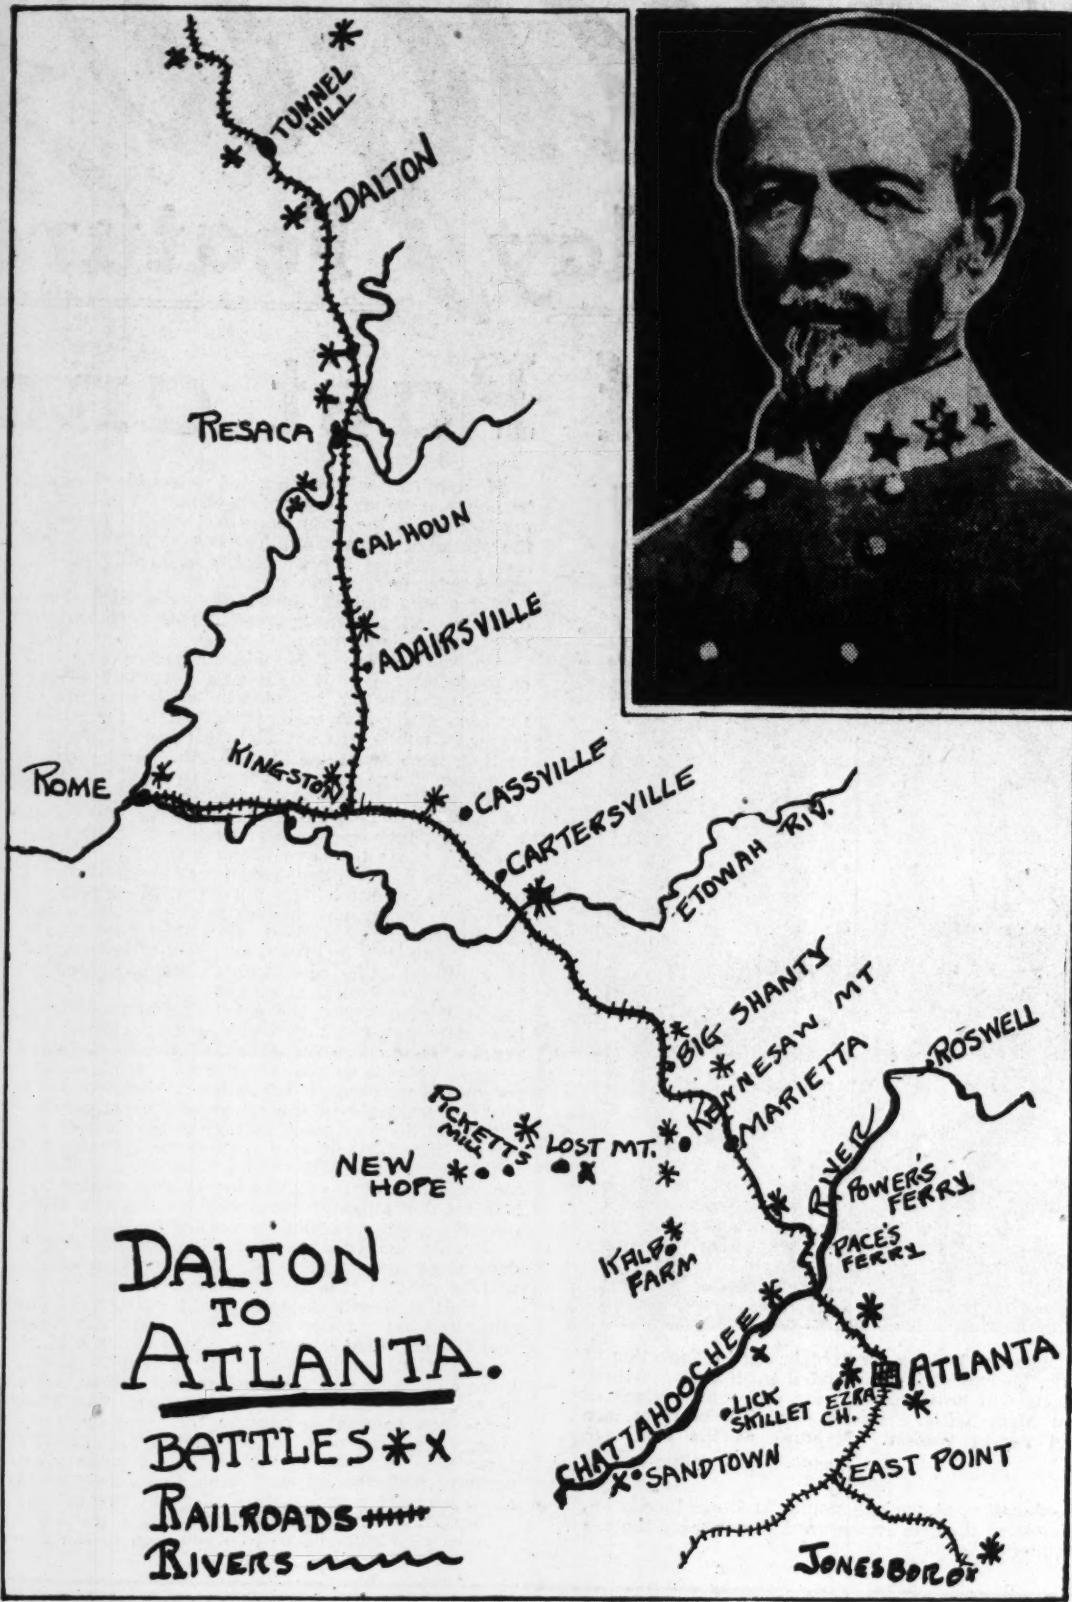

A boy from Alabama—Joe Felham—was noted as being efficient as a cannoneer. Bartow of Georgia, was dead. Joe Johnston, in the midst of the fighting, had grabbed a standard and led a badly battered regiment back into action. Yes, night of 21st July, 1861, found the Confederates victors in a none-too-well-conducted battle—yet a battle that made and broke men. The two commanders—Joe Johnston and Beauregard—were to later be shoved from the hero pedestal—and into oblivion.

WRATH VISITED UPON JOHNSTON.

As Beauregard had suffered at the hands of Davis—so was Joe Johnston to feel the wrath of the only President of the Confederacy. It is a certain fact that Davis and Johnston were not friendly from the start of the war to the end. Certainly nothing can be more harmful to a general of Johnston's type than to have the President of the Confederacy entirely prejudiced against him. The sum total was that the south lost a great leader during many of the trying months of the war—and Joe Johnston headed obscure commands that did not exist, or, existing, carried no authority.

One cannot put aside the fact that the enmity between Davis and his lieutenants hurt the chances of victory for the south. The Atlanta force of July 18, 1864, proved this all too true. But more of that later. The truth of the Davis-Johnston controversy is that Davis had a way of shunting Joe Johnston into a command just at a time when Johnston's chances of accomplishing something were small. The fact we are not going to be able to get away from in any truthful story that has to do with Joe Johnston. The Vicksburg affair proved that Johnston would never be given the support from Davis that was needed for victory. Of course some will say "One cannot blame all of Johnston's ill luck on the mere fact that he was wounded" or "one cannot blame all of Joe Johnston's ill luck on the fact that Davis hated the man."

No, it is true that all of Johnston's ill luck cannot be blamed on wounds—or on Davis. Yet we cannot separate his ill luck from the hatred of Davis. No man in the service of the Confederacy exposed himself to more danger than this Johnston—yet this same Joe Johnston used his every effort to keep his own men out of danger. He knew every life must be saved for the Confederacy, and his every move shows plainly that he made every effort to keep his men from being killed. His masterly retreat from Dalton to Atlanta proves this to be true.

After first Bull Run, the Federals had decided to make another try at capturing Richmond. A great Yankee hero—fresh from victory in West Virginia—was to now command the armies of the Union. This new general—who won politically as McDowell had—was the dashing McClellan, without question the greatest Union general of the war. His route to Richmond was to be from the eastern shore, up the peninsula route, to Richmond. To stop that move Johnston moved his army nearer to Richmond—moved in between McClellan and that city—and then followed on April 5, 1862—McClellan's siege of Yorktown, and Johnston's withdrawal toward Richmond. McClellan moved to within the very outskirts of Richmond.

Certainly late May of 1862 found the city of Richmond almost in the hands of the Federals. On the railroad which leads from Richmond to the York river there was a little station called Fair Oaks—usually called Seven Pines in our histories. Here the great strategist, Joe Johnston, was to make his counter-stroke against the invading Yankees. One will remember that Johnston was outnumbered more than two to one, and that just north of Richmond lay another Union army under McDowell. Johnston's nearest help was too far away to join in the battle that followed.

Johnston had a good plan of battle, though for lack of information as to roads, was to cause delay and confusion. The Battle of Fair Oaks, or Seven Pines, was to be the first real battle in the east of the Confederacy. In that battle the ill luck of Joe Johnston was to be at its greatest. In this same battle the lack of information of roads and paths was to hinder the movements of the Confederates. Lee would later be hindered for this same lack of information.

BATTLE OF SEVEN PINES.

On the morning of May 31, 1862, the Battle of Seven Pines opened. McClellan's army, strung out in a semi-circle—somewhat divided by the badly swollen Chickahominy. Johnston, thinking that McDowell was to join McClellan, meant to strike quickly—defeat in detail the forces, and then take care of McDowell as he came up. McDowell was not to come up, due to orders that would hinder his movements. Although Johnston had made plans that showed him to be a master strategist, his ill luck was to step in and ruin the day. On his right end, James Longstreet—heading his first real assignment of the war—was to mess up the plans. Huger, good old Huger—coming in from Norfolk—did not know that upstart of a Longstreet was his superior in command. Longstreet somewhat bungled his orders, did not come up in time, and the battle became somewhat out of hand. Finally, dependable D. H. Hill put his four brigades into action—but not until after 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

Longstreet put two of his nine brigades into action—following Hill. Late afternoon found the Confederates pushing back the Federals—but ill luck struck again. Joe Johnston was struck, first by a "Minnie" ball, and then by a shell. This finished his career in the armies fighting in Virginia. Gustavus W. Smith assumed command, fought a fair battle the following day—and Seven Pines was history.

With the wounding of Johnston came the great chance for the immortal Lee. He was immediately put in command of the great Army of Northern Virginia. So, with Johnston's ill luck, came the "good" luck of giving Lee his chance to immortal fame. As I said in the start, the careers of Lee and Johnston cannot be separated. In early 1862—when the sands of the Confederacy were flowing out all too fast—the careers of Lee and Joe Johnston would again cross, at that time, in a last great attempt to save the Confederacy, but only at a time when Davis saw he could no longer control his own job in addition to being the commander in chief of the Confederacy. But there are other months of waiting, hoping and praying for Joe Johnston.

In that June of 1864, the fortunes of the Confederacy were at lowest ebb. Much of the east had fallen into Federal hands. In the west, most of the towns along the Mississippi had been taken over by Union forces. Only Vicksburg would hold out until the following July. Joe Johnston lay sick through the summer of 1862—severely wounded at Seven Pines. Beauregard had already gone to the west—where he would soon be joined by Johnston. The other Johnston—Albert S.—was dead at Shiloh. June 6th ended the career of Turner Ashby in the Valley, when he fell at Harrisonburg.

From June 26th through July 1st, Lee fought those terrible Seven Days' battles around Richmond—suffering from lack of detailed information of the roads and paths, same as Joe Johnston had suffered in May. Through these months Joe Johnston lay wounded by the bullets and shells of Union fire. No more would Joe Johnston, of Virginia, play any part in the movements of the Army of Northern Virginia. Another hero—a man of might, Robert E. Lee—had stepped in. Joe Johnston would play second fiddle to others until the coming of 1864, when he found that masterly retreat from Dalton to Atlanta.

Here we must look on in the ranking generals of the Confederacy. As I have said, the generals were supposed to have been rated according to ranks held in the United States army prior to the start of the War Between the States. Had this plan been carried out, generals should have been ranked—first, Joseph Johnston; second, Samuel Cooper; third, Albert S. Johnston; fourth, Robert E. Lee; fifth, P. G. T. Beauregard. However, under plans coming out of the "high command" at Richmond, ranks were as follows: First, Samuel Cooper; second, Albert S. Johnston; third, Robert E. Lee; fourth, Joe Johnston; fifth, P. G. T. Beauregard. This, as Johnston freely admit, was an injustice to Joe Johnston. Johnston's letter to Davis on the matter merely fanned the fire of hatred between the two men, and headed Joe Johnston toward obscure commands and loose authority.

Johnston did not like the stand Davis took on the matter of rank, and said so all too plainly. Davis, who thought Davis had the greatest military mind of any man connected with the war, did not agree with any of Johnston's plans, and plainly said so. Certainly, every man who ever served under Joe Johnston, loved Joe Johnston. Men who served under Davis, all too often, hated Davis.

Justice and right were on the side of Johnston in the matter of rank, as events later showed. It would have been better had Davis listened to Joe Johnston in the matters of common sense military affairs. Certainly, no one will compare the Davis military mind with the military mind of Joe Johnston. Even his severest critics must admit that Joe Johnston was a leader—a military man—and a great soldier. No one can claim these qualities for Davis. Hood, who hated Joe Johnston, admits in his "Advance and Retreat" that soldiers of the army that lay outside of Atlanta after the surrender, called loudly for Johnston. This in the presence of Jeff Davis. It must have been quite a slap in the face to have the rank and file of a command "demand" that Joe Johnston be put back in command of the troops that lay around Atlanta. We cannot separate Davis from the ill luck of Joe Johnston.

TRIBUTES TO JOHNSTON.

Joe Johnston had some few enemies—mainly Davis and Hood. His friends were thousands. Pollard, editor of the Richmond Examiner during the war, and author of several histories and biographies, says of Johnston: "He was the greatest military man in the Confederacy." Longstreet, who fought under both Lee and Johnston, says Johnston was the foremost soldier of the south. That super-critic from England—Chesney—says, "Johnston was as great a defensive fighter as ever lived." And, of those in the Union Army, Grant said, "I have had nearly all of the southern generals in high command in front of me, and Joe Johnston gave me more anxiety than all the others. I was never half so anxious about Lee."

Sherman, who knew Johnston with a large army corps. Praise from the enemy shows that Johnston was held in high esteem by the Federals. Joe Johnston did whip Sherman. Hood never did. Certainly there was no better loved man in Confederate or Union armies than this Joe Johnston. Lee loved and trusted him. His men would follow him blindly through any course Johnston might lead. He was unsurpassed in retreat and defense, and a great military man. Certainly, he deserved a better fate than was his.

The fortunes of the Confederacy were at low ebb in June of 1862, and again in June, a year later, the sands of the Confederacy were slowly flowing out. The siege of Vicksburg had started June 1st, 1863, to last until July the 4th. The Rosecrank's Tullahoma campaign pushed Bragg out of middle Tennessee, which more later ended in disaster for Bragg. Down in the southwest, Joe Johnston had been given the task of relieving Vicksburg. A Herculean task for any man—and certainly a task not to be performed by Joe Johnston and his small force; certainly a task too great for any man, especially if that man is not getting help out of Richmond. They have called Grant the "Hammer" because of his hammering at Vicksburg. On May 22d he had made a "grand" assault on Vicksburg, which failed. Thousands of his dead and dying lay between the lines—those dead mercifully so; those wounded left to die and rot with the wounded.

Back of him—several miles away—was Joe Johnston, hoping and praying that he would be reinforced so as to lift the siege at Vicksburg. Nothing happened. Message after message went out for assistance. On July 4th, 1863, Pemberton—a Yankee commanding a Confederate army—surrendered, and he was never to amount to anything more in the Confederacy. Johnston fretted and fumed, too weak and too far away to help. No man could have done more than Joe Johnston, yet he is blamed by many for not lifting the siege at Vicksburg.

MISSISSIPPI OPENED.

Not only did Vicksburg fall in July, but up in Pennsylvania the noble Lee lost at Gettysburg. Bragg had been crammed back out of middle Tennessee. John Hunt Morgan had gone on his famous Ohio raid from which he would not return until he broke prison at Columbus, Ohio, on Thanksgiving Day. From July 9th through the 16th, Sherman pushed out against Jackson, Mississippi—his Joe being Joe Johnston. Early in May, Joe Johnston had said to Davis: "It is better to concentrate, let Vicksburg and Port Hudson go, and with a large army defeat the Union forces in the west." Davis would not listen. The result was that Vicksburg and Port Hudson lost; thousands of Confederates in Vicksburg surrendered to Grant, and the Mississippi river was open from end to end.

It was all a severe blow to the Confederate States of America. Johnston, like Beauregard, wanted concentration. Came September, and Chickamauga, the only great southern victory of the war. Here it was that James Longstreet, sent south at his own request, saved the day and won a great victory for southern arms. The sands—fastly flowing out—were stopped for the moment. A little concentration had helped at Chickamauga. On October 9th, Davis came down to see Bragg. There was much kicking about the way Bragg handled matters. Davis took a long, relaxed trip to Hill of his command, made a few minor changes, and left Bragg to his fate. That "fate" to bring Joe Johnston from command in the west, to once again give the great strategist a "chance to make good." But, not until the interval of November 23d through the 25th, when Bragg was badly whipped at Missionary Ridge, driven back through Ringgold, Ga.—some have said in much disorder.

Two days after Missionary Ridge, over in central Tennessee, another tragedy of the war was being enacted. Sam Davis, private in the First Tennessee Infantry, was being hanged as a spy. Only held together as an army by loyal generals, Bragg's army finally stopped in the middle of the road. J. B. Jones recorded in his "diary" on the 26th: "There are rumors of a break in the cabinet, a majority, it is said, having been in favor of Bragg's removal." Bragg, as history truthfully records, was a Davis pet.

On November 26, Bragg wired Cooper to have him relieved from command of the Confederate army around Dalton. He was relieved on the 30th by Hardee. Another note of interest—recorded by Jones on December 16th—in which he refers to an item in the Examiner of that day which calls Davis a "dictator." He also records the same day that "General J. E. Johnston has been ordered to take command of Bragg's army." Johnston assumed command of the Army of Tennessee on December 27, 1863.

Here again we find Johnston being given a command after all others had failed with that command. Bragg, a Davis pet, had quit and gone to Richmond. Hardee was temporarily in command. On December 20, 1863, a message from the secretary of war had gone to Johnston informing him that he "would find the army disheartened and deprived of ordnance and material." Yet, "Your presence, it is hoped, will do much to re-establish hope and inspire confidence." More of those orders had to do with the re-establishing confidence—making of a new army—and the prevention of the Union armies from penetrating further into the south.

More of those orders had to do with the "reliance on your experience and judgment." One will note that during these trying days James Longstreet and his small army was plodding back toward Virginia. If Joe Johnston was not considered as the best man to assume command at Dalton, then James Longstreet or A. P. Hill could have been given that command. No, the Army of Tennessee was considered about through, as an army. Those other generals must go back to defend Richmond. Davis was in Richmond. It is also noted that the secretary's orders to Joe Johnston were not signed.

Joe Johnston immediately started to work to make a new army of the Army of Tennessee. Stragglers were brought in. Fortifications were built, and soon a new army was not in the making, it was made. With this same army Joe Johnston would wage a masterful campaign—and would again bring him ill luck—and disaster. There is a bit of humor in another letter coming out of Richmond from Davis who, at that far off place, states the losses at Missionary Ridge were small and that Bragg had expressed great confidence in the troops under Johnston's command.

Davis also said: "We can redeem the past," and "let us concentrate all our available men." Seems like the cry from a man beginning to realize that "maybe" Johnston could redeem an army that had been badly managed by a Davis pet. It is all too true that Johnston did not have much of an organized army to work with, but he did have that one of the first that had ever fought in any battle. Under the Johnston leadership, confidence did return. Men loved and respected Joe Johnston. His lieutenants had the utmost confidence in his proven ability. Even the fierce Sherman respected his ability—so much so, that in later years when the war was over, and Sherman had crossed the river "to rest in the shade," Joe Johnston was a pallbearer at Sherman's funeral. Davis and Hood hated him.

GRANT MADE COMMANDER.

On March 9, 1864, Grant was made commander of all the Union armies. On the same day Sherman was put in command in the west. Two months later he was to start his Atlanta campaign. The Atlanta campaign opened on May 5, 1864—the same day Grant was opening his Battle of the Wilderness. On the 9th, Wheeler defeated Yankee cavalry at Vernal's Station. Johnston, flanked out of Dalton, fell back on Resaca, where, May 13, 1864, a bloody battle was waged—Johnston again being flanked out of that position. In each instance he brought his army out in good condition and in good morale.

On the 17th a "delaying" action took place at Adairsville, but Johnston not thinking that place suitable, withdrew toward Cassville. Here, Joe Johnston meant to make another stand. From May 19 through 22d, Joe Johnston held the Yankees. Hood did not think it a good place to fight, so again Johnston withdrew toward Cartersville, crossed the Etowah at that point and hoped to make a stand against Sherman at Allatoona. Sherman, who had visited Allatoona many years before, knew he could not take so well fortified a position, and drew off toward Dallas. This brought on the battles around New Hope and Pickett's Mill. So terrible were the losses at New Hope that the Union soldiers called it "Hell-Hole."

From May 25th through June 4th, Johnston held and whipped Sherman around New Hope, Dallas and Pickett's Mill. Again he found it necessary to withdraw toward Marietta. From June 8th until the 27th, Johnston fought every day. Lost Mountain, Gilgal, Pine Mountain, Big Shanty (Kennesaw Station now), Kalf Farm, and finally the great Battle of Kennesaw Mountain on June 27th. Here on June 27th, Sherman, who had not made many errors, made the error of making frontal attack on Johnston's well-fortified position along the ridges of Big and Little Kennesaw The Spur, and toward the west—Cheatham's Hill. Johnston severely punished Sherman in that battle of the 27th; his losses being small as compared to Sherman's. On July 2, Johnston cut loose from the Kennesaw, fought at Smyrna, and finally withdrew across the Chattahoochee. Sherman followed closely on his heels—in fact, crossing in some places ahead of Johnston's army. However, Johnston had come across the river in fine condition, his men in high spirits, and with the loss of but few men.

Johnston's retreat from Dalton to the outskirts of Atlanta had come from many battles, yet his losses were small. He had fought almost daily, yet the morale of his men was excellent. He had been outflanked but not outfought. He had, against an army superior in strength and equipment, inflicted greater losses than he had received. He had managed to win with regularity. Lee had shunted off Grant's sliding movements around Richmond, yet had saved Richmond. Johnston had retreated from Dalton to Atlanta—had not yet lost Atlanta—and had whipped Sherman daily.

Certainly there was nothing in this retreat to warrant the removal of this great strategist from command. I do not believe there was any man, Union or Confederate, who could have done more than Johnston. I doubt that any could have done as well. True, Lee might, with Johnston's troops, have fought a major engagement, but with no more supplies than Johnston had he probably could not have done more than Johnston did. I believe that Joe Johnston would have fought a winning battle in the vicinity of Atlanta. Davis thought otherwise.

On the night of July 17, 1864, there came to Joe Johnston, stationed on the present Atlanta-Marietta highway, a message out of Richmond, informing Joe Johnston that he would turn the command of the Army of Tennessee over to General John Bell Hood. The "high command" in Richmond had dealt Joe Johnston the master blow in ill luck. The great strategist was to be relieved of command at the time when his greatest chance had come. The Confederacy would feel this terrible blow from end to end. Men of high rank were stunned. On the 18th, Sherman heard the good news—good news to him, for he knew that Atlanta was his. Great was the rejoicing in the Union ranks. The Confederates, in despair in the Confederate army. On the afternoon of July 18, General Joseph E. Johnston turned the command over to John Bell Hood—bade his army of magnificent men good-bye—and went to Macon.

Two days later hundreds of these same men lay dead in that strip of land that lies between Peachtree road and Howell Mill road—in the battle known as Peachtree Creek. Hood was a good corps commander, but not fit to command an army. He made a headlong attack on Union troops and had been repulsed with heavy losses. Two days later came the Battle of Atlanta—then the Battle of Ezra Church—on the 28th. The strategy of Johnston was sorely needed in those trying days. I have often wondered what would have happened had Johnston used Hood's method of doing things. I have always thought Davis forever regretted that he had ordered the removal of Johnston. Much argument—pro and con—as to the wisdom of this removal of so great a soldier.

Firmly believe that every historian and biographer knows that the above is the truth. Hood's final movements have been told in this paper some few months ago. History records that he practically destroyed the Army of Tennessee in that retreat toward Dalton—his movement into Alabama—and finally the terrible disaster at Franklin and Nashville. There will never be found a sane excuse for Johnston's removal from command, and the placing of Hood in his stead.

COMMANDER IN CHIEF, ROBERT E. LEE.

On February 6, 1865, General Robert E. Lee was made commander-in-chief of all Confederate armies. To him—when it was too late—was given the task of saving the Confederacy. The sands were flying out too fast from the once great Confederacy. Sherman had made his "march through Georgia," and had handed Savannah to Lincoln as a Christmas present. Sherman had started north on February 1, 1865—had permitted the sacking and burning of Columbia, S. C., on the 17th of February. Charles Johnston, the same day, the same day, Johnston had tried to stop the progress of Sherman, without avail. The remnants of the once fine army of Tennessee had been gathered together as best they could be, and had been headed for the Carolinas. These were dark days and trying days for the Confederacy. Joe Johnston was at Lincoln, N. C. On the 23d day of February, 1865, there came to Joe Johnston a message from Lee, directing Johnston to assume command of the army of Tennessee and all the troops in South Carolina, Georgia and Florida. The message further said to "concentrate all available forces and drive back Sherman." This message came from Robert E. Lee. How different from the methods of Jefferson Davis.

Lee loved Joe Johnston—and Lee knew that Joe Johnston was a master strategist and an enterprising and reliable commander. Lee knew if Johnston could not drive back Sherman, that no man could do it. So, again we find Joe Johnston—too late—taking the mighty task of whipping the mighty and well-equipped army of Yankees. The quickness with which Joe Johnston whipped a small army into shape—and the method used with the materials at hand, plus loyalty and devotion—proved beyond any shadow of doubt the sterling qualities of which Johnston was made. No super-man could have stopped Sherman. Few would have tried. Johnston did try, and on March 19 through March 21, 1865, Joe Johnston and his small army held Sherman at Bentonville, N. C.

This was the last of the greater major battles of the war. There was a surplus of generals at that battle. Besides Johnston, there were Beauregard and Bragg, both full generals. Many lieutenants, generals and major-generals. For three days the battle at Bentonville raged—the Confederates holding out against great odds for two days and finally withdrawing in good order on the third. Joe Johnston had fought his last major engagement—coming with the last grasp of a dying "lost cause." Together the first Bull Run, Beauregard and Johnston were together in the last great major engagement of the war. Two "lost men" in a great just, but "lost cause."

On April 26, 1865, Joe Johnston—at the Bennett House, near Durham, N. C., surrendered the remnants of his army to General W. T. Sherman. This was on the 17th day after Lee had surrendered to Grant. In 1874 Johnston published his "Narrative of Military Operations," about which there has been much discussion of the merits of the manner in which Johnston defended himself. Hood's "Advance and Retreat" was written and published that the "world might see Joe Johnston in everything but a favorable light." Of him Jeff Davis had much to say. His tactics have been studied and used by many of the greatest armies of the world. My grandfather, who fought under both Lee and Johnston, thought Joe Johnston the "greatest strategist and most loved man of the war." Hundreds of veterans who fought under Joe Johnston have had words of praise for him. Yet, to save the reputation of others, the great Johnston has not been given the high position of honor and trust among the soldiers of the south that is rightfully his. At Dalton there is a monument to Joe Johnston. There are few, if any, others.

I think, on page 100 in Longstreet's "Manassas to Appomattox," Longstreet has well expressed the feeling most of the south had for Joe Johnston, when he said, "General Johnston was skilled in the art and science of war, gifted in his quick, penetrating mind and soldierly bearing, genial and affectionate in nature, honorable and winning in person, and confiding in his lieutenants. He drew the hearts about him so close that his lieutenants felt that they could die for him." An officer once said to Mrs. George Pickett, "Lee was a great general and a good man, but I never wanted to put my arms round his neck as I used to want to do Joe Johnston." A man who enjoyed the love and respect of all those who knew him so well must have been a great and good man. Such a man was General Joseph E. Johnston, C. S. A.

"WHILE ATLANTA BURNED"

By ANNIE LAURIE FULLER KURTZ.

It was during the journey from New York to Los Angeles last November that David O. Selznick, of Selznick International Pictures, Inc., informed Wilbur G. Kurtz, technical director of the picture, "Gone With the Wind," that the first of the filming would begin the night of December 10, 1938. The so-called fire sequences were to be shot. This promised to be a spectacular affair. It was! Just eastward of the Selznick International studios is an area known as "The Forty Acres." This tract, a part of the studio property, is more or less covered with ancient motion picture sets erected in the pre-sound era. Typical of all movie sets, it presents the usual startling juxtaposition of medieval strongholds, village streets, Moorish courtyards and metropolitan vistas. These ancient structures, buffeted by all four of the California winds, and mellowed by the sunshine that allegedly prevails, are not only out-moded, but are unserviceable. Since it was planned to erect the Atlanta sets for "Gone With the Wind" in this area, space would have to be provided, and many of the old sets would have to be removed.

Rather than team them apart piece by piece, why not burn them? And while they were burning, why not utilize the conflagration as background for the episode of the evacuation of Atlanta that wild night of September 1, 1864? In other words, in order to build Atlanta, it must first be destroyed! One of the many paradoxes one meets with in this land of make-believe.

A survey was made by the art department, whereby two ancient sets were selected for the pyrotechnic spectacle.

Readers of Miss Mitchell's novel will recall that the night Atlanta was evacuated, Scarlett, Melanie, Prissy, Melanie's baby and little Wade Hampton Hamilton were conducted out of the city on the road to Tara by Rhett Butler. A ramshackle wagon and woe-begone horse are important "props" in this sequence.

The journey to Tara takes the party, perforce, across the railroad yards, where the historic 81 box cars, loaded with shells and fixed ammunition are standing. This ammunition was destroyed that September night to keep it from falling into the hands of the federal forces, who had sealed the fate of Atlanta by the overwhelming defeat of Hardee's corps at Jonesboro.

The dramatic possibilities of this incident were suggested alike to novelist and script writers. It embellishes the story of the fall of Atlanta as no other single incident could do—its lurid glare lends the spectacular touch so necessary to motion picture interpretation.

Only by "telling tales out of school" could one reveal all the major and minor devices used in producing the proper effects of this spectacle. Obviously, there must be a fire, since the evacuating Confederates burned some warehouses near the yards. Obviously, the carloads of fixed ammunition and bombshells must explode, which would help, not hinder the conflagration. And when Scarlett, Rhett and the others flee the city, they must run all the risks that the situation requires.

The dressing of the fire sets had progressed again, when Mr. Kurtz was asked to supply the touches that would definitely make them historically. The box cars on the line of rails in the foreground were built to photographic verisimilitude, and for these, he supplied the lettering which identified them as the rolling stock of Atlanta's four railroads. New facades, perfectly reproducing the Atlanta of 1864 were built on the old sets.

The railroad yards must reflect the disorder attending the sudden evacuation of the city and the old wagon must be redolent of rural Georgia.

To insure the proper pyrotechnic effect, the ancient walls of the structures were piped with oil sprays.

In the foreground, besides the freight cars and the abandoned munitions, stood two disabled field pieces of the vintage of the 60's. Some old wagons,

The old Bagley house, or Tavern—at Rough and Ready, which settlement was located in Clayton county on the Macon highway about one and one-half miles south of the Fulton county line. This was the point to which the evicted populace of Atlanta were taken by the Federal forces in September, 1864—there to be carried on southward in Confederate army wagons to the railroad at Lovejoy Station.

odds and ends of discarded furniture, a blacksmith shop, piles of crosssties and a mud-puddle, complete the ensemble.

Out front were ranked a huge battery of flood lights on tall platforms, and seven cameras, three men to a machine, were trained upon the set. Mounted in the center was the assistant director's microphone with Eric Stacey presiding as master of ceremonies. His voice boomed above the throng of spectators and employees like some Homeric god across infinite space.

PRINCIPLES ATE APPLES

AS ATLANTA BURNED

By the time all was prepared, that Saturday night of December 10, 1938, at about 6 p. m., and after the sun had dropped like a plummet into the Pacific ocean with only a few wisps of twilight in attendance, supper was announced. All trailed over to the ancient Garden of Allah set, where in the paved area of that North African village, they sat down to a repast of which Allah himself would have approved. The occasion was most "gala." Nearly 300 persons partook of this "alla fresco" repast. An extra "dessert" consisted of red apples; so, while nobody fiddled when Atlanta burned, most of the onlookers munched big red apples.

The conflagration, technically known as a "controlled fire," was in the hands of a platoon of visiting firemen. They were fully equipped to do their splendid best if occasion warranted.

Just before the torch, or it may have been a mere match, was applied, Mr. Selznick appeared. There was no delay. Since the horse and wagon contingent had been carefully rehearsed, all was ready.

Back of the cars, a wicked tongue of flame licked upward. Foreground fires, carefully staged by the special effects men, burst into being. Rapidly the mounting levin at the rear spread its dread terror. Additional spectators who had wangled admission out of wary gatekeepers, swelled the spell-bound throng. Silently they stood, awe-stricken at the spectacle. Would the action never start?

Finally, Eric Stacey gave the word—the flames were just right—and the cue was shouted for Rhett Butler to go in.

From where the group stood near the microphone, they could see the horse appear around the edge of a burning shed in the foreground. Rhett drove as if he were in a hurry, as well he might, for the heat was oppressive.

Scarlett writhed in terror on the seat beside her escort, who seemed to be in full possession of his wits.

The drive toward the foreground was an attempt to avoid the menace of the explosives, but fires blocked the way, as did a pile of crosssties and a mud-puddle. Here a frantic business of difficulty is enacted; the horse rears and struggles and refuses to go on. Rhett leaps to the ground, unties the hitch-rein and attempts to lead. Nothing doing! He snatches Scarlett's shawl and blinds the horse's eyes. Whereupon the horse consents to move, and in a sharp wheel, gallops toward a gap in the line of cars, and so out of view, briefly silhouetted against the wall of fire beyond.

This run was made three times. In the second run the left front wheel of the wagon collapsed against the obstacles near the puddle. A second wagon was sent in and the run was made successfully.

The various cameras picked up special shots.

One of these was the over-set wall. The oil, withheld on its facade until this moment, was turned on, and it was soon enveloped by the angry tongues of flame. Then it toppled and crashed. It was a brave sight and even hard-boiled movie men acknowledged that the game was worth the candle.

I have been told that never before had such a three-dimensional full-sized conflagration been staged in Hollywood; but then, not everybody has a King Kong set and a "Gone With the Wind" script! Of course there were other contributing factors. Mr. Selznick has a reputation for doing things just so carefully planned and executed.

Though the fire was confined to a limited area on the studio lot, its light could not be restricted. The leaping flames and the reflected light on the low-hanging clouds certainly did not resemble the searchlight beams which have become the sign-manual of market openings and picture premiers. Such was the curiosity of the Los Angeles and Hollywood citizenry that the telephone company had a bad half-hour with the inquisitive public. Joy riders on the boulevard network of this amazing metropolis, turned their steering wheels toward the blaze and rode until halted by the inclosing wire fence of the forty acres, where, they felt it was worth the look, though their worst fears had not been realized.

It was deemed too dangerous to include in this scene, the explosions of shells and ammunition. To finish up the sequence, another night session was held on the forty acres, a week or so later. Some special fire effects were filmed and then the explosions were staged. This occasioned considerable noise, and, since the crew did not get around to this until late at night, the good citizens of Culver City rang up the police station to inquire what the shooting was about. They must have been relieved to learn that an enemy fleet was not bombarding Long Beach!

The rest of the sequence will be filmed later—Scarlett's parting with Rhett on the lonely road, the continuation of the homeward journey by devious routes that would avoid Rough and Ready and the Federal army still in the vicinity of Jonesboro, the arrival at Tara, where Scarlett, at long last, realizes the truth of that aphorism, later to be promulgated by her celebrated contemporary, General William T. Sherman!

Recorded Rhythms

By DUNCAN MacDOUGALD JR.

It pleases me infinitely that Hal Kemp, after an extended spasm of pseudo-swing music, is reverting to his former stylistic playing, and his "Heart of Stone" (Victor) is eloquent proof he should continue in the same delightful vein. This is a beautiful record featuring smooth and mellow clarinets in the low register, and Bob Allen's sympathetic singing. "You've Got Me Crying Again" is likewise fine, with a cleverly scored, elegant reed choir. The Goodman Quintet's "Pick-a-Rib" is a delightful instrumental divertissement—relaxed, graceful Chamber Swing at its best, and you'll find the Boogie Woogie atmosphere of the second movement fascinating.

For a white interpretation, T. Dorsey's "Symphony in Riffs" is recommendable, with a fluent and agile sax section, pretty sharp bugling by Pee Wee Irwin, fierce T. D. trombonists, and sparkling Mince on the long black thing. Mince, incidentally, deserves much more praise than he receives. I thought Dorsey's treatment of that piscatorial menace "Hold Tight" rather acedemic, but Babe Rusin does get off well on tenor. Humber's "Parade of Bands" reproduces such noted theme songs as the magnificent "One O'Clock Jump" with tolerable elan, "The Dipsy Doodle" (that monstrosity) "Summertime," which lacks the proper festive atmosphere, and Chopin's exquisite little nocturne in E Flat Major. The inclusion of this delicate creation is wise, for its elegant beauty may arouse interest in others of Chopin's beautiful music.

Glenn Miller's brass blossoms forth in fine fettle in "Romance Runs in the Family," but truly there's no justification for recording such an inanity as "Cuckoo in the Clock" despite Miller's agreeable version. Artie Shaw's "This Is It" and "It's All Yours" are enjoyable, but hardly scintillating, and percussionist Rich should cease pounding, and play along with the rhythm section instead of continually forcing it.

The rhythmic coda and Sedic's tenor excepted, Fats Waller's "A Good Man Is Hard to Find" is negligible, while a superb muted horn chorus in "How Can You Face Me" rescues this wax from being just another Waller outburst. It's indeed unwise to convoke a seance of such eminent jazz exorcists as Ted Wilson, Coby Cole and Benny Carter and burden 'em with such commercial fodder as "What Shall I Say" and "It's Easy to Blame the Weather." The results make for agreeable listening, but fundamentally this disc is disappointing. Billie Holiday is good in "That's All I Ask," and Choo Berry gets off quite a mess of rhythmic tenor, but her "Dream of Life" is hardly terrific—especially the cumbersome rhythm section. Vocalion also offers "It Ain't Right" and "South Sea Island Magic" by Artie Shaw and "His New Music"—new music incidentally two years aged. Arthur fairly sparkles in Right, but the Platter is not to be compared with his current streamlined rhythms, and Peg La Centra's calling it "git-tars" just about dispels most of the magic.

Mildred Bailey obviously the prima chanteuse of the nation, set to wax "What Shall I Say" and "Blame It on My Last Affair," and, pops, she's a killer! Listen to her inflection of "don't," "fringe," and that coda in "say," and note what genuine emotion, what wistful sadness she displays in the interpretation—truly a great artist.

Jimmy Dorsey's over-orchestrated "Deep Purple" is disappointing, and inferior to Al Donahue's smooth reading. "Fate" is a haunting tune respectfully rendered, but it doesn't send a fellow much. There's little flexibility in Jim's "Romance Runs in the Family," where Herb Haymer toots fairish tenor, while his "Good for Nothin' But Love" is good for nothing but the latter part. Highspot of Glen Grey's "Could Be" is Sonny Dunham's muted trumpet doings, but the ponderous Casa Lomans just can't seem to find that groove yet. Their "I Won't Believe It" proves again they play sweet better than swing, and while Sargent is recovering, one Clyde Burke pipes a vocal in approximately the same smooth fashion. The Andrews Sisters carved Cole Porter's wonderful "Begin the Beguine" and "Longtime No See," supported by the Crosby Bob Cats. More important than The Sisters, who don't achieve such a felicitous blend here, is the deftly scored, fascinating brass accompaniment in the former, while Long Time has a rollicking rhythmic and mellow tenor chorus by Eddie.

And finally, why is it that with four radio stations blaring night and day, so little recorded classical music is featured? Truly a musical shame!

Early Irish Settlers

By SARAH HUFF.

Followers of St. Patrick, whose day is celebrated on March 17, did their part in starting and building this century-old metropolitan city of the south.

Thomas Moore shot deer in the forest that became the site of the old cashed, and Five Points. Soon after the War Between the States, Mr. Moore shipped cornmeal, by the wholesale, from his grist mill on the banks of Peachtree creek and sold many shipments to merchants in London, England.

Thomas Moore became the foremost Sunday school leader in the south. With his Irish-descended second wife, Alice Sims Moore, he visited Sunday school conventions from Mexico to Palestine.

His grandson, Judge Virlyn Branham Moore, is Atlanta's most eminent criminal judge and leading Sunday school and camp meeting speaker. Willis Carlisle was our town's first merchant. His store was situated where the Federal Reserve Bank now stands.

"The Three Johns," John Silvey, John Keely and John Ryan were the three Irish wholesale and retail merchants whose dry goods were in demand throughout north Georgia.

Pioneer citizen Jesse Wood came with his parents and brothers and sisters from Dublin, Ireland, in the year 1800. His grandson, Judge Jesse Morgan Wood, like Judge Virlyn Moore, is a distinguished criminal judge, church and Sunday school leader, and an eloquent speaker. The Woods, like the Olivers, Donelohs, Caseys, Moyses and had been sent to buy some hooks and eyes for his mother, Mrs. Patrick O'Conner, made "sky-scrapers" and "Sundown hats" out of wheat straw for the town's old-timers.

Irwin Whitaker was mayor of Atlanta in the year 1861. He was an editorial writer as well as mayor, and was a son of Governor Whitaker, of Georgia.

The Ivys, Colliers, Doolys, Lynches, Murphys, Connallys, O'Connors, Chastains, Sassees, O'Rears, and scores of other Irish-descended early comers, never left anything undone.

Dr. E. L. Connally, whose wife was the War Governor's daughter, told me of his first visit here. When eight years old he rode a bare-back mare that threw him twice into the roadside thicket between East Point and town where he had been sent to buy some hooks and eyes for his mother, Mrs. Patrick O'Conner, made "sky-scrapers" and "Sundown hats" out of wheat straw for the town's old-timers.

Dr. O'Keefe started public schools in Atlanta more than a hundred years after they were operated in the north and northwest. The most renowned editorial writer, most eloquent speaker and best-loved man in the south was Henry W. Grady.

Juvenile Jamboree in Georgia Towns

By LEE ROGERS.

The dazzling red, blue and orange of the theatrical spotlight is focused on the small town momma's darling daughter—or maybe on dad's little man.

Either way, the kiddie revue movement is spreading to the small towns of Georgia and Alabama and the youngsters are getting their first chance to perform for a paying audience.

Behind the movement is Lionel Keene, widely known southern theatrical man who for the past 10 years has directed the annual Atlanta Kiddie Revue given to raise funds for the milk fund of the Scottish Rite Hospital for Crippled Children. From stage beginnings in these Atlanta Kiddie shows, several Atlantans have gone on to win places for their names in the bright lights. Take for example Jane Withers, Dixie Dunbar, Kathryn Marvis (who used to be Catherine Dittig) and Tommy Lane, to mention just a few of the better known.

Each was discovered by Colonel Keene and was helped to the present day places by his contacts with theatrical producers.

Stage opportunities will be offered five or six thousand southern youngsters ordinarily overlooked by talent scouts.

"Frankly," muses Colonel Keene, "I'm looking primarily for another Shirley Temple or Jane Withers."

"I believe the juvenile stars who will take the places of these stars, whose popularity can't last forever, will be found in the small towns. There will always be a demand for talented youngsters in the show business, and I want to find that talent, train it and help it to national fame it deserves. Incidentally, such a find won't hurt me, either."

Keene has just begun his experiment. His first show was presented last week in LaGrange. Others are scheduled this month in Lanett, Ala.; Fairfax, Ala.; Langdale, Ala.; and Opelika, Ala. Already tryouts have been held to fill places in the cast for these shows and more than 1,000 youngsters have been tested. The best of the lot will appear in the shows.

Keene calls his new shows "Colonel Keene's Juvenile Jamboree—a Quest for Talent." He is working on the same principal on which he has worked successfully to produce the Atlanta Kiddie Revues.

The hour amateur shows are presented for the benefit of local charities and 75 per cent of the gate goes to the charity. The other 25 per cent is used to defray expenses.

Taking the Kiddie Revue to the "sticks" is a new wrinkle in talent hunting. It originated in Atlanta.

Theatrical men have pointed out that the Kiddie Revue idea is the most effective means of discovering star material. The best of the amateurs appear in the performances and the producers, such as Keene, readily are able to pick those who can be trained for the professional stage, screen, ballroom or radio.

From the amateur ranks come all the stars. In June, 1930, Dixie Dunbar and Jane Withers were appearing together at an Atlanta theater in the second annual Kiddie Revue. Nine years later—look!

Dixie has starred on Broadway, in pictures, on the radio and is today touring the country on the stage—her first, and, if we can believe the little girl whom most Atlantans still remember as Tootsie—only love. Her most recent picture appearance was in "Alexander's Ragtime Band," in which she was given the featured dance novelty spot in a film which starred Tyrone Power, current

No. 1 screen glamor man; Alice Faye and Don Ameche. Her most recent starring picture was "Freshman Year," which is currently playing the Atlanta neighborhood houses.

Jane Withers, in a motion picture way, has done even better. The rolly-polly Atlanta youngster, who also cut her theater teeth in the Kiddie Revues here, is currently the No. 6 box office attraction in the nation even, if the hometown fans fail to appreciate her ability.

Jane and Dixie both wrote the colonel to commend the plan to offer stage chances to the small town youngsters. Dixie said in part: "I think it is grand you can carry on this kiddie revue work and give all the children everywhere a chance to show their talents."

"I am proud I got my first start in the Atlanta Kiddie Revues; in fact, they are responsible for all I have done so far. Please wish each and every kiddie all the luck in the world for me—your little Atlanta kiddie who really appreciates everything you did for her."

Another kiddie whose dancing abilities came to light on the stage here is Jane Burks, current Broadway dancer. Jane is the young woman who, on her last visit to Atlanta, startled Police Captain Jack Malcom by running up to him and kissing him on the cheek. The quiet spoken captain was taken aback until the winsome miss explained she was the little girl whom the captain used to make quit playing in the street when they were neighbors on Harrison street.

Nickey Zachary danced through six kiddie revues before going to Chicago to win applause on the stage. She was quite a hit, too, until last fall when her childhood sweetheart, J. B. Lowry, Atlanta contractor, persuaded her the career of a housewife would be more to her liking.

Tommy Lane is the most recent kiddie revue star to make good in the big time. This 11-year-old is featured with Joe Penner's program.

Tommy, who was known in Atlanta as Stanley Hoffman, is the only juvenile radio singing star on a nation-wide hookup with a full-time contract.

What about the little dancer, Catherine Dittig? She's growing up into a potential star, too, according to Hollywood reports. Catherine did novelty dances in the Kiddie Revue of 1932 and during this show learned make-up tips from the then Fanchon & Marco star, Lorrell Gaines, which has stood her in good stead in Hollywood, under her new name, Kathryn Marvis.

Mary Francis Davis, once a Kiddie Revue dancing partner of Dixie Dunbar, has been to Hollywood for screen tests.

Georgia Williams is another Kiddie star who has grown up to fame. She has been appearing on Broadway and only recently developed a new dance and song which she calls the "Peachtree Switch." Her real name is Hortense Jacobs.

Miriam Morgan, another Keene find, is currently appearing in New York with the Rockettes at the Radio City Music Hall. Miriam has been featured in three movie shorts and once appeared with the famed Leslie team.

Joan Wells, now appearing in Atlanta with the Gae Foster Roxettes, is another graduate of Mr. Keene's training school for youngsters.

That's a few of the kiddie stars who have been given a chance in the annual shows here for the Scottish Rite milk fund.

Colonel Keene believed the idea would work in the small towns and he is taking the Juvenile Jamboree there.

The LaGrange Lions Club last week sponsored the first appearance of the Jamboree, featuring approximately 150 of the town's best amateurs in an hour program at a local theater. Three shows were presented each day for two days.

When this performance is completed, the Hexagon Club—representing the six Chattahoochee valley towns near LaGrange—will sponsor shows in Lanett, Ala., March 16; in Fairfax, Ala., March 15; and Langdale, Ala., March 14. The Rotary Club of Opelika, Ala., is sponsoring a performance there March 17.

Children up to the age of 16 are permitted to try out for parts in the performance, and for the majority of them it is their first opportunity of obtaining professional criticism. The shows are in rehearsal for 15 days prior to the opening—thus permitting a close and constant inspection of the individual talents such as most talent hunts fail to provide because of their hit-and-miss methods.

From the Juvenile Jamborees may come the Shirley Temple of tomorrow.

JUSTICE and the MISSING BODIES

Murder "Victims" Don't Always Die—Here's the Proof

By PETER LEVINS.

In the sports world, particularly in the realm of boxing, there is a saying, "They never come back." That is usually true, and it is usually true of murder victims.

But there are exceptions. Because there have been exceptions, in which victims supposedly dead have turned up alive, Justice is invariably rather particular about establishing the corpus delicti. And since the body of the victim himself is such an important piece of evidence, that is why (obviously) murderers so often take such pains to obliterate the remains.

Recently, however, we have seen two men convicted and doomed to death—yet not a trace of their victim has been found.

The victim was Arthur Fried, young White Plains, N. Y., businessman, who disappeared December 4, 1937. According to the evidence, he was kidnapped by two East Side hoodlums, Demetrius Gula, 27, and Joseph (Steve) Sacoda, 32. They confessed last December that they had killed Fried, but later repudiated their confessions.

At their trial defense counsel offered the theory that Fried was still alive and his whereabouts known to his brother, Hugo Fried. The attorney held—unconvincingly, as it turned out—that Hugo was hiding Arthur "in order to break up Arthur's happy home."

When Gula and Sacoda confessed they said that they had burned the body in the furnace of the Ukrainian Hall on East Sixth street. However, a thorough sifting of the furnace ashes revealed no trace.

Pick and shovel squads also dug through the cellar and in adjacent lots—all quite fruitlessly.

Before the confessed kidnappers were brought to trial Assistant District Attorney Jacob Rosenblum made this statement to reporters:

"I'm not satisfied yet that Fried's body was cremated. I have a feeling the confessions did not tell the truth, and I certainly will not take their unsupported word for it that they burned the body."

One investigator remarked that the cremation story might have been invented in the hope that it would discourage further search for the remains. Thus they might escape trial for murder in the belief that the death of the victim could not be established without the body.

TRIED UNDER STATE LINDBERGH LAW.

But Gula and Sacoda, as it happened, were tried under New York's so-called Lindbergh Law which presumes that a kidnaper is dead if he has not been returned alive at the time his accused kidnappers are tried. In such a trial, if the jury convicts, and makes no recommendation for mercy, the death sentence is mandatory.

Both defendants in the Fried case were convicted and sentenced to die. It was the first time the New York state kidnaper law had been invoked since its enactment August 25, 1933.

In this particular instance, there can be little doubt that Arthur Fried is dead. Even so, there have been cases in which persons supposedly murdered have turned up alive—sometimes long after the supposed killer has been convicted. Edmund Pearson in his book, Studies in Murder, and Edwin M. Borchard in "Convicting the Innocent" record several such oddities.

Take, for instance, the strange case of the Boorn brothers of Vermont.

Back in May, 1812, Russel Colvin disappeared from his home in Manchester, Vt. No one thought anything about it, for Colvin, during 18 years of married life, had acquired the habit of doing just that. He'd suddenly leave his wife and family and stay away for months at a time.

Sally Colvin, the wife, was off on a visit that May afternoon. On her return she asked her father, Barney Boorn, and her brothers, Stephen and Jesse, where Russel had gone. They didn't know. Nor did the neighbors.

The war with England being the chief topic of conversation that year, the people of Manchester didn't bother much about the mystery of Russel Colvin. But when several years passed, and he still didn't return, the inhabitants began to wonder. They remembered certain strange remarks about Colvin—remarks uttered by his in-laws.

Then, one night in 1819, Uncle Amos Boorn dreamed a dream. In this dream Russel Colvin appeared at the bedside and told Uncle Amos that he'd been foully murdered. If Uncle Amos would follow him, Russel continued, he would show where he had been buried. His tomb, he said, was an old cellar hole over which a house had stood.

Not once, but three times the dream was repeated.

So the alleged place of burial was opened. Everybody for miles around was there for the event. And the gasps became general when the diggers found a large knife and a button identified by Mrs. Colvin as having belonged to her husband.

But that wasn't all. Shortly after this discovery a boy and his dog, playing in the fields, unearthed a pile of bones. They were pronounced human bones. Excitement mounted.

The villagers demanded action. So there was an arrest. Jesse Boorn, Russel's brother-in-law, was taken into custody on April 27, 1819, and held for examination. Meanwhile the bones were found to be those of animals. This set-back threatened to end the investigation. But then Jesse caused another sensation by accusing his brother, Stephen, of killing Colvin.

STEPHEN ADMITS KILLING COLVIN.

Stephen Boorn was arrested in Lewis county, New York, where he had lived for two years. Brought back to Manchester, he denied the charge.

However, both brothers were held for trial.

Then—another shocker. Stephen admitted killing Colvin. He said his brother-in-law had started the rum-pus which ended in his death. Stephen said Jesse had nothing to do with the tragedy.

The trial was held that November in the Congregational church to accommodate the throngs of spectators. The full bench of the supreme court presided, that being required in capital cases.

The verdict—guilty in the case of both defendants. Jesse and Stephen were sentenced to be hanged on the following January 28.

Despite their separate accusations and confessions, the brothers protested their innocence. Jesse's pleas were partially successful, for the state legislature commuted his sentence to life.

Now Stephen, left to face death on the gallows, had a bright idea. He suggested that an advertisement be published in an attempt to locate Russel Colvin.

Such a notice was published in the Rutland Herald. It described the missing man as a farmer, the son of an innocent man would be saved if he could be found. Subsequently, on November 29, the New York Evening Post also described the missing man.

The next day a man was reading the notice aloud in the lobby of a New York hotel. He was overheard by another citizen. During the discussion which followed, the second man concluded that the missing Russel Colvin was working on his brother-in-law's farm near Dover, N. J.

And sure enough he was!

The reaction in Manchester can be imagined.

Colvin's own reaction was to agree to go to New York and no farther. Any mention of Manchester only made him more stubborn. However, he was tricked into boarding a boat for Troy, N. Y. When he reached Troy he softened a distant sea return to his old jumping-off place.

He and Stephen Boorn were brought face to face. When he saw the fetters on the doomed man's feet he asked the reason for them.

"Because they say I murdered you," Stephen replied.

"You never hurt me," said Russel. "Jesse hit me with a briar once, but it didn't hurt me much."

So of course the case was reopened, and of course the brothers were freed.

There have been more recent cases, needless to say, than this one Uncle Amos dreamed. Take the case of Condy Dabney.

Condy arrived in Coxton, Ky., in January, 1925, looking for work in the coal mines. The 31-year-old miner had left his wife and two children temporarily in Coal Creek, Tenn.

He soon found work in one of the mines, and established a reputation for being industrious and good-natured. About the first of July he gave up this job, bought an old Ford, and began running taxi in and about Coxton.

Then 14-year-old Mary Vickery disappeared. As this was the third of three recent disappearances of women the town became very excited and demanded action by the authorities. So the grand jury met.

Suspicion singled out two men—Dabney and one William Middleton, who were reported to have been seen taking Mary for auto rides. However, the jury failed to indict either and the men were released.

The following September Dabney heard that one of his youngsters was sick. He hastened to Coal Creek and did not return to Coxton.

A few weeks later a United States marshal, searching the hills near Coxton for a cache of bootleg whisky, discovered in an abandoned mine shaft the badly decomposed body of a girl. The supposition being that this was Mary Vickery, the case was now reopened.

Kentucky officers visited Dabney twice at his Coal Creek home. Each time they seemed impressed with his protestations and so made no arrest.

RETURNS TO COXTON AND GOES ON TRIAL.

In March, 1926, Dabney again returned to Coxton in search of work, but this time a woman went with him, for on March 18 he was charged with the murder of Mary Vickery, and two weeks later he went on trial in Harlan.

There was conflicting testimony about the identity of the body found in the mine. Mary's father seemed certain it was she. Then came the testimony of Marie Jackson, a Coxton girl, whose evidence before the grand jury had caused the indictment.

She told the jury that she and Mary had ridden in Dabney's taxi on the day Mary vanished. They had driven out into the country, she said, and when they had reached a secluded spot the driver had ordered her to leave him alone with Mary.

The witness swore that she watched the body of a girl being lowered into the mine. She saw the defendant beat and attack her friend. She saw him put the body in the abandoned mine. And later, she said, he threatened to burn her at the stake if she breathed a word of this to any one.

Miss Jackson's story impressed the jury, although other witnesses offered testimony which conflicted with her own. Three girls, for instance, insisted that they had been with Mary Vickery at the time of the supposed attack.

But an eyewitness is an eyewitness. She said that she had run away from home because she couldn't get along with her stepmother. She denied knowing Dabney, but said she might have ridden to the station in his cab.

From Coxton she had wandered to Cincinnati, working at various jobs. While she was in Cincinnati she'd

NEW BOOKS - - - AND THEIR AUTHORS

"Sure Thing" Artists. GAMBLERS DON'T GAMBLE, by Michael McDougall and J. C. Furnas. Greystone Press, New York. 166 pp. $2.

When you've read this, you may mistrust your own grandmother in a friendly bridge game—if she's consistently lucky.

But why speak of luck? The chances (there's chance again) are there more than poetry in P. T. Barnum's passing remark about suckers, except that he understated the case. And where there is an ever-fresh supply of suckers, there's always a ready-made market for bread and butter to "take" them.

"Gamblers Don't Gamble." Their profession cannot be based on chance. It cannot risk the penalty of clumsiness. It calls for nimble and sensitive fingers, photographic eyes, and hair-trigger nerves to harvest the sucker crop. And it takes a thorough knowledge of the myriad methods of card and dice and magnet manipulation for the parting of a fool and his money.

Michael McDougall, professional card detective, does the world a service in long he needed—exposes most of the tricks in the professional gambler's bag. And he who expects to continue taking chances with strange dealers may do well to read and heed.

Take It, Or Leave It. DOCTOR ADDAMS, by Irving Fineman. Random House, New York. 454 pp. $2.50.

"Doctor Addams" is declared by its publishers to be Irving Fineman's best work to date (which is no boast for his previous works)—the novel toward which he has been working for some years. It is nice to find that some one thinks it is a good book (though a novel only by courtesy). It is unfortunate that it also has grave faults.

A novel is a creation which accomplishes one or several things through a narrative which moves. That is to say, the more nearly static the narrative is, the less like a novel it becomes. With this measuring rule in hand, the reader will discover that through a large part of its considerable length Mr. Fineman's book is no novel at all. For it does not move or rather, it spends much of its time going backward.

It is the story of a medical scientist unhappily married (though just why this is so Mr. Fineman never succeeds in conveying though he seems to be trying to do so for dozens of pages). He is devoted to science, to liberalism—very liberal liberalism. And a girl comes into his life who is not only liberal but has been permissive in her liberalism. But—

The first and most important "but" is the fact that Mr. Fineman tells his story in reverse. For example, when his wife comes to his office to talk things out, to find why they cannot continue the married relation, the conversation lasts 47 large and closely printed pages in which nothing whatever happens except in the flashbacks. These pretend to give the background of the controversy between the two. Against its will, this department read every one of these pages, and emerged with a confused idea that Dr. Addams had married Louise for her poise and wealth, most likely. This is probably quite wrong, but until Mr. Fineman eschews being an artist and gets down to story telling in good A-B-C fashion we shall never be sure.

The second "but" is that Mr. Fineman insists on a number of irrelevant sermons. The longest and least convincing is the one centering about the Jew who works with Dr. Addams in the foundation supported by Dr. Addams wealthy father-in-law. The novel will offend many intelligent Jews, some of who will feel that the constant obstruction of the refugee problem may work against its satisfactory solution.

There is no denying the quality of Fineman's writing, or the fact that he knows something of medical science. Unfortunately, there is no denying also that his story is a bore much of the time.

Another objection is that the book reeks with undisguised sensuality. His principal characters may represent an element in "high" society, scientific research, and among medical practitioners to the ultra-wealthy, but why parade their floutings of morality? Is it possible that this is the class of literature demanded by the public of the present period?

Hitler's Book. MEIN KAMPF, by Adolf Hitler. Reynal & Hitchcock, New York. 994 pp. $3. MEIN KAMPF, by Adolf Hitler. Stackpole Sons, New York. $3.

One of the more curious byproducts of modern book publishing has been the terrific battle over Adolf Hitler's "Mein Kampf." In its simplest terms, the situation is this:

The version of Hitler's book current in America since 1933 is much abridged. The urge to present the full text has struck, more or less at the same time, two publishing houses in America. One of these (Stackpole Sons) put its experts to work, and these reported that the copyright under which Hitler's book had been protected in this country was invalid because, among other things, Hitler was not entitled to copyright, being a citizen of no country at the time the book was offered for protection in America. This publisher considers the book in the public domain, offers a translation of the two volumes which runs to great length, and advertises that no royalties will be paid either its author or the Nazi clique.

But another publishing house (Reynal & Hitchcock) was already preparing a translation of its own through an arrangement with the original American publisher in whose name "Mein Kampf" was copyrighted in 1933—Houghton Mifflin. These publishers maintain, in effect, that an author's right in his product is valid, no matter how unpopular he may become; that the mere fact of misbehavior does not release a book into the public domain; that regardless of technicalities, Herr Hitler wrote a book, the book is being published, the usual formalities must be gone through. These publishers will give profit, above reasonable expense, to the refugees.

The first-mentioned publisher is being sued by the second group. The outcome of this suit will arouse the publishing business, most likely, but will not affect the general public much. Neither will the unabridged translations. The fact is that every student of foreign affairs who wanted an unabridged "Mein Kampf" got it one way or another; that so far as you and you are concerned, the book is almost unreadable. Its dullness is monumental, almost beyond belief. For most readers the more it is shortened the better.

Picture of Lawrence. A POET AND TWO PAINTERS, by Knud Merrild. Viking Press, New York. 360 pp. $3.50.

Here, at last, is a calm, disinterested book about D. H. Lawrence. Naturally, it's by a man. Heretofore, most books about Lawrence have been written by women who felt that they and their concern—understand and appreciated his great genius. Of course they couldn't get a good view. But Knud Merrild, Danish artist and author of this latest Lawrence memoir, came upon D. H. Lawrence quite casually, and he manages to keep that tone throughout the book. He and a fellow artist were spending some time in Taos, N. M., and they had scarcely heard of Lawrence until their meeting there. An instinctive liking sprang up between the men, and Lawrence invited them to spend the winter at his ranch.

The book is concerned primarily with an every-day account of that winter, and it gives a new picture of D. H. Lawrence—a human picture of a man who inspired both love and revulsion—written by one who genuinely liked and trusted him. In the course of their acquaintance, Merrild discovered that many of the conversations in Lawrence's books were actual reports of talks between him and others, so in writing their memoir, he turned to Lawrence's own words for many conversations that took place during that winter.

No admirer of Lawrence needs an introduction to this book, but the preface by Aldous Huxley provides a very satisfactory one.

The Doctor Talks. DOCTOR, HERE'S YOUR HAT, by Joseph A. Jerger, M. D. Prentice Hall Co., New York. 279 pp. $2.75.

A book must be exceptionally good to merit condensation in Reader's Digest, and that honor having been awarded "Doctor, Here's Your Hat," is sufficient recommendation to any one who desires to learn of the vicissitudes encountered by a young man who "earned his way" through one of the leading medical schools of Chicago, graduating with such honor that he was recommended to be assistant and eventually successor of an outstanding Iowa "country doctor."

The story is the autobiography of a physician who now is one of the foremost "family" doctors of Chicago. It will interest any practicing physician, is highly instructive to the medical student, and fascinating to the average individual. Never at any time pathetic and at others hilariously humorous, for the "doc" tells about "cases" of all kinds, and does it in a workman-like manner that indicates literary ability as well as professional proficiency.

He makes it very plain that medical specialism has advanced to a point entirely unnecessary, and he has little use for the physician who shunts his patients from one specialist to another, thus running up needless expense for the sufferer. This will rattle the specialists, but will receive a "hoorah" from the average citizen.

Monk Turns. MARTIN VALLIANT, by Warwick Deeping. Robert M. McBride Company, New York. 270 pp. $2.

"Martin Valliant" is a story of love and adventure in the period when Richard "the Hunchback" was England's King, and Henry, of the Tudor line, was seeking to de-throne that blood-thirsty ruler. Martin Valliant was the son (possibly illegitimate) of a mighty man, a fellow artist who finally stared him in the face, sought absolution for his mortal sins by bequeathing his worldly goods to the church, stipulating that his young son should be trained to become a monk.

Confronted with man's estate Martin Valliant developed into a saintly devotee of the religion of the day, and he so severely censured the conduct of his brethren of the surplice and hood that they sought means to discredit him. He remained faithful to his vows under severe temptations. But the course of his life was suddenly changed when a young girl who had come to him for sanctuary was in danger of being captured by the political foes of her family, which was aligned with Henry Tudor against the King.

Martin saved her, but in doing so he killed two men. From that time on he forsook his monkish ways and became a valiant knight, protector of the girl and foe of the King and his adherents. It is a story of high adventure, heroic feats, magnificent sacrifice, and passionate love.

Good Reading. MY COUSIN MARK TWAIN, by Cyril Clemens. Rodale Press, Emmaus, Pa. 215 pp. $2.

A volume of intimate anecdotes about America's best-loved author. Told in a matter-of-fact way, without effort at embellishment, they give a vivid picture of a career familiar to all, yet always fascinating to read about. The repeated mis-quoting of report that Mark Twain's mother (sometimes it is his grandmother) was so kind-hearted that she warmed the water in which to drown kittens; they include a full account of the celebrated jumping frog of Calaveras county; they assert the heretofore unproved fact that Mark Twain was one of the best pilots on the Mississippi. Good reading.

Some interesting and hitherto unpublished photographs accompany the text, which is also furnished with an introduction by Booth Tarkington.

OLE H. LEXAU.

War Time. LIFE AND LETTERS OF WOODROW WILSON, by Ray Stannard Baker. Doubleday Doran Company, New York. 604 pp. $3.50.

The seventh volume of Ray Stannard Baker's "Life and Letters of Woodrow Wilson" covers only one year, 1917-18, but probably contains more information for students and historians than any one of the preceding volumes.

Here the war-time President comes into his own as a leader in world affairs. Baker, to whom Wilson turned over all his papers, departs from his previous plan of making each subject a chapter. This volume is chronological, consisting largely of documents, excerpts and such with a minimum of interpretation. The reader draws his own conclusions, there being only enough of the author's conclusions to connect the narrative.

Ever during the war, when events seemed black for the allies and when food and fuel shortages were beginning to pinch even this country, one sees through the pages the beginnings of the opposition to Wilson which eventually wrecked his policies. Also there appear cases of speculators taking advantage of wartime conditions. Herbert Hoover, then food administrator, complained several times to Wilson of profiteering.

There also are intimate glimpses of politicians who still prey on the people. For instance, John Nance Garner, now vice president, wrote to Wilson complaining bitterly about a Tennesseean getting an appointment. Senator Key Pittman, now chairman of the foreign relations committee, wrote to the President that his constituents were beginning to notice that he was invited to the White House only for public receptions. Wilson's reply indicated Pittman got more dinner invitations thereafter.

Mutiny at Sea. SUPERCARGO, by Earl Whitmore. Funk & Wagnalls, New York. 315 pp. $2.50.

This novel, like "Mutiny on the Bounty," is based on an actual epic of the sea. In the late 1860's American naval and shipping circles were buzzing with the mystery of a sailing ship, which has been found drifting helplessly off the northern coast of Japan.

This bedraggled craft, brought in by a Japanese fisherman, presented a problem that was baffling the navies of the world. She appeared one day out of the fog, apparently an abandoned wreck, but below were 40-odd Chinese coolies, in the miseries of starvation. Her decks and bulkheads cried out with many blood stains. Among them was the gruesome imprint of an open hand, beside a small door, leading from the master's cabin to a little quarter gallery on the stern.

But though she was destitute of food, the ship proved rich in treasure. Many bags and bundles of gold and silver coin were discovered tucked away in various places. They contained in all, more than $12,000 value in currency of various nations. Yet there was not a scrap of paper aboard to show who owned her, or where she hailed from, and she bore no name.

A naval court martial held aboard the United States sloop-of-war Iroquois disclosed certain startling facts—and hinted at other facts still more startling; but it was many years before the full story of the mystery ship's long nightmarish voyage across the Pacific became known, a voyage unique in the annals of the sea.

Girls' High Alumnae Will Celebrate Home-Coming

By NELL WALTHALL SIMMONS.

There is some talk of handicapping the class of 1875 when the Girls' High Alumnae celebrates Home-Coming Day next Friday, March 17, or of picketing it with some such signs as "Class of 1875 Unfair to Reunions."

For the past two years this class of Girls' High graduates has won the attendance plaque for having the largest percentage of its members present at the school on the annual Home-Coming Day. And since there are only three remaining members of the class and all of them are loyal alumnae, living in Atlanta, the chances are it will again be winner when this year's Alumnae Association president, Miss Martha Crowe, of 1069 Virginia avenue, presents the plaque next Friday.

Mrs. W. A. Gregg, of 430 Capitol avenue, S. E.; Miss Kate Massey, who lives at 216 Coventry road, and Mrs. Wade Blanchard, 717 Myrtle street, are these oldest Girls' High girls. They were graduated from the school only three years after it had been established in 1872 and while it was occupying part of one floor in a store building on the southwest corner of Whitehall and Hunter Streets. The three of them pooh pooh with fine scorn the idea that anything can stop them from having their class year engraved for the third time on the marker which hangs in the entrance hall at today's building where 1,634 girls are enrolled.

"I'd like to see anyone stop us from winning the attendance contest," says Miss Massey. "At least two of us will be there and that will make 66 2-3 per cent, which will outdo any other class record, I don't doubt."

Mrs. Blanchard, who was Miss Kate Slaton, is the eldest sister of Miss Matte Slaton, who teaches French at Girls' High now, and of former Governor John M. Slaton. At the time she received her diploma her father was the head of the Boys' High school.

Eighty-two years old, Mrs. Blanchard recalls vividly her high school days. Particularly, she laughs over one day when she was kept in at recess for not knowing the name of the north gate of Troy.

Mrs. Blanchard went into business with her husband after her marriage. That was at a time when such a course for a woman was most unusual, but she declares she greatly enjoyed her part in operating a little store her husband had inherited on Marietta street, which she says was "way out in the woods" at that time in Atlanta's history.

Of the other two oldest graduates of Girls' High, Miss Massey, whose teaching for her life work and the third, Mrs. Gregg, who was Miss Lizzie Luckie Jones, married 18 months after she finished high school, and reared six children who have been prominent in the city's affairs. She still runs her beautiful old home on Capitol avenue and works actively with Trinity Methodist church, where she is chairman of Circle No. 5.

So Girls' High then, as now—64 years later—

was sending out into the world graduates who, for the most part, do their share of making the world go round as home-makers, teachers, business women.

"At the time we were graduated," Miss Massey explains, "Girls' High was, as it is now, considered rather advanced and was known as a school of character."

"That was in the days when education was based on the classics. There were no elective courses. The foundation was Latin and French. We studied math through geometry, some of the sciences—we had astronomy my senior year—English composition and rhetoric. Mrs. Bernard Mallon taught us expression."

Miss Massey, who stepped right out of high school at the age of 17 and began teaching the first grade school, later taught at Girls' High. She has educated herself through reading in many more subjects than she studied in school. Today she says, "My latest hobby is the Harvard classics, I'm getting a tremendous thrill out of them. I'm on Elizabethan drama now and am reading 'The Alchemist,' by Johnson."

is her camera. She is particularly proud of her angle shots of church spires and of busy scenes on downtown Peachtree street.

"Girls today face a different world than ours was," she muses. "So many of them know they are going to have to learn to make a living. The problem of a choice between learning a trade and getting a background of general culture didn't arise in my day for young women, as it does now. I'm right with the way education is going now and yet, I believe the pendulum will swing back toward the the Atlanta exposition in 1895. The annual conference began in 1899. In that year a conference for the purpose of effecting a state organization was held here.

Members of the Atlanta Chapter have been outstanding figures in state and national D. A. R. activities. Those who have served as state regents are Mrs. Henry Jackson, Mrs. Porter King, Mrs. Ira Sage, Mrs. Sheppard Foster, Mrs. Howard McCall and Mrs. Eun Wylie. Those who have served in the national group as vice president-generals are Mrs. Lucien Cocke, of Roanoke, Va., then Mrs. Hugh Hagan; Mrs. Albert Cox, Mrs. William Dickson, Mrs. Hoke Smith, Mrs. Ira Sage, Mrs. R. E. Park, Mrs. William L. Peel, Mrs. Sheppard W. Foster and Mrs. Howard McCall.

Rice, 1917-1918; Mrs. David Woodward, 1919; Mrs. Elmer Kirk, 1920-1921; Mrs. Charles Davis, 1921, 1922; Mrs. Eun Wylie, 1922-1924; Mrs. Lucien Cocke, 1924-1926; Mrs. John W. Smith, 1927-1929; Mrs. Eli Thomas, 1929-1931; Mrs. Thomas C. Mell, 1931-1932; Mrs. J. D. Cromer, 1932-1934; Mrs. Frances B. Chase, 1934-1936; Mrs. Moreland Speer, 1936-1938, and the present regent, Mrs. Owen McConnell, whose term expires next year.

Present officers of the Atlanta Chapter are: Mrs. Owen McConnell, regent; Mrs. John Rice, first vice regent; Mrs. Mark Cooper Pope, second vice regent; Mrs. Robert Perkins, treasurer; Mrs. Logan Thomson, recording secretary; Miss Lilien Tidwell, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Harry Malone, librarian; Mrs. Carter Prather, chaplain; Mrs. A. G. DeLoach, registrar; Mrs. John Hancock, historian, and Mrs. W. C. Carpenter, auditor.

Mrs. John M. Slaton, a charter member of the Atlanta chapter, is the only surviving member now in Atlanta and still affiliated with the group. The other surviving member is Mrs. Lucien Cocke, of Roanoke, Va., who joined when she was Mrs. Hugh Hagan, of Atlanta. Mrs. Slaton joined the chapter as Miss Sara Frances Grant.

basic classical education. Atlanta's schools seem to be attending wonderfully to both sides of life.

"I would like to say to some of our young people: 'You've got to make a living, yes, but the question is—are you going to enjoy it after you've made it?'

Miss Massey's two classmates say that she graduated with first honors. She enjoys remembering the big night. "There were 17 of us who were given diplomas that evening in De Giv's old opera house. I remember my white organdy dress made with a demi-train, that is, not a courtly train but a short one we girls called 'Jimmy-trains.' I had a wreath of white roses in my hair. Of course all of us carried white fans."

"We sang 'Oh, Happy, Happy Day' and the piano selection was 'The Awakening of the Lion.' Then Colonel Hilliard talked on 'Eve As Milton Described Her.'"

Mrs. Gregg still chuckles over the first lines of the paper she read from the stage that night. "My subject was the 'Origin of Music,' and I began, elegantly I thought—'The origin of this wonderful art is hidden in the obscure depths of remote antiquity. . . .'"

One of her vivid memories is that of Mrs. Mallon, wife of the head of Atlanta's education system, who taught the girls calisthenics as well as expression. Gym classes of that day, she said, meant work with wands, dumbbells and rings. These ladylike exercises, done in long skirts and shirt waists, were quite different from today's gym lessons at Girls' High.

One of Mrs. Gregg's daughters, Miss Elizabeth Gregg, showed a photograph of her mother taken in the summer of 1875 just after that long-ago graduation night.

The elaborate, much-ruffled dress made with yards and yards of grey silk and trimmed with a lace fichu that little Lizzie Luckie Jones of that day was wearing was not her graduation dress, however. "Oh, my no," Mrs. Gregg says. "That was just a simple little summer silk."

Mrs. Gregg's father, who was Oliver Harris Jones, lived on the southwest corner of Hunter street and Central avenue, which was then called Lloyd street. He had been war marshal of the city during the War Between the States.

One of Mrs. Gregg's daughters, Miss Emma Gregg, teaches now at the Girls' High school her mother loves, and where she expects to pay a visit on Home-Coming Day, next Friday.

Atlanta Building Has Elevator "Safety Wands"

BY CARY WILMER.

It's just a simple looking little gadget, a short, flexible black rod topped off by a brilliant red, bulb-shaped piece of balsa wood, but it's a highly important item in the campaign of the First National Bank building to make travel by elevator safer than ever before.

The name, appropriately enough, is "Safety Wand," and its principal purpose is to serve as a warning to passengers who might otherwise absent-mindedly walk into a closing door.

Operators, when getting ready to start their cars, simply hold out their "wands" to make sure that all occupants are "all set" and won't suddenly change their minds about going up or down as the case may be.

And if all this seems like taking unnecessary precautions, it must be remembered that some passengers have done just that in times past and have been injured, although in most cases the damage was slight.

Back in the good old days of hand-operated doors there was less danger of such accidents, but with the advent of the more modern improvements they just WOULD sometimes happen.

Just a little over a year ago, Will R. Beck, manager of the First National building, decided that something should be done about the situation. There had been only a few minor mishaps, no fatalities, but at the same time he wanted a bill of health that was as near 100 per cent perfect as he could make it.

Accordingly he instructed all the girl operators always to extend their arms at full length before punching the button or pressing the lever or whatever it is they do that causes the doors to glide across the front of the car with a polite "ka-lump."

The idea worked. For a full year the elevators zoomed up and down and only once during all that time was there a minor mishap. One lone passenger started to get off just as the door started to close for them to flash their warning signals. The light idea didn't prove practical, but from that Mr. Beck evolved his "Safety Wand" plan which thus far is battling a thousand.

A few weeks ago a visitor to the building suggested that if the operators would carry short sticks with a light on the end it would make it easier for them to flash their warning signals. The light idea didn't prove practical, but from that Mr. Beck evolved his "Safety Wand" plan which thus far is battling a thousand.

At first he thought that an imitation sceptre would do the trick. This he visioned as a short, leather-covered stick with an assortment of 10-cent store jewelry on the end to reflect the lights from the top of the elevators. He even went so far as to invade a 10-cent store to purchase the "jewels" but the salesgirl looked at him with such a startled expression he changed his mind.

Next he invaded a saddle and harness shop and discovered that about six or eight inches of buggy whip handle would be just what the doctor ordered. To these were added the balsa wood tips and the world's first "Safety Wands" were officially in existence.

Now, Mr. Beck was pretty sure he "had something there" but didn't want to rely solely on his own judgment. In order to check up on himself, he called in two safety engineers representing two large insurance companies and asked them to look over his new setup and tell him what they thought about it.

They came, they saw and they were completely sold by the time they had finished their inspection. In fact they even went so far as to write letters enthusiastically endorsing "Safety Wands" and predicting for them a long and highly useful career.

And as far as Mr. Beck knows, there is nothing just exactly like them in use anywhere. As past president of the Atlanta Building Owners and Managers Association and as a past member of the board of directors of the national association, he has been in and out of office buildings for a good many years. But the "First" is the first he has ever seen that was equipped with "Safety Wands."

"I can't exactly claim credit for the idea," he explained last week, "but I do believe they are going to be a real help in cutting down accidents. They not only make it harder for a passenger to leave a car while the door is being closed but they also have a tendency to make everybody more safety-minded, and that is equally important."

"After all, elevators are public carriers as much as railroads, bus lines and airplanes, and we are constantly striving to improve them in every possible way and to look out for the safety, comfort and convenience of our passengers. I hope 'Safety Wands' are going to do their part."

Thus far, he says, the reaction of the public has been 100 per cent favorable. The only question that has been raised is why he should carry one with him on his tours around the building.

"I always explain," he replied with a grin, "that it makes rent collections much easier. You see, they do look something like highly colored black-jacks."

America can be made into an outdoor-man's paradise again.

PLANS FOR WILDLIFE WEEK

Of interest to all who love the out-of-doors is the opening of National Wildlife Restoration Week next Sunday, March 19. The people of our nation are becoming more aware of the great need for conserving our natural resources. The past two or three years have seen a wonderful change for accepting conservation in the public mind. But this is not enough. More of us must actually practice conservation.

Everyone with experience in wildlife work knows that there has been a great decline in the numbers of game birds and animals after the country was settled. Those who have hunted them for the past 20 or 30 years will tell you that there are not as many quail, grouse, wild turkeys, and wild ducks as there were when they were young. The fur-bearing animals have declined sadly.

When one reads the journals of pioneer explorers and naturalists, he cannot help being amazed at the descriptions some of them give of the numbers of game birds and animals that were present on the North American continent in the early days. The forests were great storehouses of game on the hoof or wing, and the waters teemed with fish, all free for anyone who chose to take them. This resource of wildlife played an important part in the development of our civilization, for it furnished a large part of the food of the pioneer people.

When we look at the same scenes today the contrast is alarming. We have cut away the forests until they can no longer hold the rainfall, and we are troubled with great floods that take a toll of human life. Part of our country is threatened with becoming a desert in the dust-bowl area. We read something about soil erosion in the newspapers almost every week. And we have depleted some species of our wildlife until they are near extinction. Indeed, a few have gone forever, the last individual being dead.

Some of our species are still common enough not to warrant much worry, but they would go also if proper protection were not given them. There are species of birds that have gone well below the danger line in scarcity, and have come back since a program for their protection and proper management has been put into effect.

I do not want to be an alarmist about conservation. But our natural resources have been such a valuable asset to us, and play so important a part in the economic life of the nation, that I would call to your attention the need for alertness in conservation.

We must be fair to each other. The bird-lover should not condemn the sportsman, who has as perfect a right to shoot a few game birds now and then, as has the bird-student to photograph them. And it is the sportsman of the nation who at the present time seem to be carrying on the most progressive program in conservation. They realize that it is unfair to leave posterity in want of the wildlife that brings them so much enjoyment. They realize that much needs to be done if conditions are to become ideal for their sport.

But now we have the sportsmen and the nature lovers, and all others interested in conservation, banded together in one organization, the National Wildlife Federation, which is sponsoring Wildlife Week. In charge of the program in this state is our own Georgia Wildlife Federation, and they have made plans for Georgia's participation in Wildlife Week to be one of the best in the nation.

Part of their program includes the sale of sheets of Wildlife Poster Stamps, to raise funds for wildlife restoration. Part of this money must be used in this state, in the counties in which they are sold. The stamps sell at a dollar per sheet. Eighty stamps of different subjects are on each sheet. They are beautiful, and will make nice souvenirs. The money will go for a bona fide cause. These organizations have already rendered services most valuable to this state and to the nation. Their activities are based on the soundest of principles, and our best conservationists are among the leaders in the work. I personally endorse this campaign. You cannot go wrong if you support it.

It will be a fine thing for schools and clubs, and any other organizations interested in things out-of-doors to observe Wildlife Week with some sort of special program. Many fine activities are already being planned. Some suggestions for school programs might be in order here.

Try to get some local person who is an authority on the subject of wildlife to make a talk to the students.

Have some of the pupils prepare brief papers on some phase of conservation. Information for this may be found in a number of sources: public libraries, government bulletins, hunting magazines, farm journals, etc., may be consulted. See your county agricultural agent, or write to the Georgia State Department of Natural Resources, Division of Wildlife, State Capitol, Atlanta. Consult your county sportsmen's club.

An interesting thing to do would be to select some wildlife project to work on during the year. This might be nothing more than a study of the wildlife about the school grounds, and still have a high educational value. There will be more about Wildlife Week in this column next week.

Miss Marie Heist demonstrates the use of the safety wand to prevent accidents to elevator passengers.

Chinese Actress Appears Here Tuesday

The popular Chinese actress, Soo Yong, who will appear at the Women's Club auditorium at 8:30 o'clock Tuesday night, comes today to Atlanta from New York, where she has just concluded an appearance at Columbia University.

Known as the Chinese Cornelia Otis Skinner, Soo Yong, is best remembered by the motion picture fans for her performance as the aunt in "The Good Earth," with Louise Rainer and Paul Muni.

On her current tour, Soo Yong is presenting a program of her own humorous and dramatic monologues and authentic costume-dramas translated from the ancient Chinese.

The Chinese actress was born in Hawaii and lived as a child in Canton. She received an A. B. degree from the University of Hawaii and later an M. A. degree from Columbia, where she specialized in dramatics and diction.

Her Atlanta appearance is sponsored by the Alhambra Celebrity Bureau, of which S. Russell Bridges, is president, who points out the actress has appeared with Greta Garbo in "The Painted Veil," Clark Gable and Jean Harlow in "China Seas," Edmund Lowe in "Mad Holiday," the lead in "Rainbow Pass," and other stars.

GILBERT, SULLIVAN OPERA HERE MAR. 31

Agnes Scott Girls To Perform at Women's Club.

Gilbert and Sullivan enthusiasts want to remember March 31.

On that date, Agnes Scott College is bringing to the Women's Club auditorium its annual Gilbert and Sullivan operetta. This year they are presenting "The Gondoliers," considered by many the most perfectly written and composed of any the duo produced. It is a rollicking story of mistaken identity in which two gondoliers are "kings for a day."

Lewis H. Johnson, head of the voice department at the college and director of the glee club, has presented a Gilbert and Sullivan operetta annually on the campus for the last 10 years. This year being the 50th anniversary of the college they decided to "come to town."

The two gondoliers are played by Paul Overbay and Don White, while as Gianetta and Tessa, Toni Newton and Virginia Kyle become their wives. Others in the cast are Richard Smoot, Amelia Nickels and Jane Moore Hamilton.

Stage Stars at Roxy

The Stroud Twins have the featured spot on the stage show at the Roxy theater this week.

Included in the screen version, such favorites as "Wooden Shoes," "On Parade," "Summer Serenade," "Pretty as a Picture," "Mademoiselle," "Little Grey Home in the West" derive new charm from the perfection of the screen presentation, while there never was a more perfect group of girls for the chorus scenes than the world-famous Albertina Rasch ballet.

JOHNNY RIO and RUTH RITA make music in other stage features. Joe Arena adds comedy as a tipsy acrobatic clown.

Jack Oakie and Lucille Ball romp through a screwball comedy on the screen called "The Affairs of Annabel." The tale concerns a press agent and a cinema star with usual difficulties.

"Jitterbugs" again are invited to strut for cash prizes tomorrow night on the Roxy stage. A week's contract goes to the winners of the six weeks' series.

Gable, Lombard Laugh at Theory Movie Family Can't Hold 2 Stars

By SHEILAH GRAHAM.

HOLLYWOOD, March 11.—Is there room for two screen stars in one family? Facts to date prove the answer is "no." And Hollywood is wondering what will happen when the Clark Gable-Carole Lombard honeymoon is over. Will they both continue at the head of the stellar procession, or will one, or both, recede to a lower place?

Not since 1920, when Douglas Fairbanks Sr. married Mary Pickford, have two such equally popular stars as Clark and Carole joined forces in matrimony. And it is significant to note that, one year after Mary became Mrs. Fairbanks, she appeared in her first mediocre picture, "Little Lulu."—and, until the day of her film retirement, never caught up with her pre-Mrs. Fairbanks picture rating.

At the moment, Gable stands unequalled among adult male stars. Miss Lombard ranks higher today than ever before in her 10 years before the cameras. It seems impossible that the mere fact of a joint home harness should make any difference to either, but let's examine the record and see what happens when filmie marries filmie.

It is hard to believe now, but Lili Damita was quite a big screen shot at the time she became Mrs. Errol Flynn. There certainly was no room for two stars in that family, and now Lili's sole claim to fame is as the wife of Mr. Flynn.

When Florence Eldridge married Fredric March, she was the star, he the featured player. Pat Patterson was rated promising screen material—until she became Mrs. Charles Boyer. She still wants a movie career of her own, but offers for her services are few and far between, and, when she gets a film job, it is small—as per her minute role of the honeymooner in "Idiot's Delight."

Joan Crawford was poisoned through no fault of her own—to the movie cameras of both men she married. Just as long as Douglas Fairbanks Jr. was Joan's husband, he couldn't get an important role on the screen. And Francis Tone, who was rated a near-star at the time of his marriage to Joan, swiftly receded from that position until he finally gave up his marriage and deserted the movies for the stage.

There was room for only one

Federal Players Give 2 Plays Wednesday

George Bernard Shaw's characters of "Androcles and the Lion" and "The Man of Destiny" will be brought to life on the Erlanger theater stage Wednesday night when the Atlanta Federal Theater opens a four-day performance.

The Fort McPherson Community Chest, under the direction of Brigadier General Van Horn, is sponsoring the performances on the Wednesday and Thursday. The Fulton County Democratic Woman's Club will sponsor the performance Friday, while the Mary Baldwin alumnae will sponsor the Saturday matinee at 2:30 o'clock.

Virginia Wynn Brown and Ralph Ellis, Federal theater players who recently won the Jesse Laskey "Search-for-Talent" contest, have parts in both plays as will Don Tyner, who was runner-up in the same contest.

In charge of selling tickets for the Fulton County Woman's Democratic Club will be Miss Byrd Blankenship and Mrs. Louise L. McEachern. They may be reached at club headquarters in the Henry Grady hotel, telephone Jackson 3085.

Comedies Given Top Billings On This Week's Movie Program

By LEE ROGERS,
Motion Picture Editor.

Caliber of motion pictures in town this week is below that established during the past two.

Best of the new shows is W. C. Fields' "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," in which Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen have parts at the Fox. "Huckleberry Finn," in which Mickey Rooney plays, is at the Grand.

The most chilling picture yet produced in Hollywood is "Son of Frankenstein," featuring Boris Karloff and Bela Lugosi at the Paramount. The Rialto has brought back the delightful Jeanette MacDonald, Nelson Eddy interpretation of "Sweethearts."

Charlie McCarthy, W. C. Fields In Comic Battle at Fox.

Charlie McCarthy and W. C. Fields crash the gates of merriment with a new repertoire of clever gags in the rollicking comedy, "You Can't Cheat an Honest Man," now playing at the Fox.

It's hard to tell which provokes the greatest number of laughs in the amusing but somewhat ridiculous story that reeks with the atmosphere of the circus.

Fields, as the undignified, plain-spoken manager of a circus, keeps the audience in an uproar with his drawing wise-cracks and his efforts to evade his debts and a pursuing sheriff. His daughter promises to marry a rich young suitor to save her father from financial ruin, but he turns the table and saves her from the wedding by revealing his circus background in the home of the rich parents.

Edgar Bergen does well in providing Charlie with a voice, but isn't so good in his romantic role. Mortimer Snerd, Bergen's other wooden creation, also plays a minor part.

Others in the cast include Constance Moore, Princess Baba, Blacaman, the animal hypnotist; Mary Forbes, Thurston Hall, John Arledge, Charles Coleman, Edward Brophy, Arthur Hohl, Eddie Anderson, Grady Sutton, Ferris Taylor, James Bush and David Oliver.

Of this brunet beauty you'll be seeing more as the year wears on, because Paramount intends to make her a star of the first rank. She is Patricia Morrison and gets off to a good start in "Persons in Hiding," at the Capitol. J. Carroll Naish is the man. The story is from one by G-Man J. Edgar Hoover.

Basil Rathbone revives the monster in "Son of Frankenstein," at the Paramount this week. Boris Karloff portrays the monster.

MUNI MAY BE DOCTOR IN NAZI PRISON FILM

HOLLYWOOD, Cal. — "The Bishop Who Walked With God," a factual drama to be based on the life of the Rev. Dr. Martin Niemöller, imprisoned head of the Lutheran church in Germany, is announced by Warner Brothers to follow "Confessions of a Nazi Spy."

Hal B. Wallis, associate production executive, says the role of Niemöller, will be offered to Paul Muni.

Sylvan Theater Will Open Tuesday

A new and modern neighborhood theater, the Sylvan, will officially open its doors at 7 o'clock Tuesday night, offering the best of the second-run shows for its patrons.

The theater is located at Dill avenue and Sylvan road. It is operated by the East Point Amusement Company and will be under the management of M. A. Yarbrough. The theater has a seating capacity of 500.

Opening the theater will be "Treasure Island" in which Wallace Beery is the star. This feature will play Tuesday night and Wednesday.

The program for the remainder of the week follows:

"Alexander's Ragtime Band," with Alice Faye and Tyrone Power; Thursday and Friday, and "Born to the West," with John Wayne and Johnny Mack Brown, Saturday.

Big Name Stars, New Opening Date at Roxy

"Big Name" vaudeville acts will be brought each week to the Roxy theater stage, the management revealed yesterday in announcing a new policy.

"After being in operation here some three months, we are so pleased with our venture that we will in the future go to even greater lengths to give this city its finest stage show by booking in rapid-fire succession of big-name acts to headline our programs," Robert R. Meyer, Clarence D. Lowe and M. R. Baranco, of the Roxy, announced in a joint statement.

The Gae Foster 16 Roxyettes will remain and present three or more new dances weekly. Special vaudeville acts, brought in direct from New York, and a first-run feature picture from one of Hollywood's major studios will continue every week.

Inaugurating this policy, the Roxy presents this week Claude and Clarence Stroud, famed twin performers of the radio. Next Saturday Gene Austin, singer of ballads, will be offered.

Austin will play only five days, following which the Roxy changes to a Thursday opening. First to appear on the new opening day, March 23, will be Pick and Pat, another famed radio pair. Ben Blue, eccentric star of the screen and stage, moves in Thursday, March 30.

'KISS BOYS GOODBYE' TO PLAY MARCH 31

Two-Day Performance Booked at Erlanger.

"Kiss the Boys Goodbye," Clare Boothe's Broadway hit, will be presented by a road company at the Erlanger theater March 31 and April 1.

Critics have said Miss Boothe's play caricatures Heywood Brown, David O. Selznick, Harold Ross, Roy Howard and others, but the author maintains "No."

"It is just as absurd to say that I had any real person in mind when I wrote the part of the radical columnist as it is to say that I had some specific butler in mind when I wrote the part for 'George,'" Miss Boothe declares. "Kiss the Boys Goodbye" was produced by Brock Pemberton.

'One for Money' Is a Social Satire

By MARK BARRON.

NEW YORK, March 11.—(AP)—Everything in the Broadway theater seems to have social significance in these turbulent times and now comes "One For the Money." It is a pleasant musical revue as ardent in its defense of the conservative right wing as "Pins and Needles" is an entertaining pamphlet for the liberal left wing.

To give one reason why Broadway revues are written, "One For the Money" happened because an actress needed a job and Nancy Hamilton had decided at last that the only way she could get an acting job was to write one for herself.

After she had detoured via Smith College from her home town of Sewickley, Pa., Miss Hamilton further wandered in theatricals through Pittsburgh and Montclair, N. J. She arrived on Broadway to become Katharine Hepburn's understudy in "The Warrior's Husband." About all she got out of that was material to write a magazine article entitled "Dissertation on the Reflected Glory of Being Katharine Hepburn's Understudy."

That gave the big boost to her writing career and now in "One For the Money" Miss Hamilton not only has written the sketches and lyrics, but she also sings and plays one of the leading roles.

She is a humorous satirist and the sketch in which she politely burlesques Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's "My Day" is a witty impersonation of one of the first lady's full budgeted days.

KNOW HIS LINES.

Wayne Morris was so excited during his marriage ceremony to "Bubbles" Schinas that he said "I do" twice. "But they didn't call for a retake," he said thankfully.

The Planets--Your Daily Guide

By BERNICE DENTON PIERSON.

Bernice Denton Pierson, eminent astrologer, has prepared this forecast in brief for a handy reference convenient to Constitution readers. This guide will aid you, for it indicates the most auspicious time to begin any new endeavor, whether it be business, social or domestic.

MARCH 12--SUNDAY: Conservative, practical and well-planned work should meet with success previous to 7:30 a. m. At this time, your responsibilities may not seem so heavy, for you can take an optimistic view of things. Between 7:30 a. m. and 3:24 p. m., you should steer as conservative a course as is possible, and use care in dealings with older people or in old matters. During the remainder of the day and throughout the night, carefully avoid visionary tendencies or people, and use caution in diet. This late period is very tricky, if not dangerous.

MARCH 13--MONDAY: Avoid radical departures and sudden changes in your plans or program during the entire day. The unexpected may show up, bringing surprises of a disagreeable nature. The day is best for dealings with women and in matters of beauty and adornment.

MARCH 14--TUESDAY: Between 6:43 a. m. and 6:58 p. m. is a favorable time to go after your hopes, wishes and aspirations. This is an auspicious time for finances, business in general, dealings with professional people, educational matters and social life. After 6:58 p. m., favors social life, dealings with friends, but do not expect to accomplish affairs quickly.

MARCH 15--WEDNESDAY: The better portion of the day is before 9:09 a. m., when people in general will be inclined towards optimism and enthusiasm, and therefore, work makes smooth progress. After 9:09 a. m., avoid haste, anger and impulsive action. A great deal can be stirred up over nothing.

MARCH 16--THURSDAY: The combined influences for the day produce a feeling of nervousness and erratic action. The result of affairs started today are unpredictable, and people are apt to be perverse. It will be better therefore, to avoid abrupt changes and stubbornness.

MARCH 17--FRIDAY: Between 3:27 a. m. and 5:08 p. m., favors general business and professional activities, matters pertaining to law, land, education, religion and philosophy. This is an auspicious time for practical efforts and for contacting those who are older and conservative. After 5:08 p. m., is good for correspondence, conference, dealings with those holding high positions in legal, social or business affairs.

MARCH 18--SATURDAY: The early morning hours and until 9:24 a. m. are not conducive towards peaceful dealings in domestic affairs, or in undertaking heavy liabilities. Dealings with women may bring unexpected surprises which are not helpful. The remainder of the day and evening is excellent for associations in family, business, or pleasurable activities. At this time you are likely to encounter feelings of understanding which will go a long way in making this period happy.

HOW TO USE THESE INDICATIONS TO BEST ADVANTAGE.

Should you receive an important telephone call, giving you the first news you have of a certain thing, look and see if the influences at that particular time are friendly or unfriendly. The outcome of that call will be colored by the influence prevailing then.

JUSTICE AND THE MISSING BODIES

There might be an old burial ground near-by.

News of the discovery spread. Many persons visited the scene in the hope of finding Indian ornaments. But nothing more was found, and interest in the relics had about collapsed when Jim House, who had worked on the site, told the Wilsons that he had found a skeleton.

The result--Bill Wilson's trial for the murder of his wife and child. Jim House, star witness for the prosecution, testified that he had seen Jenny Wilson arrive at her father-in-law's home. According to House, her purpose was to talk to her husband, at that time suing for a divorce. The witness said that he warned her against seeing Bill because he thought she might be harmed.

The next day, House continued, he asked Bill about his wife's visit. Bill denied that he had seen Jenny. The same day House found a "child's cloth" and some blood on a rock near the river.

He added that Bill Wilson had acted very strangely when the bones were discovered.

Other testimony quoted the defendant's threats against his wife.

The defense asserted that Jenny Wilson was alive after the date on which she was alleged to have been killed; that Jim House was prejudiced and unreliable; and that much of the state's testimony was untrue. Moreover, there was testimony to show that no dental work had been found in the skeleton of the woman, whereas as doctor work had been done on Jenny's teeth.

As doctor testified for the defense that the bones had been buried at least ten years and that the smaller skeleton showed signs of second teeth.

However, the jury believed star witness House. Wilson was convicted and sentenced to life at hard labor. But among official minds doubts as to his guilt persisted. Even the trial judge urged the governor to commute the sentence. Further doubt was aroused when Dr. Ales Rrdicka of the Smithsonian Institution, one of the world's leading anthropologists, declared that the bones found near the river were parts of four or five skeletons; that they were very old, and that they well might be relics from an Indian burial ground.

Nevertheless, Bill Wilson remained in prison. He remained, indeed, until Jenny was found living with her second husband in Vincennes, Ind. One of the defense lawyers, J. T. Johnson, of Oneonta, Ala., traced her in the late spring of 1918.

Wilson was pardoned on July 8, 1918, after he had served three years, six months and 21 days. He was awarded $3,500 "for services rendered the state while in prison."

One of the strangest of such cases occurred about 20 years ago at Reid's Ferry, Va.

In the summer of 1908 the little congregation of colored folk at Reid's Ferry were divided over the issue of who should serve as their pastor. The regular pastor, the Rev. James Smith, had fallen into disfavor with many of the members. They backed the Rev. Ernest Lyons, a younger man who occasionally assisted with the preaching.

MINISTER VANISHES; SO DO CHURCH FUNDS.

On July 31 of that year the congregation entrusted its funds to Smith, who was to take the money to the regional church conference scheduled for the next day at near-by Suffolk. That same day Smith and Lyons were said to have quarreled over some of the conference details. It was said that, in the heat of the argument, Lyons threatened the other man's life.

The two ministers were seen leaving the church together that evening, and the next day Lyons arrived at the conference alone.

Smith failed to show up. The church funds, too, failed to show up. Lyons became the preacher of the church. Some of his flock developed suspicions, and these suspicions seemed justified when, a short while later the corpse of a colored man, disintegrated beyond recognition, was found in the Nansemond river near the church.

Now wild rumors spread throughout the community, and reached the ears of the authorities.

The corpse was about the same size as the missing Smith, but there seemed to be no other identifying marks. However, a woman told the authorities that if the body was Smith's then they would probably find a ring with a purple setting on the little finger of the left hand. Such a ring was found on the body.

CONVICTED OF MURDER IN SECOND DEGREE.

Medical examiners reported that the victim had died from a blow on the head, and that he had been thrown into the river when he was dead or dying.

Presently the Nansemond grand jury indicted Ernest Lyons, and he went on trial in Suffolk on January 13, 1909. After three days the jury returned a verdict of second degree murder. Their supposition, apparently, was that the homicide had resulted from a fight between the two church rivals.

Defense Attorney Robert W. Withers, convinced that Lyons was innocent, moved for a new trial but this was denied. However, the judge agreed to a rehearing of the motion if Withers would try to get the true account of the crime from Lyons.

The attorney said he would try--and to his great surprise his client made a confession.

He had participated in the killing, he told Withers, and he also implicated many members of his congregation--those who had testified against him at the trial. These persons were all arrested.

The next day Lyons was confronted with his fellow "conspirators." Their eyes bulged with horror as he repeated his story. Finally Commonwealth's Attorney James Burgess told him to raise his right hand to heaven.

Lyons raised his hand.

"Now," continued Burgess, "repeat after me, 'If I have told a lie, may God strike me dead.'"

So he was sent to the penitentiary. Now a local official became interested in the case--George E. Bunting, clerk of the circuit court, who owned a farm on the Nansemond river and had known both Smith and Lyons. Despite the evidence of the purple ring, Bunting was convinced to believe that the corpse had been that of another man.

The court clerk investigated privately--and in the spring of 1912 he found Smith, alive and in good health, just across the state line in North Carolina. He simply absconded with the church funds. (Incidentally, he was wearing a purple ring exactly like the one found on the corpse.)

Governor William H. Mann granted Lyons a pardon on April 3, 1912.

KING STAGES HOLDUP.

Even though the holdup is one of the simplest bits of strategy resorted to in the play of the hand, it is, nevertheless, one of the most important. Most players confine their holdup plays to suits headed by aces, when, as a matter of fact, the king and even the jack often serves the purpose just as well.

Ability to recognize the necessity for holding up control of a suit is as an important factor in good play as being able to determine when and when not to concede adversaries one or more rounds of the suit.

The following hand illustrates a sound holdup play with the king.

Q. When was the peak of unemployment reached during the 1929 depression, and how many were unemployed?

A. In March, 1933, it is estimated that 14,708,000 were out of work.

Q. What is the difference between plaster of Paris and cement plaster?

A. When gypsum is heated, if the raw material is of good quality and the temperature is kept near 125 degrees C., the final product is plaster of Paris, and has the composition (CaSO4)2H2O, which sets quickly owing to the formation of a network of crystals of the less soluble salt. But if the gypsum is impure or the temperature high, the product sets slowly, and this variety is called cement plaster.

Q. Has an American woman ever held a high diplomatic post under the United States government?

A. Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, daughter of the late William Jennings Bryan, was United States Minister to Denmark in the early years of the Roosevelt administration.

Q. Although I am an American-born woman I lost my citizenship by marrying a German alien June 1, 1922. Can I regain my United States citizenship if he now becomes naturalized?

A. You would not regain your lost citizenship through the naturalization of your husband. Take proof of your birth to the nearest naturalization office, or to the clerk of the nearest United States district or state court having naturalization jurisdiction, and apply for your final papers. After you are naturalized your husband can apply immediately for his final papers.

Questions, Answers On Garden Subjects

By MRS. FLETCHER PEARSON CROWN

Question: My pyracantha, on the west side of my house, do not bloom well, so they have very few berries. Should they be moved?

Answer: I do not think that this exposure prevents blooms and berries. I think that they must be lacking in phosphorus. For a medium-sized shrub, give one cupful of superphosphate now. Work it into the soil after scattering it evenly on the ground about the plant. If larger, give more of this food. I feel sure that it is from lack of food. Those of you having nandinas which do not

Plant Plenty of Gladiolus

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

Fine gladiolus bulbs never were sold as cheap as they are this season, and there is no excuse why every garden should not have a plentiful supply. They offer the finest and at the same time, the cheapest cut flower supply procurable. The gladiolus is pre-eminently a flower for cutting and it has high garden value for furnishing color at a season when other plants are flagging. When the earlier ones are fading and the later ones are not yet at their best, the gladiolus comes along with its spikes of bloom.

A very practical method of growing the bulbs for cutting, is as a follow crop to the vegetables of early spring, such as radishes and spinach and early lettuce. The bulbs may be planted in rows a few inches apart and cultivated like vegetables for the sole purpose of cutting.

In the garden they should be planted in groups of not less than six of a kind for effect. The larger the group the finer color effect, but the best effect is to be gained in planting this group to a single color such as a good red, a fine pink, a white, yellow or purple.

The exception comes in the primulin class in pastel shades, which so harmonize with each other that they are fine in mixed plantings, the prevailing hues being yellows and salmons. Plant gladiolus every two weeks up to July for a continuous crop. Give them soil and much the same culture you would for first-class onions and you will have first-class spikes.

You can tuck gladiolus bulbs into any small vacant spot in the border that appears. The spike of leaves occupies little room and will be all the finer for the protection of other foliage about its roots. Buy gladiolus by the hundred this year, while prices are within reach of the humblest pocketbook. You will have a supply for years to come.

The gladiolus, so named from the Latin gladius, meaning sword, has long been a favorite in many gardens. During the time of the grandmothers' garden they were very popular, commonly called at that time sword lilies. There has been a very slow, but a very steady growth in popularity during a number of years.

Most of the varieties now used in gardens are directly related to those wild gladiolus first brought from Africa, although some few are direct descendants of the Asiatic gladiolus.

The gladiolus is an almost ideal flower for the amateur's garden for success is practically assured, almost every bulb will grow and bloom while diseases and insects are almost unknown to this fine flower. The only troublesome disease that the gladiolus has is rot while in storage. This may be prevented by curing properly.

Occasionally a few aster beetles will puncture a few of the leaves, but the insects soon leave the gladiolus for better food. The various sorts of mildew, scale, black spot, and other similar diseases are almost unknown to the gladiolus grower.

Occasionally the gladiolus may be seen in some gardens filling entirely different purposes, admirably, too. Last summer one of the most charming groups of gladiolus that it was our pleasure to see were used against a wall exactly as the hollyhocks are so often used. In that particular spot the soil was unusually rich and the plants were growing about shoulder high. Since the foliage fits in so well with rock gardens they make a most excellent subject for the rock garden.

The ideal place for these stately flowers is in the mixed border--particularly the perennial border as they flower at a time that very few perennials are in bloom. In almost every situation that we have seen German iris used our opinion is that gladiolus would be a welcome diversion.

Culture.

The placing of the bulb in the ground is very important in the case of the gladiolus because of its character of growth. The roots do not extend far from the base of the plant while comparatively speaking the flower is very tall. For this reason be sure and plant the bulbs about six inches deep. This will keep the flowers from being broken down during heavy late summer rains.

Almost any good garden soil will grow gladiolus successfully. They prefer a rich, loamy soil but will grow well under the most adverse circumstances. The little plant grows an enormous flower and therefore, will need several good meals during the growing season. For this purpose any good garden fertilizer such as is recommended commonly for corn or potatoes seems to give best results.

One of the largest growers of gladiolus in this section of the country, uses a commercial fertilizer which analyzes 10-6-4. This should be worked into the soil thoroughly at each application, so that there will be no danger of burning the bulb.

Question: Some dogwoods which are dying by degrees have a small white worm under the bark of the trees. What do they do?

Answer: Why didn't you choose something easier to grow? This sounds like the dogwood bark borer, which works on the cambium of the older bark, often causing the death of the plant. Remove any outer dead bark containing larvae before moths appear in May or June. It is impossible to do any good by spraying since the borer is always covered up inside. Feed your trees well, since the better the general condition of the tree, the less the injury.

Question: The buds on my roses will turn brown and dry up without opening. With what shall I spray them?

Answer: I am afraid that they are infested with thrips. These little pests are so small that it is hard to even see them. They are inside the rose bud. Take one off and crack it open. Look quickly to see these little mites running for cover. If you do have thrip, keep all dead blossoms cut and burned. Also spray with Black Leaf Forty or keep dusted with tobacco dust. Never let a dead rose fall on the ground. Some varieties are worse about falling than others; sometimes it is wise to discard these delicate ones and plant other varieties in their place.

"Mrs. Frances King" Gladiolus.

To be on the safe side bone meal will give excellent results.

If the bulbs are being planted for cut flowers in rows they may be planted as close as six inches, while we have seen them planted as closely as four inches. When planting them so closely be sure and use plenty of plant food--either manure or commercial fertilizer.

There is one flower society that has been of considerable service to every person that ever pronounced the word gladiolus. By the way, the American Gladiolus Society boasts of a membership approximating 4,000 members at the present time. Quite a testimonial to the beautiful flower. The society is interested that the proper pronunciation of the much-disputed word should be gladiolus, both singular and plural. Praise be that there is a proper way to pronounce this word.

And now for a list of the standard varieties that have been tried in Atlanta for several years and which should give us excellent results this year. Among the better pinks are: W. H. Phipps, Mrs. P. W. Sisson, Longfellow, Crinkles and Marshall Foch. For the deeper shades of lavender and purple: Anna Eberius, Marmora, purple glory, red glory and Charles Dickens. For white we suggest: Marie Kunder and carmine silver. After all, any color is pretty when it is red, and for a red we suggest Dr. P. E. Bennett, Dr. F. E. Bennett and Dr. F. E. Bennett. Now, if you insist upon having a red color other than Dr. F. E. Bennett, we suggest red glory, scarlet princeps and scarlet wonder.

WHAT TO PLANT IN MARCH.

MULCHING: This is the last chance for giving the rose and perennial bed a thorough mulching with peat moss and sheep manure. This mulch will hold moisture in the beds throughout the spring and summer and is of vital importance. A mixture of sheep manure, peat moss and woods earth is best.

FERTILIZING: A fairly heavy application of bone meal or sheep manure should be broadcast over the lawn, as well as around the shrubbery, perennials and roses. Use raw bone meal for bulbs and perennials.

PRUNING: March is the best month for pruning all kinds of bush roses. Eradicate on the heavy side of pruning rather than on the light side. Most varieties of roses can be pruned from 8 to 12 inches from the ground. They should be given a thorough spraying with Bordeaux or Massey dust directly after this pruning.

SPRAYING: Now is the time for the last dormant spraying of fruit trees.

"MILLION DOLLAR" LIBERTY BELL—Modeled after the Liberty Bell in Philadelphia, a "million dollar" bell was produced in Tokyo, Japan, out of materials including 11,600 pearls, 366 diamonds, and 26.5 pounds of pure silver. The bell will be exhibited at the New York World's Fair.

HONEYMOONERS—Gene Markey and his bride, the former Hedy Lamarr, brunet beauty of the films, photographed following their recent marriage. Miss Lamarr, most publicized glamour girl in Hollywood, previously was divorced from Fritz Mandl, Austrian millionaire.

(Right)
HARDLY A DOG'S LIFE—James C. Alvord, retired college professor, who died recently, willed his home in Tampa, Fla., to Nino, his spitz dog. The dog is shown in front of the home, which is valued at $15,000.

MIGHTY MITE accused of beating husband. Although he stands 6 feet, 7 inches in his stocking feet, Edwin Nelson's height didn't mean a thing to Dolores, his 5-foot, 2-inch wife. Nelson told a judge in Chicago that she lambasted him all over the place the second night of their marriage and chased him out of the house with a rolling pin.

ESCAPES DEATH—When the auto brakes failed to hold, Brewster Jacobie, of Cleveland, crashed through a set of railroad gates and rammed into the side of an engine tender.

This strange sight of fruit trees blossoming close to snow-capped mountains is a characteristic phenomenon of Norway. The gulf stream brings a warm spring and summer to Norway, and while skiers are still gliding down the mountain slopes, fruit trees are blooming on the banks of the fjords below.

CAPTURED

TARZAN AND LINDA WERE TRAPPED BY THE HOSTILE APES, NOR COULD TARZAN PERCEIVE ANY MEANS OF ESCAPE.

BRANCHES OVERHUNG THE POOL, BUT EVEN THE MIGHTY JUNGLE LORD COULD NOT SPRING FROM THE WATER.

SO, WITH THE TERRIFIED LINDA, HE SUBMITTED TO THE ENEMY, WHO TOOK THEM TO THE SITE OF THE DUM-DUM.

HERE, FOR AGES, THIS TRIBE HAD OBSERVED THE HIDEOUS RITES WHICH ENDED IN THE DEATH OF CAPTIVES.

TARZAN COULD HAVE BROKEN AWAY FROM HIS CAPTORS, BUT HE WOULD NOT ESCAPE WITHOUT THE GIRL.

SOON NIGHT FELL. THE MOON ROSE. LINDA WAS THROWN TO THE GROUND. SHE WOULD BE THE FIRST TO DIE.

THE EARTHDUM BOOMED ITS WEIRD PRELUDE TO DEATH. THE APES WERE SEIZED WITH FRENZY.

THIS WAS THE MOMENT TARZAN WAS AWAITING, WHEN THE DULL MINDS OF HIS CAPTORS WOULD BE CONFUSED.

"I AM TARZAN, KING AMONG APES," HE ROARED. "YOU CANNOT KILL TARZAN! YOU CANNOT KILL TARZAN'S SHE!"

THE APES WERE BEWILDERED BY THE MAN-THING WHO SPOKE THEIR LANGUAGE. BUT ONE LUMBERED FORWARD.

JANE ARDEN

by Monte Barrett and E. Ross

BECAUSE ONE OF THE BRIDESMAIDS WAS SUDDENLY STRICKEN ILL, JANE WAS URGED TO TAKE HER PLACE SO THE WEDDING PLANS OF THE FABULOUSLY RICH CORINNE FAIRLY WOULD NOT BE SPOILED —

JANE SURELY CRASHED THIS PARTY IN A BIG WAY—WAIT TILL THE BOYS AT THE OFFICE SEE THIS SHOT!

WELL, THAT'S OVER—AND WHAT A BREAK FOR ME—I CERTAINLY GOT A CLOSEUP VIEW OF THE WHOLE BUSINESS!

THE THIRD BRIDESMAID—THERE SHE IS—WHEN I NEVER EXPECTED FIFTY MILLION DOLLARS TO BE WRAPPED IN SUCH A BEAUTIFUL PACKAGE!

AH, LOVELY LADY, IF NO ONE WILL INTRODUCE ME, I MUST DO IT MYSELF—

I SAW YOU DURING THE WEDDING—YOU ARE COUNT IVAN, THE BRIDEGROOM'S BROTHER!

AND YOU—YOU ARE THE LOVELIEST FLOWER I EVER SAW—WHAT DO NAMES MATTER AT A TIME LIKE THIS?

ALL RIGHT—JUST CALL ME CINDERELLA—I'M ABOUT TO SHED MY FINERY AND VANISH INTO THE BUSINESS WORLD.

BUSINESS WORLD? HOW QUEER THESE AMERICANS ARE—

AND SHE ONE OF THE RICHEST GIRLS IN THE WORLD!

NO MATTER WHAT HIS BROTHER IS LIKE, IVAN ISN'T A FORTUNE HUNTER!

COUNT IVAN IS NICE—

BUT YOU CAN'T GO NOW—THE PARTY HAS JUST STARTED!

I TOLD YOU I HAD TO GET BACK TO MY JOB!

ALL RIGHT, IF YOU GO, I GO!

WITHOUT EVEN GETTING YOUR HAT?

IF YOU REALLY ARE CINDERELLA, I CAN'T LET YOU VANISH WITHOUT LEAVING ME A SLIPPER TO FIND YOU WITH—

I DON'T GO IN FOR GLASS SLIPPERS—MY JOB CALLS FOR TOO MUCH WALKING!

H'M—CAGEY—AFRAID I'M AFTER HER MONEY AND TRYING TO THROW ME OFF THE TRACK!

IF HIS BROTHER IS ANYTHING LIKE THIS, NO WONDER CORINNE FAIRLY MARRIED HIM!

WHUT AIR YE UP TO, HENHUSKY?

I'M HANGING THIS MIRROR—I'M TIRED OF WAITING FOR YOU TO DO IT!

TARNATION! YE TRICKED ME, INTER A-LOOKIN' IN IT WHEN YE WAR A-LOOKIN' TOO!

WELL, WHAT'S WRONG WITH LOOKING IN A MIRROR?

LENA, HOW OLD AIR YE?

I'M A SIGHT YOUNGERN YOU IF YOU MUST KNOW!

SHO' NUFF! I WAR BORNED THE YAR O' THE BIG WIND—I BE FOTY FO' COME NEXT WHORTLEBERRY SEASON—

DAVE, THAT WAS A TERRIFIC GAME. DON'T YOUR NERVES FEEL STRAINED AND JITTERY?

NOT MINE—I TAKE CARE OF MY NERVES!

I COULDN'T PLAY GOALIE IF I LET MY NERVES GET JITTERY. WHEN THAT PUCK COMES FLYING AT LIGHTNING SPEED, MY NERVES MUST BE SURE, STEADY. SO, BEFORE AND AFTER PRACTICE AND GAMES, I EASE UP ON MY NERVES... I LET UP—LIGHT UP CAMELS. CAMELS ARE REAL SOOTHING.

BEFORE YOUR NERVES GET YOU DOWN—

HAVE you ever noticed how a dog stops and rests instinctively as soon as he is tired? Although the dog's nervous system is complex, sensitive like your own, when he feels the urge to rest, he does so at once! We humans are apt to keep driving on at a task, piling up nerve strain. LANDING AT THE POINT WHERE THE BOAT CONTAINING SANJAK, APRIL AND THE GOLD MUST LEAVE THE SMALL STREAM ON WHICH THE PLANE LANDED, TERRY AND PAT TIE UP THE PILOT AND PREPARE TO CUT OFF ALL ESCAPE

Reg. U. S. Pat. Off. Copyright 1939

SANJAK'S PROBABLY TRYING TO GET THAT GOLD OUT OF THE COUNTRY - SO SHE'LL HAVE TO GO DOWN THIS LARGER RIVER THAT FLOWS TO THE SEA!

YEAH - THE HEAD FISHERMAN HERE SPEAKS A LITTLE ENGLISH - HE SAID A MOTOR BOAT WENT UP THIS RIVER A FEW DAYS AGO!

THESE FISH NETS WE GOT FROM THE NATIVES WILL STRETCH ACROSS THE STREAM JUST BELOW THE SURFACE AND FOUL THE PROPELLER!

AND WE'LL LIE LOW ON AN ANCHORED FISHING BOAT TO NAB 'EM, EH?

GEE, PAT - THERE'S BEEN SO LITTLE TIME TO THINK... BUT TO REALIZE THIS SANJAK WAS DISGUISED AS MADAME SUD - AND I LEFT APRIL IN HER CARE...

DON'T FEEL GUILTY, TERRY! SHE FOOLED US ALL...

IT'S OBVIOUS NOW THAT SHE KNEW OF THE BARON'S PLAN - ENGINEERED US INTO THINKING HE HAD ABDUCTED KANE, AND SO ON - SO SHE COULD USE APRIL AS A SHIELD AND CASH IN ON THE CONFUSION!

SHE MUST HAVE WRITTEN THE NOTES THAT LURED ALL OF US TO THE OLD SHRINE!

THE NIGHT DRAGS ON... TERRY AND PAT TAKE TURNS WATCHING THE QUIET RIVER...

'ALMOST MORNING, PAT!

COUPLE OF NATIVE CRAFT AND ONE ODD LOOKING JUNK ABOUT AN HOUR AGO!

NO SOUND OF A MOTOR, EH? FUNNY! - HEY, WHO'S THAT?

COME 'LONG BLING PAPER FOR WHITE MANS!

FOR WHITE MAN?... HOW THE DEVIL DID ANYONE KNOW WE WERE HERE?

It was rather a good idea - but men are so easily fooled. I had little trouble disguising my launch as a junk, covering the propeller, and drifting over your net in the darkness. Really, it is a waste of time. Why do you not go back to the United States and pursue gangsters?
